Case Notes

Requirement for Arrangement of Transportation for Delinquent Youth by District Court Held Constitutional — Counties Required to Pay Transportation Costs Only Within State — Unfunded Mandate Unaddressed: After the District Youth Court found that J.A. was a delinquent youth, the court committed J.A. to the custody of the Department of Corrections (DOC) for placement at a treatment center in Texas and ordered the DOC to pay the costs of transporting J.A. to that center. When the DOC refused to pay those costs, Lake County paid the costs but later challenged the constitutionality of this section as being a violation of the doctrine of the separation of powers and, in addition, argued that this section is an unfunded mandate in violation of 1-2-116 and that 52-5-101 and this section require Lake County to pay for transportation costs only within Montana. The Supreme Court held that the requirement of this section that the District Court "arrange the transportation" of a committed youth does not encroach on judicial authority, require the judiciary to exercise executive power, or interfere with internal judicial operations, but, in the context of the statutes, is only an administrative detail. The Supreme Court also held that it was logical to assume that the DOC, being a Montana state agency, would receive custody only within Montana and not in some other state. The Supreme Court pointed out that 52-5-101 names only in-state institutions for the commitment of youth and that neither that statute nor this section makes any mention of out-of-state facilities and, for those reasons, ruled that the DOC must pay for transportation costs of a committed youth outside of the State of Montana. Because the Supreme Court considered its holding "dispositive", it declined to address the issue of whether this section is an unfunded mandate in violation of 1-2-116. (See 2001 amendment.) DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1997 GENERAL REVISION

Adoption Agencies Exclusive: The legislative intent is obvious from the plain meaning of the words used in 53-4-401 (renumbered 52-2-401, now repealed), et seq., to give licensed adoption agencies the exclusive function of placing children for adoption. If a medical doctor is going to place children for adoption, he is acting as an adoption agency and must have a license. Dept. of Social & Rehabilitation Services v. Angel, 176 M 293, 577 P2d 1223 (1978).

Attorney General's Opinions

Assistance by Physicians and Attorneys in Procuring Adoptions Prohibited: While physicians and attorneys may perform traditional functions relevant to an adoption proceeding, no person, including a physician or an attorney, may assist in procuring or selecting an adoptive home for a minor child, even if requested by the child's natural parents, unless licensed as a child-placing agency under 52-2-402 (now repealed). 42 A.G. Op. 9 (1987).

Attorneys as "Adoption Agencies": A private attorney, not licensed as an adoption agency, may not accept a relinquishment of custody for a child and then place or attempt to place a child for adoption. 36 A.G. Op. 96 (1976).

St. Welfare Bd. v. Lutheran Social Serv. of Mont., 156 M 381, 480 P2d 181 (1971).

Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is not empowered under 52-2-404 (now repealed) to deprive indigent expectant mothers of public assistance for medical, hospital, and foster home expenses merely because they apply to private rather than public adoption agencies for counseling and adoptive services. St. Welfare Bd. v. Lutheran Social Serv. of Mont., 156 M 381, 480 P2d 181 (1971).

Case Notes

Escape From Prerelease Center — Felony Escape: Chandler argued that he could not be charged with felony escape for leaving a prerelease center because he was not subject to official detention while at the center. The Supreme Court ruled that a prerelease center is a community corrections facility or program as listed in the felony escape statute and therefore escape from the center violated the plain language of the law and was punishable as a felony. Case Notes

Special Relationship of Custody or Control by Prerelease Center — Responsibility for Public Safety Within Zone of Risk — Foreseeability: A prerelease center entered into a contract with the Department of Corrections to supervise residents like Gardipee, who walked away from the center and subsequently injured Lopez. The District Court granted summary judgment for the center on grounds that the attack on Lopez was unforeseeable. Generally, there is no duty to protect others against harm by third persons, but in this case, the contract created a special relationship of custody or control, in turn creating a special responsibility upon the center to protect those members of the public who would be placed within the foreseeable zone of risk created by negligent supervision of a prerelease resident. As a matter of law, the center owed a duty of reasonable care to all persons present within the zone of danger created by the center's failure to exercise reasonable care in supervising Gardipee. Here, reasonable minds could differ as to whether it was reasonably foreseeable by the center that a failure to supervise Gardipee could pose an unreasonable risk of harm to Lopez in particular. There was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the center knew or should have known that there was enmity between Gardipee and Lopez and a possibility of violence if Gardipee escaped, as well as whether Gardipee's attack was a superseding cause of the harm to Lopez. Both questions were suitable for resolution by a trier of fact, precluding summary judgment. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for a trial on the merits. Lopez v. Great Falls Pre-Release Serv., Inc., 1999 MT 199, 295 M 416, 986 P2d 1081, 56 St. Rep. 771 (1999).

Prison's Custody Classification as Alleged Violation of Plea Bargaining Agreement — Withdrawal of Plea Denied: Under a plea bargain agreement, defendant was sentenced to 10 years as a nondangerous offender without parole. Upon entering prison, he was held in close custody for 24 months under prison rules calling for dangerous offenders and those sentenced without parole to serve 24 months in close custody prior to being considered for transfer to lower, more amenable custody levels. The prosecution, defense counsel, defendant, and judge were all unaware of those rules. Defendant was not entitled to withdraw his plea on the ground he was kept in close custody for 24 months in violation of his plea agreement. There was no violation of the agreement, nor was he entitled to the additional good time credits he would have received had he not been held so long in close custody. Prison officials take many factors into account in making custody reclassifications, and there was no guarantee he would have been held in close custody only for the time he claimed he should have been upon entry to the prison. St. v. Mesler, 210 M 92, 682 P2d 714, 41 St. Rep. 939 (1984).

Attorney General's Opinions

Establishment of Residential Methamphetamine Treatment Programs — Privatization Plan Process Compliance Not Required: When the Department of Corrections contracts with Montana private, nonprofit corporations to establish residential methamphetamine treatment programs pursuant to this section, the Department need not undergo the privatization plan process outlined in Title 2, ch. 8, part 3. 51 A.G. Op. 13 (2006).

State Financial Responsibility for Sentenced Inmate Upon Oral Pronouncement of Sentence: A sentencing hearing represents the only common date by which the criminal justice system can definitely measure when legal and financial responsibility for an inmate shifts from a county to the state. Oral pronouncement of sentence from the bench in the presence of a defendant constitutes final judgment (see St. v. Lane, 1998 MT 76, 288 M 286, 957 P2d 9 (1998)). Once sentenced, an inmate is considered to be in the legal custody of the Department of Corrections, even though a local or regional detention center may serve as a place of temporary detention until the inmate can be placed by the Department. Therefore, upon oral pronouncement of sentence that transfers legal custody of an inmate to the Department, the financial responsibility for the inmate transfers to the Department as well. 49 A.G. Op. 13 (2001).

Medical Malpractice — Physicians Treating Inmates Not Department Employees — Not Immune From Suit: A doctor was an independent contractor and thus not entitled to immunity from suit as a state employee even though he: (1) was the only doctor employed by the state to care for state prison inmates; (2) treated inmates in facilities and with medical support services provided by the state; (3) was paid a salary; and (4) participated in the state retirement system. Therefore, his associate, who treated the inmate twice, was likewise not immune from suit. Kyriss v. St., 218 M 162, 707 P2d 5, 42 St. Rep. 1487 (1985).

Sovereign Immunity: State prison which participated in forest firefighting effort by lending a bulldozer, a guard, and two prisoners to operate the bulldozer, all of whom were under the direction of the U.S. Forest Service during the fighting of the fire, was immune under doctrine of sovereign immunity from suit for injuries to person who, several days after fire had been extinguished, was injured when wind caused an uprooted tree which had been leaning against another tree to fall on him; since prison was attempting to protect its own land adjacent to the fire area, it was engaged in a governmental rather than a proprietary function. Kish v. Mont. St. Prison, 161 M 297, 505 P2d 891 (1973), distinguished in Kyriss v. St., 218 M 162, 707 P2d 5, 42 St. Rep. 1487 (1985).

Discretionary Authority of Warden of State Prison: Actions of Warden of state prison in denying inmate access to money deposited in his spending account would not be interfered with in light of wide discretionary powers granted Warden and in absence of clear showing that Warden abused discretion. CHAPTER 2
ADMINISTRATION OF PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

Chapter Case Notes

County — Definite Obligations to Poor: Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now, with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53) did not place sole duty of caring for county poor on State Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services); while the state and federal governments now cooperate with the county in the matter, counties still have definite obligations to the poor and needy and must bear their proportionate share of social relief. State ex rel. Broadwater County v. Potter, 107 M 284, 84 P2d 796 (1938).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

OPINIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Determination of Staffing Patterns of County Public Assistance Offices: Both the Department of Public Health and Human Services and county welfare boards have an interest in staffing patterns for county public assistance offices, and when possible, staffing patterns should be determined through a process of consultation and negotiation between the Department and the county welfare board. However, if an agreement cannot be reached through that process, the Department has the final authority for determining staffing patterns for the county public welfare office in a nonassumed county. (See 2001 amendments eliminating county welfare boards.) 48 A.G. Op. 18 (2000).

Payment of Proportionate Share of Administrative Costs by Nonassumed Counties — Action to Recover Disputed Claims: Under 53-2-322 (now repealed), a nonassumed county is required to pay its proportionate share of administrative costs for protective services, including rent, adequate equipment, and supplies. The responsibility to pay a proportionate share, other than salaries, travel expenses, and indirect employee costs, is not capped at the amount paid in fiscal year 1987. An action to recover a disputed claim filed more than 6 months after denial of the claim is barred by the statute of limitations in 27-2-209. 45 A.G. Op. 23 (1994).

Residential Homestead Property — Lien for Welfare Payments Not Allowed: A county may not execute on a lien for welfare payments against residential property owned by welfare recipients when there has been a homestead declaration recorded on the property. 42 A.G. Op. 112 (1988).

Distribution of Corporate License Fees: Corporate license fees received between July 1, 1983, and June 30, 1984, under 15-31-702 (now repealed), are properly distributed pursuant to tax levies adopted by the Board of County Commissioners for fiscal year 1984, including any levy promulgated pursuant to 53-2-813 (now repealed). 41 A.G. Op. 26 (1985).

Distribution of Motor Vehicle Fees: Motor vehicle fees subject to distribution under 61-3-509 (see 2001 amendment) are properly allocated in the same manner as personal property taxes. Consequently, for fiscal year 1984 the state special revenue fund is entitled to receive, under 53-2-813 (now repealed), the appropriate proportional share of such money collected between January 1, 1984, and December 31, 1984, from counties whose public assistance programs and protective services were assumed on July 1, 1983. 41 A.G. Op. 26 (1985).

Payment Into State Special Revenue Fund — When Proper: State aid received pursuant to 61-3-536 (repealed, 1987) during March 1984 is, as to any county whose public assistance programs and protective services were assumed on July 1, 1983, by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), properly paid into the state special revenue fund under 53-2-813 (now repealed) in such amount as determined by fiscal year 1984 mill levies. 41 A.G. Op. 26 (1985).

Extent of State Assumption: After state assumption pursuant to 53-2-811 (now repealed), the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is not responsible for the expenses associated with transfer of seriously mentally ill patients involuntarily committed to the Montana State Hospital. The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is not responsible by virtue of state assumption for those duties that do not statutorily attach to county welfare departments. The Legislature has allocated the costs of involuntary commitment proceedings to the county of residence, and the county welfare departments have no statutorily mandated involvement in those proceedings. 40 A.G. Op. 73 (1984).

Clerk and Recorder's Report — Basis for Determining Levy: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) should rely upon the tax levies presented in the County Clerk and Recorder's report that is provided pursuant to 7-6-2322 (now repealed) for determining the amount levied by the county for purposes of its county poor fund during fiscal year 1982. 40 A.G. Op. 18 (1983).

Mill Levy Proceeds to Include Revenue From All Normal Sources: The proceeds of the 12-mill levy (see 1993 amendment) provided for in 53-2-813 (now repealed) should include all revenue from any source that is normally allocated among county funds in the proportion a fund bears to the total mill levies of the county. 40 A.G. Op. 18 (1983).

WHEREAS, the section 1115 waiver is intended to foster more appropriate use of state general fund money and federal money in funding state-administered health care and related services; and

WHEREAS, the section 1115 waiver would allow for the expansion of coverage for children covered under Title XXI of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. 1397aa, et seq., state children's health insurance program (CHIP), for the expansion of Medicaid coverage for children who cannot be covered through CHIP because of limits on enrollment, for the implementation of new programs of assistance to a significant number of persons in Montana who are chronically unable to obtain health insurance coverage, and for improvements in the funding for and delivery of certain health care services, such as prescription drugs and mental health services to specific populations."

At least three alternative plans must be prepared for presentation to the 54th legislature. One alternative must be administered primarily by each county, one alternative must be administered primarily by the state, and one alternative must provide for multicounty administration. Each plan must include an analysis of alternative financing methods, including a statewide mill levy.

(2) The department director shall appoint and consult with an advisory committee of not more than 12 persons in developing the plans. The committee should include representatives of the legislature, the low-income coalition, the human resource development councils, the Montana united Indian alliance, other state departments, county commissioners, and county welfare directors. The committee shall serve without pay.

(3) In preparing the recommendations, the department shall analyze the effect on persons previously receiving general assistance and on persons who would have received general assistance prior to the approval of [this act] [Ch. 561, L. 1993]. The department shall analyze methods of providing assistance to persons who do not qualify for federal assistance programs. The department shall analyze the effectiveness of different general relief programs in the various counties." Section 31, Ch. 561, L. 1993, effective April 28, 1993.

1987 Amendment: At beginning of (1)(a), after "supervise", deleted "all forms of" and after "assistance" deleted "child protection, and child welfare"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "(b) administer or supervise all child welfare activities, including:

(i) importation and exportation of children;

(ii) licensing of all children's foster family homes, group homes, child-care agencies and child-placing agencies;

(iii) the care of dependent and neglected children in substitute care placement and children who are free for adoption;

(iv) the maintenance of supplemental day care for children; and

(v) all state and federal funds allocated to the department for youth foster homes, youth group homes, child-care agencies, and state programs for youth in need of care, youth in need of supervision, and delinquent youth".

1983 Amendment: Inserted (1)(b)(v) requiring the Department to administer state and federal funds for youth foster homes, group homes, child-care agencies, and state programs for youth in need of care and supervision and delinquent youth.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "licensing of all children's foster family homes, group homes, child-care agencies, and child-placing agencies" for "licensing and supervising of private and local child-caring agencies" in (1)(b)(ii); substituted (1)(b)(iii) requiring Department supervision of licensing of all children's foster family homes, group homes, child-care agencies, and child-placing agencies for former (1)(b)(iii) that read: "(iii) the care of dependent, neglected, and delinquent children in foster family homes, especially children placed for adoption or those of illegitimate birth"; and inserted (1)(b)(iv) requiring Department maintenance of supplemental day care.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 199, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in that it delegates authority to adopt rules in sections 1 through 4.

1. Under present law, SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] has express rulemaking authority to carry out most of its duties under Title 53. The Department's present authority includes the power to adopt rules to implement and carry out the following: child welfare services; Aid to Dependent Children [now FAIM financial assistance] programs; subsidized adoption; protective services for adults; Medical Assistance programs; sheltered workshop programs; community based services; community homes and protective services for the developmentally disabled; and vocational rehabilitation programs.

2. While there are duties for which SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] has express rulemaking authority, there also are duties for which the Department's rulemaking authority could only be implied. The Montana Administrative Procedure Act, Section 2-4-102(11)(a), MCA, requires that substantive rules be adopted under express authority in order to be valid. Under an agreement with the Administrative Code Committee [now appropriate administrative rule review committee], SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] introduced legislation to eliminate this gap in the Department's express authority. This bill gives SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] express rulemaking authority to adopt rules to comply with federal law; to carry out its responsibilities for public welfare; and to administer vocational rehabilitation for the blind.

3. The express authority given to SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] under this bill will allow the Department to adopt rules which cover the following areas: eligibility requirements for various services; scope of services to be offered; specific criteria that providers of services must meet to qualify as providers; how, when, and in what form various types of assistance will be offered; and procedure for applying for and receiving aid. The area of social services is a field which evolves as the needs of the population change. Federal programs and their concomitant regulations are constantly being revised and altered. This legislation allows SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] to adapt the specifics of its social services programs to meet those federal changes but within the confines of state law."

Title 37, ARM Department rules.

Title 37, chapter 70, ARM Low Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP).

Case Notes

Mandate: Mandate was issued by the Supreme Court to compel State Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to forthwith present to the state Board of Examiners written application setting forth the circumstances confronting it with reference to the need for money to carry out the relief program in Silver Bow County and requesting authorization for expenditures to meet the relief requirements in Silver Bow County, Montana. St. v. Fouse, 137 M 483, 353 P2d 755 (1960).

Disbursement of Funds — Supervision: An application for a Writ of Injunction lies to prevent the delivery of a check for $150,000 made in favor of the United States in behalf of the Works Progress Administration by the State Board of Public Welfare (the relevant functions of which were transferred to the Department of Public Health and Human Services) in payment of materials and supplies to be used in construction of public works sponsored by the state, since it is the duty of the Board to supervise the expenditure of state funds appropriated for its use. State ex rel. Browning v. Brandjord, 106 M 395, 81 P2d 677 (1938).

Attorney General's Opinions

County Welfare Department Personnel as State Employees — Applicable Grievance Procedure: County welfare department employees are state employees for purposes of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, entitlement to employee benefits, and participation in employee-related programs. If county welfare department personnel are involuntarily terminated from employment and wish to pursue a grievance, they must follow the grievance procedure established by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) unless the Department and the county have agreed upon an alternative process. (See 2001 amendment.) 45 A.G. Op. 16 (1993).

Child Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Proceedings — Duty of County Attorney: It is the duty of the County Attorney to represent the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) in child abuse, neglect, and dependency proceedings brought under Title 41, ch. 3. 42 A.G. Op. 45 (1987).

Exclusive Tribal Jurisdiction of Indian Children — No Departmental Jurisdiction: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) has no jurisdiction to provide child protection services to Indian children who are subject to exclusive tribal jurisdiction under the Indian Child Welfare Act, 25 U.S.C. 1901, et seq., or to children residing on the reservation and eligible for tribal membership. The scope of the Department's responsibility is unaffected by the child's eligibility, or lack thereof, for participation in Bureau of Indian Affairs programs, and the Department is not obligated to provide child protective services and benefits to the extent the federal program offers comparable assistance. 41 A.G. Op. 76 (1986).

Foster Care or Adoption Placement of Indian Children — No Department Payments Under Social Security Act: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) may not make payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 670 through 676) to Indian children whose foster care or adoption placement is subject to exclusive tribal jurisdiction under the Indian Child Welfare Act (25 U.S.C. 1901, et seq.). 41 A.G. Op. 76 (1986).

Licensure of Foster Care Homes on Indian Reservations: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) has the authority to license foster care homes maintained by nontribal members on Indian reservations. The Department has authority to license foster care homes operated by tribal members located on Indian reservations only if the tribe does not engage in such licensing activity. 41 A.G. Op. 76 (1986).

Transfer of Child Custody Proceeding to Tribal Jurisdiction — No Continuance of State Child Protection Services: Once a child custody proceeding has been transferred from state District Court to tribal jurisdiction under sec. 101(b) of the Indian Child Welfare Act (25 U.S.C. 1911(b)), the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) may not continue to provide child protection services or benefits to the Indian child. 41 A.G. Op. 76 (1986).

Retroactive Foster Care Payments: In the absence of a determination that foster care assistance was improperly denied, neither a County Department of Public Welfare nor the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is required to retroactively pay foster care costs on behalf of a relinquished child. Where there is a determination made that foster care assistance was improperly denied, only the foster home involved is entitled to foster care payments. 38 A.G. Op. 11 (1979).

Public and Private Placement Agencies: County Departments of Public Welfare may not deny foster care payments solely because the child receiving foster care has been relinquished to a private rather than public placement agency. If eligibility is established, County Departments of Public Welfare are required to approve foster care payments to a foster home on behalf of a child who has been relinquished to a private placement agency. 38 A.G. Op. 11 (1979).

County Power — "4-C's": Counties, jointly with the state Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), may contract with local "4-C's" projects to provide coordination and support of child abuse prevention and treatment services. 37 A.G. Op. 105 (1978).

Federal Funds: The State Department of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) has the power to participate in programs initiated pursuant to section 204 of Public Law 90-248, cited as the "Social Security Amendments of 1967". 32 A.G. Op. 14 (1968).

(2) have examinations held from time to time throughout the state to establish and furnish to county departments lists, in order of merit, of persons eligible for appointment;

(3) develop policies relating to educational leave of employees and to staff development needs;

If possible, county assistance personnel shall be residents of the county in which they work"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Attorney General's Opinions

Determination of Staffing Patterns of County Public Assistance Offices: Both the Department of Public Health and Human Services and county welfare boards have an interest in staffing patterns for county public assistance offices, and when possible, staffing patterns should be determined through a process of consultation and negotiation between the Department and the county welfare board. However, if an agreement cannot be reached through that process, the Department has the final authority for determining staffing patterns for the county public welfare office in a nonassumed county. (See 2001 amendments eliminating county welfare boards.) 48 A.G. Op. 18 (2000).

County Welfare Department Personnel as State Employees — Applicable Grievance Procedure: County welfare department employees are state employees for purposes of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, entitlement to employee benefits, and participation in employee-related programs. If county welfare department personnel are involuntarily terminated from employment and wish to pursue a grievance, they must follow the grievance procedure established by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) unless the Department and the county have agreed upon an alternative process. 2001 Amendment — Coordination Void: Chapter 571 in (1) substituted text regarding payment of administrative fee to reimburse department for former (1) that read: "(1) require the county to bear the proportion of the total of local public assistance as is fixed by law relating to the assistance". Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Alternative Plans: Section 31, Ch. 561, L. 1993, provided: "(1) The department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] shall develop alternative structures for the administration of public assistance programs. Attorney General's Opinions

Reimbursement by County Required for Computerization Expenses Related to Public Assistance: State law uniformly requires that counties reimburse the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) for the legitimate costs of administration of county public assistance programs, including expenses associated with the computerization of public assistance eligibility determinations. Local Offices of Public Assistance

Part Case Notes

CASES OF HISTORICAL INTEREST

Liability for Expenses: Where an indigent nonresident is injured within county and requires immediate medical and surgical attention and hospitalization and is removed to another county to obtain such treatment, the county in which the injury occurred is liable. Musselshell County v. Petroleum County, 118 M 1, 161 P2d 905 (1945).

Power to Maintain County Reemployment Offices: The power of Boards of County Commissioners to establish county reemployment offices, while not in express terms, flows from powers expressly conferred with relation to the care of the poor, such as 53-2-321 (now repealed), giving them broad discretionary power to "otherwise provide for the same"; on application for Writ of Supervisory Control to review judgment of District Court in upholding the action of a Board declaring an emergency necessitating appropriation of additional money for its poor fund budget from anticipated revenue, held such authority exists, the cost thereof chargeable against the county poor fund. State ex rel. Barr v. District Court, 108 M 433, 91 P2d 399 (1939).

Compensation Per Diem Payable by County: Extra compensation of County Commissioners acting as ex officio members of County Board of Public Welfare is payable by county (7-4-2107 and 7-4-2108), nothing in this act (Ch. 82, L. 1937, portions of which have been repealed or amended) indicating that payment should be made by state board. State ex rel. Broadwater County v. Potter, 107 M 284, 84 P2d 796 (1938).

Anticipation Warrants Required to Secure Aid: Before a county may secure aid from the State Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) for relief purposes, it must issue warrants in anticipation of the revenues derived from the levy authorized by 53-2-322 (now repealed), in accordance with the budget, and such additional emergency warrants which may be freely converted into cash without discount. State ex rel. Silver Bow County v. Brandjord, 107 M 231, 82 P2d 589 (1938).

Interest on Warrants From Poor Fund Lawful: Payment of interest on registered warrants drawn against the county poor fund is a lawful expenditure from such fund. State ex rel. Silver Bow County v. Brandjord, 107 M 231, 82 P2d 589 (1938).

Where County Budgets So as to Throw Burden on State: If a county, in making a levy authorized by 53-2-322 (now repealed), budgets excessive appropriations so as to cast the whole burden of general relief on the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), the latter may compel such excesses to be transferred to the poor fund for general relief before extending aid to the county. State ex rel. Silver Bow County v. Brandjord, 107 M 231, 82 P2d 589 (1938).

Constitutionality: Legislative control over counties is supreme, except as restricted by the constitution, and while the duty to care for the poor is primarily an obligation of the counties under Art. X, sec. 5, 1889 Mont. Const. (not specifically included in 1972 Montana Constitution), the State may offer cooperation and assistance, and the Legislature has the right to enact provisions, binding upon the counties, as to how they shall care for their poor, even though such action may amount to dictation to them concerning expenditures of their own funds. Not violative also of Art, XII, sec. 4, 1889 Mont. Const. State ex rel. Wilson v. Weir, 106 M 526, 79 P2d 305 (1938).

County Board Rules to Conform to Statute: The rules adopted by a County Board of Public Welfare must conform to and not be inconsistent with the positive provisions of the statutes (now repealed), the power given to the Board in that behalf not authorizing it to change the form of relief prescribed by the Legislature, under the claim that by certain provisions of the Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now, with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53) it is given discretion in choosing the kind or form of relief it may award. State ex rel. Wilson v. Weir, 106 M 526, 79 P2d 305 (1938).

How Exhaustion of Poor Fund Remedied: Exhaustion of the county poor fund out of which County Welfare Board applications for relief must be paid, held no excuse for declining to issue warrants or checks thereon, since in such event a special tax levy may be made unless prohibited by the 1889 Montana Constitution or assistance may be asked from the state welfare fund. State ex rel. Wilson v. Weir, 106 M 526, 79 P2d 305 (1938).

Not Coercion or Duress by Legislature: Requirement of 53-2-322 (now repealed) that County Commissioners make levy for poor fund in order that their county might place itself in line to receive aid from state in caring for poor was not an exercise of coercion or duress on part of Legislature. State ex rel. Wilson v. Weir, 106 M 526, 70 P2d 305 (1938).

Discretion of Commissioners: The policy of the Legislature under Art. X, sec. 5, 1889 Mont. Const. (not specifically included in the 1972 Montana Constitution), has been to impose a wide discretion in the County Commissioners and, in carrying out such policy, their power is not limited to placing the poor in the county poorhouse or to contracting for their maintenance, but they may, if they consider it proper, extend aid in the form of fuel, groceries, clothing, or small doles of money. Jones v. Cooney, 81 M 340, 263 P 429 (1928).

County Authority to Construct Detention Hospital: The Board of County Commissioners did not have the power to erect and maintain at county expense a detention hospital for persons affected with contagious or pestilent diseases. Yegen v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 34 M 79, 85 P 740 (1906).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Determination of Staffing Patterns of County Public Assistance Offices: Both the Department of Public Health and Human Services and county welfare boards have an interest in staffing patterns for county public assistance offices, and when possible, staffing patterns should be determined through a process of consultation and negotiation between the Department and the county welfare board. However, if an agreement cannot be reached through that process, the Department has the final authority for determining staffing patterns for the county public welfare office in a nonassumed county. (See 2001 amendments eliminating county welfare boards.) 48 A.G. Op. 18 (2000).

Payment of Proportionate Share of Administrative Costs by Nonassumed Counties — Action to Recover Disputed Claims: Under 53-2-322 (now repealed), a nonassumed county is required to pay its proportionate share of administrative costs for protective services, including rent, adequate equipment, and supplies. The responsibility to pay a proportionate share, other than salaries, travel expenses, and indirect employee costs, is not capped at the amount paid in fiscal year 1987. An action to recover a disputed claim filed more than 6 months after denial of the claim is barred by the statute of limitations in 27-2-209. 45 A.G. Op. 23 (1994).

Exhaustion of Poor Fund — Maximum Levy to Be Assessed to Trigger Emergency Grant-in-Aid: Before a county that has exhausted its poor fund due to liability for an indigent felon's medical expenses becomes eligible for an emergency grant-in-aid under 53-2-323 (now repealed), it must first assess the maximum poor fund levy of 13.5 mills authorized by 53-2-321 (now repealed) and 53-2-322(1) (now repealed). In light of the adoption of Initiative No. 105, this may be done pursuant to either 15-10-412(8) or (9) (now repealed). 42 A.G. Op. 113 (1988).

Procedures Required in Imposing Additional Levies to Meet Poor Fund Shortfall: Although 15-10-401, 15-10-402, 15-10-411 (now repealed), and 15-10-412 (now repealed) substantially limit the authority of taxing units to increase a property taxpayer's liability over the taxpayer's 1986 obligation, an additional levy increasing property taxes over 1986 levels may be made if either the poor fund liability has been reduced to a judgment against the county or the County Commissioners have passed a resolution pursuant to 15-10-412(9) (now repealed). Passage of such a resolution must be followed by a special or general election in which the issue of increased property tax liability is presented to the voters for authorization. (See 2001 amendment to 53-2-304.) 42 A.G. Op. 113 (1988). See also 42 A.G. Op. 118 (1988).

Application of Money in Poor Fund: Section 53-2-322 (now repealed) and 53-2-323(7) (now repealed) govern the proper use of money in a county's poor fund and must be applied on a case-by-case basis. (See 2001 amendment to 53-2-304.) 41 A.G. Op. 26 (1985).

Poor Fund — Use to Build New Nursing Home: Section 53-2-322(7) (now repealed) permits the use of county poor fund money to build a new nursing home but not to improve an existing nursing home. A county must comply with the provisions of 53-2-322 (now repealed) before expending money from the poor fund to build or improve county facilities, including certification and approval from the Departments of Health and Environmental Sciences and Social and Rehabilitation Services (functions now consolidated into Department of Public Health and Human Services). (See 2001 amendment to 53-2-304.) 40 A.G. Op. 29 (1983). See also 30 A.G. Op. 13, relating to restriction of fund use for building while needed for general relief.

Restrictions — Set-Aside and Transfer of Poor Fund: Title 53, ch. 2, part 3, does not authorize a county to set aside money in the poor fund that will not be available for supporting public assistance activities in the county, as provided in 53-2-322 (now repealed). All money in the poor fund must be used for public assistance activities. However, 7-6-2326 (now repealed) permits the transfer of a poor fund cash balance to another fund at the end of a fiscal year. This may be done only when there is an ending balance in excess of the amount budgeted for the poor fund for the next fiscal year, and only the excess may be transferred. 40 A.G. Op. 29 (1983).

Poor Fund Levy — Counties With Self-Government Powers: For purposes of the state grant-in-aid program, counties with self-government powers are eligible for a grant if they have exhausted all of the 13.5 mill levy authorized by 53-2-321 (now repealed), assuming the county has satisfied all other requirements specified in 53-2-323 (now repealed). 39 A.G. Op. 20 (1981).

Public and Private Placement Agencies: County Departments of Public Welfare may not deny foster care payments solely because the child receiving foster care has been relinquished to a private rather than public placement agency. If eligibility is established, County Departments of Public Welfare are required to approve foster care payments to a foster home on behalf of a child who has been relinquished to a private placement agency. 38 A.G. Op. 11 (1979).

Retroactive Foster Care Payments: In the absence of a determination that foster care assistance was improperly denied, neither a County Department of Public Welfare nor the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is required to retroactively pay foster care costs on behalf of a relinquished child. Where there is a determination made that foster care assistance was improperly denied, only the foster home involved is entitled to foster care payments. 38 A.G. Op. 11 (1979).

County Power — "Big Brothers and Big Sisters": Counties may contract with Big Brothers and Big Sisters organizations to furnish adult companionship, guidance, and counseling to needy and troubled children. 37 A.G. Op. 105 (1978).

County Power — "4-C's": Counties, jointly with the state Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), may contract with local "4-C's" projects to provide coordination and support of child abuse prevention and treatment services. 37 A.G. Op. 105 (1978).

County Authority to Construct Medical Facility: A county has no authority under 7-8-2102 or 53-2-321 (now repealed) to construct a medical facility for doctors. A county does have power under 90-5-101, et seq., to construct such facility using industrial revenue bonds or gifts but may not use federal revenue sharing funds or payments in lieu of taxes and may lease the facility to a hospital district in the county. 37 A.G. Op. 61 (1977).

County Financial Responsibility for Indigents: A county is financially responsible for a voluntary commitment proceeding of an indigent person. 36 A.G. Op. 98 (1976).

All other administrative costs of the local office of public assistance must be paid from county funds.

(3) On or before the 20th day of the month following the month for which the payments to the public assistance staff were made, the department shall present to the county a claim for the required reimbursements. The county shall make reimbursements within 20 days after the presentation of the claim, and the department shall credit all reimbursements to its account for administrative costs"; and made minor changes in style. If conditions warrant, the county board, with the approval of the department of public health and human services, may appoint some fully qualified person listed by the department as supervisor of its staff personnel. The staff personnel of each county department are directly responsible to the county board, but the department of public health and human services may supervise the county employees in respect to the efficient and proper performance of their duties. Attorney General's Opinions

Determination of Staffing Patterns of County Public Assistance Offices: Both the Department of Public Health and Human Services and county welfare boards have an interest in staffing patterns for county public assistance offices, and when possible, staffing patterns should be determined through a process of consultation and negotiation between the Department and the county welfare board. However, if an agreement cannot be reached through that process, the Department has the final authority for determining staffing patterns for the county public welfare office in a nonassumed county. (See 2001 amendments eliminating county welfare boards.) 48 A.G. Op. 18 (2000).

Reimbursement by County Required for Computerization Expenses Related to Public Assistance: State law uniformly requires that counties reimburse the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) for the legitimate costs of administration of county public assistance programs, including expenses associated with the computerization of public assistance eligibility determinations. 45 A.G. Op. 26 (1994).

County Welfare Department Personnel as State Employees — Applicable Grievance Procedure: County welfare department employees are state employees for purposes of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, entitlement to employee benefits, and participation in employee-related programs. If county welfare department personnel are involuntarily terminated from employment and wish to pursue a grievance, they must follow the grievance procedure established by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) unless the Department and the county have agreed upon an alternative process. (See 2001 amendment.) 45 A.G. Op. 16 (1993).

Payments Mandated Even if Poor Fund Depleted: A county shall make the payments mandated by 53-2-304(2) and (3), 53-2-322 (now repealed), 53-2-610 (now repealed), and 53-4-246 (now repealed) even if its county poor fund is depleted. The payments must be made by the county even if the deficiency in the poor fund resulted from inaccurate data on projected expenses provided by the county welfare director. (See 2001 amendment to 53-2-304(2).) 42 A.G. Op. 118 (1988).

If the board of county commissioners in a county disagrees with a specific method used, approach taken, or decision made that has a broad impact on the provision of public assistance in the county, the board of county commissioners may present their objections to the department in accordance with subsection (2). Prior to and during the development of an agreement, the department shall ensure the participation of the tribal government in the development of a plan for any county that serves an Indian reservation.

(2) All objections made by the board of county commissioners pursuant to subsection (1) must be presented to the department in writing. Within 45 days of receiving a written objection, the department shall convene a resolution committee. The committee must be composed of two county commissioners to be appointed for 2-year terms by the Montana association of counties, two representatives or designees of the department, and a fifth member selected by the other members. If the other members cannot agree on the fifth member, the attorney general shall appoint the fifth member. The resolution committee shall review the objections made by the county and shall attempt, in good faith, to develop an alternative method, approach, or resolution that is satisfactory to both the department and the county. The resolution committee shall present the results of its deliberations to the director of the department to carry out the alternative method, approach, or resolution"; inserted (2) concerning tribal government participation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 2013.

Section Not Codified: Section 71-246.1, R.C.M. 1947, a section releasing certain liens of the department, was not codified. That section is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 1, Ch. 299, L. 1973.

Part Case Notes

Residency — Constitutionality: Despite the invalidity of the requirement of 1-year's residency in the state in order to qualify for relief, county's obligation to pay general relief assistance may be limited by Legislature's residency requirements as it was in section 71-302, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Where no provision has been made to care for transients, state must provide relief until such time as indigent has established county residency. Pease v. Hansen, 159 M 43, 494 P2d 925 (1972).

Applications of Ward Indians: Since the Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53) makes no different arrangement for passing upon applications for relief to ward Indians from that applied to others, the County Board of Public Welfare has authority to pass upon such applications, and state's rights are fully protected by maving the right to review, on its own motion, any decision of the county board (53-2-606). State ex rel. Williams v. Kamp, 106 M 444, 78 P2d 585 (1938).

Medical Aid and Hospitalization of Ward Indians — State Expense: When not adequately provided for by the federal government, the state, without reimbursement by the county in which such Indians live, must provide medical aid and services and hospitalization for ward Indians. State ex rel. Williams v. Kamp, 106 M 444, 78 P2d 585 (1938).

Relief to Emancipated Indians Shared by County: Where Indian has been awarded a patent to tribal land, he becomes emancipated and the county in which he resides must bear its share of relief of all kinds. State ex rel. Williams v. Kamp, 106 M 444, 78 P2d 585 (1938).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Payments Mandated Even if Poor Fund Depleted: A county shall make the payments mandated by 53-2-304(2) and (3), 53-2-322 (now repealed), 53-2-610 (now repealed), and 53-4-246 (now repealed) even if its county poor fund is depleted. The payments must be made by the county even if the deficiency in the poor fund resulted from inaccurate data on projected expenses provided by the county welfare director. 42 A.G. Op. 118 (1988).

Residency Determination — Nursing Home Residents on General Relief: Under 53-3-306, a county may not automatically disclaim financial responsibility for new applicants for general relief who have moved to that county in order to receive medical care in a nursing home. The county of financial responsibility is the county where the applicant resides. Residence is determined by factors such as whether the placement in the nursing home is permanent or temporary, in which county the applicant is registered to vote, owns property, pays property taxes, or registers a vehicle, and in which county the applicant intends to remain. The original county remains financially responsible unless a court decree declares under 53-2-610 (now repealed) that the recipient's residence has changed. 40 A.G. Op. 8 (1983).

Budgeting — Ward Indians: The state, rather than counties, has the duty under section 75-508, R.C.M. 1947, (recodified as 53-4-246, now repealed) to budget for indigent ward Indians who are eligible for "aid to dependent children whose father is unemployed". 34 A.G. Op. 50 (1972).

Case Notes

Legislative Intent: Legislature has imposed upon County Welfare Department and County Commissioners the duty of establishing whether indigency exists in given case and has set up procedural steps to be followed in carrying out Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now, with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53). Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Lewis & Clark County, 149 M 206, 425 P2d 316 (1967).

When Mandate to Compel Grant May Not Issue: When there is an issue between the state and county departments (of welfare) as to the number of applicants entitled to relief and the amount to which they are entitled, the Supreme Court may not issue a Writ of Mandate to compel the state department to make a grant of state relief funds to a county under this section, in view of the discretionary powers and the right of review granted the state department. State ex rel. Silver Bow County v. Brandjord, 107 M 231, 82 P2d 589 (1938).

Applications of Ward Indians: Since the Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53) makes no different arrangement for passing upon applications for relief to ward Indians from that applied to others, the County Board of Public Welfare has authority to pass upon such applications, and state's rights are fully protected by having the right to review, on its own motion, any decision of the county Board (53-2-606). State ex rel. Williams v. Kamp, 106 M 444, 78 P2d 585 (1938).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 510 in (1) after "granted" inserted "to a needy person"; inserted (2) subjecting to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process money paid or payable to person or entity who is not needy person but who receives money for providing goods or services to needy person; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

53-2-608. Method of issuing assistance grants.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 94 in (1) at beginning substituted "When an individual or household is determined to be eligible for public assistance under this title, the department shall make payments to the individual or household or to a vendor on behalf of the individual or household in the full amount approved. Payment may be made by check or by electronic transfer, which includes but is not limited to direct deposits to an account at a financial institution and electronic benefit transfer cards" for "Checks in payment of public assistance must be issued by the department of public health and human services upon approved certificates of award and reports of changes of eligible grantees as are forwarded by the county to the state department, and all checks must be mailed to the individual recipient or the appropriate vendor. The checks in payment of public assistance must be issued in the full approved amount for each eligible approved grantee, and the original monthly payment must be from the state public assistance accounts"; in (2) near beginning after "department" deleted "of public health and human services"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 546 in (1) and (2) substituted "department of public health and human services" for "department of social and rehabilitation services". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Saving Clause: Section 571, Ch. 546, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 561 near beginning of first sentence of (1), after "assistance", substituted "must" for "with the exception of general relief, shall" and near middle, after "county", deleted "department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1981 Amendment: Changed "old age assistance aid to the needy blind, or aid to the permanently and totally disabled" to "public assistance" in the first sentence of (2); deleted bond requirement for persons who are protective payees for recipients of public assistance from the end of (2).

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 80 (Ch. 398, L. 1981) provided: "Although a statement of intent is not specifically needed for this bill, the legislature felt that it was necessary to express its intention regarding the handling of protective payees for those recipients of public assistance who need aid in handling their finances. Because this bill removes the bonding requirement for protective payees, it was felt to be necessary to give some guidance on the handling of protective payees. The attached draft has been approved as a suitable approach to the protective payee situation. It is intended that SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] handle protective payees as described in the attached draft or in a manner substantially similar.

AFDC [NOW FAIM FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE] PROGRAM PROTECTIVE PAYEE

A protective payee program is established to assure that AFDC [now FAIM financial assistance] payments are used in a manner consistent with the purpose of assistance in providing for the best interest of the child/children. Montana SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] would establish the following procedure to administer the protective payee program:

1. Establish Need — When there is documented evidence that a caretaker mismanages funds and that the needs of the child are not consistently met, a protective payee may be established.

2. Selection of Payee — The protective payee must be reliable and capable of managing household funds.

Restrictions — The payee can be a family member, friend or staff member of a community or department agency. Ineligible persons would be ET staff, vendors of goods or services dealing directly with the client and specific restricted personnel of the agency. Those restricted include County Commissioners, executive heads of public welfare departments, special investigative or resource staff, staff handling fiscal processes and landlords.

Selection of Payee — The recipient may participate in the selection of the payee, following the selection criteria.

A contractual agreement shall be entered into between the payee and the county outlining the duties and responsibilities of each.

3. Monitor of Payee — The Department shall establish within reasonable guidelines, the method in which the payee shall carry out his responsibilities. Shelter, food and personal need of payment shall be provided in a manner designed to best meet the needs of the recipient.

A record of payments shall be kept on a regular basis by the payee. This record shall be accessible to the Department for review as frequently as indicated by circumstances, but at least every three months. The review shall specifically address the continuing need for a protective payee, and the way the responsibilities are being carried out.

4. Termination of Protective Payee — Termination shall occur when:

a. The caretaker is determined able to assume management of funds.

b. It appears that the protective payee arrangement likely will continue beyond two years. Judicial appointment of a guardian shall be sought.

5. Fair Hearing — Opportunity for a Fair Hearing shall be given to an individual who requests it as a result of any protective payee procedure.

A contractual agreement between the County Welfare Department and protective payee would be made. That agreement would designate the payee, the recipient, and the responsibilities and duties of both the payee and County Welfare Department. A statement would be included designating the payee's understanding of his personal liability in the event of irresponsible actions taken in the role of the payee.

PROTECTIVE PAYEE AGREEMENT

I, ..., hereby agree to accept the responsibilities and duties of Protective Payee for ..... until such time as I am relieved of said duties.

By signing this agreement I understand that my duties include providing for the shelter, food, and personal needs of ..... by properly disbursing the funds provided by the AFDC [now FAIM financial assistance] payment provided by The Montana State Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services].

I further acknowledge that my responsibilities include maintaining a regular record of receipts and method of disbursement to be available to the (county) Department of Public Welfare for review.

I understand that improperly exercising the responsibilities of Protective Payee shall result in the penalties as included in ..... MCA.

53-2-612. Lien of department upon third-party recoveries.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 153 throughout section following reference to department deleted reference to county; in (1) in middle following "upon" deleted "all", and at end inserted "and to the extent that the money represents payment for medical expenses"; deleted (3)(a)(i) that read: "applies to all money paid by a third party or a third party's insurer regardless of whether the recovery is allocated by the parties or a court to any particular type or element of damages"; in (3)(c) inserted language at end of second sentence capping the amount that can be collected; in (4)(a) near end of second sentence following "department" deleted "or the county commissioners of the county that paid medical assistance"; in (6)(a) deleted definition of county that read: ""County" means a county that has provided medical assistance to a recipient through an indigent assistance program operated at the option of the county"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 571 in (4)(a) in second sentence near middle after "department or the" substituted "county commissioners of the county" for "director of the county department"; and in (6)(a) near beginning after "means a county" substituted "that has provided medical assistance to a recipient through an indigent assistance program operated at the option of the county" for "department of welfare in a county that has not transferred its public assistance responsibilities to the state under the provisions of Title 53, chapter 2, part 8". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 574 in (6)(a) substituted definition of county as providing medical assistance through indigent assistance program for "means a county department of welfare in a county that has not transferred its public assistance responsibilities to the state under the provisions of Title 53, chapter 2, part 8". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 262 inserted (3)(e) disallowing imposition of a lien upon a self-sufficiency trust or the assets of a self-sufficiency trust; inserted (3)(e)(i) and (3)(e)(ii) providing exceptions to the lien imposition restrictions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1989 Amendment: Rewrote section to allow Department lien on, rather than subrogation interest in, third-party recovery by recipient whose medical expenses were paid by Department or county (see 1989 Session Law for text). Amendment effective April 10, 1989.

Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 482, L. 1989, provided that the amendments to this section apply to recoveries for personal injury that occurs, disease or illness that is diagnosed, or disability that commences on or after the effective date of the act. Effective April 10, 1989.

1985 Amendment: Throughout section substituted "recipient or beneficiary" for references to needy person; in first sentence of (1) after "medical benefits", deleted "under Title XIX or XX of the Social Security Act"; in (2) deleted second and third sentences that read: "From the amount collected from legal proceedings or as a result of settlement, the department shall retain the full amount previously paid as medical benefits, allocating to the county and federal government a share proportionate to their contribution and, after deducting the costs of the proceeding, deliver the remainder to the needy person. The total amounts awarded as compensation for pain and suffering or which are punitive in nature shall be delivered to the needy person", and at end of (2) inserted "in accordance with the provisions of this section"; inserted (3) providing for payment of attorney fees and costs; in (4), after "notify the department", substituted language requiring notification to the Department by a certified letter if claim is asserted against a third party or his insurer for an injury for which the Department paid medical benefits and specifying information the notice must contain for "of any action initiated or of any compromise or settlement agreed to by the needy person or his legal representative for the recovery of compensation or damages for medical expenses to which medical benefits have been applied. Notice shall be given by service upon the department of the legal instrument initiating the action or embodying the compromise or settlement"; deleted former (4) that read: "No portion of attorneys' fees may be withheld from the amount collected from legal proceedings or as a result of settlement which is due the department under subsection (1) without prior approval of the department"; inserted (5) providing for third-party liability for medical benefits paid by the Department on behalf of a recipient or beneficiary; and in (6) substituted "recipient or beneficiary of medical benefits from the state or county" for "needy person to which Title XIX or XX benefits have been applied".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 535, L. 1985, provided: "Under the amendment set forth as 53-2-612(3), the legislature intends that the department recover all medical expenses paid, less its share of reasonable attorney's costs, in those cases where the total recovery net of attorney fees and costs is sufficient to pay the department and allow the recipient at least one-third of the net recovery. Where the net recovery is insufficient to reimburse the department for its costs and the recipient for other damages, this section requires the department to compromise its claim but only to the extent necessary to allow the recipient one-third of the net recovery. A recipient would not, under this statute, receive more than one-third of the net recovery unless and until the department has been reimbursed for its costs, net of attorney fees."

Case Notes

Collection on Medicaid Liens by Department — Statute of Limitations on Overpayments — Interpretation of "Third Party": The plaintiffs in a class action filed suit against the Department of Public Health and Human Services for its collection of settlement proceeds in excess of federal Medicaid law. The plaintiffs sought declaratory judgment, injunctive relief, and reimbursement for overpayment for 2,500 plaintiffs. Following the issuance of Arkansas Department of Health and Human Services v. Ahlborn, 547 U.S. 268 (2006), Montana amended its Medicaid lien statutes to seek reimbursement of only those settlement proceeds representing compensation for medical expenses, instead of all settlement proceeds. The term "third party" as used in 53-2-612 includes all other sources of medical assistance available to Medicaid recipients, including a recipient's private health or automobile insurance. As there was no specific statute of limitations applied to relief sought by the plaintiffs, the statute of limitations was 5 years from the issuance of Ahlborn. Blanton v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2011 MT 110, 360 Mont. 396, 255 P.3d 1229.

Medicaid Third-Party Recovery Laws Inapplicable to Tobacco Settlement — Settlement Not Trigger for Remainder Payment: Plaintiff, on behalf of her deceased husband who had previously assigned a medical care claim to the state, contended that when Montana entered into a master settlement agreement with tobacco manufacturers based in part on Medicaid statistics, the agreement had the effect of releasing the remainder of any settlement money to Medicaid recipients pursuant to this section. The District Court disagreed, concluding that because the tobacco litigation was neither initiated by the Department of Public Health and Human Services nor filed in the name of the Medicaid recipients, the settlement did not trigger a remainder payment under subsection (3)(c) of this section. The Supreme Court affirmed. Under the agreement, the definition of releasing parties excludes individual Medicaid recipients, and "released claims" includes only those claims that the state could have brought, so the state would have no standing to assert the individuals' claims for damages. Further, if there was any question as to whether Medicaid third-party recovery laws applied to the settlement payments, Congress made clear that they do not through passage of 42 U.S.C. 1396b(d)(3) in 1999. Coordination: Section 42, Ch. 465, L. 2001, provided: "If House Bill No. 101 is not passed and approved, then all references in [this act] to local offices of public assistance are changed to references to county welfare offices." House Bill No. 101 was not passed and approved; therefore, the reference to local office of public assistance in the amendment to (1) was changed to a reference to county welfare office.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 45, Ch. 465, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to payments made after January 1, 2001, for mental health services provided to children with serious emotional disturbances for whom mental health services are not provided by any other public mental health services program and whose family income is at or below 150% of the federal poverty level."

Amendment effective May 2, 1997.

Chapter 552 inserted (3)(d) providing that the assignment "does not apply to support that accrued before the applicant received public assistance"; inserted (4) regarding transfer of a child support obligation by operation of law to a caretaker relative, assignment of it as provided in subsection (2), and termination of the transfer and assignment when the caretaker relative no longer has physical custody of the child; and inserted (5)(e) providing that an assigned support obligation may not be terminated, invalidated, waived, set aside, or considered uncollectible by the act or failure to act of a recipient or former recipient of public assistance. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 50, Ch. 486, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 60 in (4), at beginning after "Whenever a", inserted "child support or spousal"; in (4)(b), near beginning after "recover", inserted "or enforce" and after "support obligation" substituted "or make any agreements with any other person or agency concerning the support obligation, except as provided in 40-5-202" for "without notifying the department's child support enforcement division. The department may then release or relinquish its assigned interest or enter the proceeding. This subsection (4)(b) does not limit the right of any person to recover money not assigned"; in (4)(d), at end of first sentence, substituted "under the provisions of 40-5-202" for "and an opportunity to participate"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 546 in (1), in two places, in (2), and in (4) substituted "department of public health and human services" for "department of social and rehabilitation services". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Severability: Section 18, Ch. 60, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 631, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, it is necessary to draft a composite bill containing unrelated sections in order to present the proposed program improvements in a single, comprehensive bill that promotes the needs of legislative energy, efficiency, and economy by limiting the number of possible bills and by reducing the need for hearings and readings on those bills.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it appropriate to enact the following legislation."

Parent-Child Relationship Thwarted — Equitable Estoppel Precluding Payment of Child Support: When Stiles and his wife separated, he was given responsibility for the care of his newborn son. Because Stiles was in the military at the time, he asked his sister, Cynthia, if she would care for the child for a short time while he fulfilled his duties in the Navy. Cynthia agreed, but immediately sought legal custody of the child, and physical custody of the child was ultimately granted to her by a California court. She often did not comply with court orders resulting from her custody efforts, including orders to allow Stiles visitation with the child. Stiles initially offered to pay for the child's care, but Cynthia refused any money, saying it was not needed. Nevertheless, Stiles did provide ongoing health insurance for the child. Over a decade later, Cynthia applied for and was granted public assistance, assigning any right to child support to the state. The Child Support Enforcement Division established Stiles's support obligation at $511 a month. Stiles asked Cynthia to sign a waiver of this obligation, but she refused. Stiles petitioned for judicial review, and the District Court remanded to an administrative law judge to make findings regarding Stiles's claim that Cynthia had waived her right to receive child support or that she was equitably estopped from asserting or assigning those rights. The administrative law judge found that the requisite elements of waiver and estoppel were present, and the District Court upheld the findings, holding that because Cynthia had no right to child support, she could not convey to the state rights greater than those to which she was entitled. The state appealed, asserting that the court erred when it held that estoppel and waiver applied to relieve Stiles of the obligation to provide support. The Supreme Court concluded that all six elements of equitable estoppel were met and that Cynthia had no right to receive child support from Stiles either retroactively or prospectively. Cynthia waived her right to support through her language and conduct. Nothing in the record indicated that the child's needs were not being met, and the court declined to order additional support. Although a parent is still responsible for support even in cases of voluntary relinquishment of parental rights, Stiles's relinquishment was involuntary. The court declined to hold Stiles to normal parental responsibilities under these unique circumstances, given that the child's best interests were being served, Stiles provided health insurance for the child at all times, and Stiles was thwarted by Cynthia in his attempts to have a parent-child relationship and was not attempting to exploit narrow legal technicalities to avoid undisputed court-ordered support obligations awarded at the time of dissolution. Stiles v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2000 MT 257, 301 M 482, 10 P3d 819, 57 St. Rep. 1054 (2000), distinguishing Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 190 M 66, 618 P2d 867 (1980), In re Marriage of Neiss, 228 M 479, 743 P2d 1022 (1987), and In re Support of Krug, 231 M 78, 751 P2d 171 (1988).

State's Right to Public Assistance Reimbursement Predicated Upon Beneficiary Having Rights Capable of Assignment: When Stiles and his wife separated, he was given responsibility for the care of his newborn son. Because Stiles was in the military at the time, he asked his sister, Cynthia, if she would care for the child for a short time while he fulfilled his duties in the Navy. Cynthia agreed, but immediately sought legal custody of the child, and physical custody of the child was ultimately granted to her by a California court. The administrative law judge found that the requisite elements of waiver and estoppel were present, and the District Court upheld the findings, holding that because Cynthia had no right to child support, she could not convey to the state rights greater than those to which she was entitled. The state appealed, asserting that the court erred when it held that the statutory rights of the state to be reimbursed for the payment of public benefits were negated by Cynthia's conduct. The Supreme Court affirmed. The statutory right of the state to be reimbursed is predicated upon the beneficiary actually having rights capable of being assigned to the state. The language in this section is discretionary, indicating no legislative intent that the state would inherit an unequivocal right to collect from all parties at the time that public assistance is granted, regardless of whether a court had approved an order of support. The Supreme Court declined to expand the regular meaning of the discretionary language in the statute to confer greater rights to the state than the rights possessed by Cynthia. Stiles v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2000 MT 257, 301 M 482, 10 P3d 819, 57 St. Rep. 1054 (2000).

Excess Support Properly Retained by State: Holthusen made his child support payments directly to the Child Support Enforcement Division. The payment amount was for $75 more than his current obligation, and the Division retained the excess to reimburse the state for public assistance money that the wife received during the time Holthusen had failed to pay support. The Supreme Court held that the state properly retained the money rather than tendering the excess to the wife for past child support and that after being reimbursed, the state would then be required to pay the excess to the wife. Retroactive Applicability: Section 45, Ch. 465, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to payments made after January 1, 2001, for mental health services provided to children with serious emotional disturbances for whom mental health services are not provided by any other public mental health services program and whose family income is at or below 150% of the federal poverty level."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 486 at end of (1) inserted "in compliance with all federal laws and requirements"; in (3)(c) substituted "periodic redetermination of eligibility" for "certification periods"; in (3)(h), after "recipients", substituted "of FAIM financial assistance" for "of aid to families with dependent children" and after "requirement of" substituted "that" for "the aid to families with dependent children"; inserted (4) authorizing adoption of rules regarding assignment of support rights, cooperation with child support enforcement program requirements, and disqualification from programs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 2, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 50, Ch. 486, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 491, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 11] [53-2-901] grants the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] authority to adopt rules for the administration of the food stamp program.

(1) It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules concerning:

(a) eligibility for assistance, including income and resource limitations, income and resource exclusions, and transfers of resources;

(b) amounts of assistance and methods for determining benefit amounts;

(c) certification periods;

(d) reporting requirements;

(e) work registration and employment and training requirements and exemptions from those requirements;

(f) procedures and policies of the employment and training program;

(g) disqualification because of intentional program violations, voluntarily quitting a job without good cause, or any other violation of program rules;

(h) penalties applicable to recipients of aid to families with dependent children [now FAIM financial assistance] who have been sanctioned because of failure to meet any requirement of the aid to families with dependent children [now FAIM financial assistance] program; and

(i) special requirements or criteria applicable to participants in the families achieving independence in Montana (FAIM) project.

(2) It is intended that the rules adopted by the department comply with federal requirements under the Food Stamp Act Amendments of 1980, 7 U.S.C. 2011, et seq., and 7 CFR 271 through 285, as may be amended, or, in the event that waivers of federal law have been granted by the food and nutrition service of the U.S. department of agriculture, with the waivers.

(3) [Section 19] [53-4-212] revises the department's rulemaking authority for the aid to families with dependent children program, including the FAIM project [both now FAIM financial assistance program].

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules concerning:

(a) eligibility requirements, including gross and net income limitations, resource limitations, and income and resource exclusions;

(b) amounts of assistance and methods for computing benefit amounts;

(c) deprivation of parental support or care for purposes of qualifying as a dependent child;

(d) the degree of kinship required for a person to qualify as a specified caretaker relative with whom a child may live to be eligible for assistance;

(e) reporting requirements;

(f) requirements for participation in the JOBS program and exemptions from participation;

(g) procedures and policies of the JOBS program;

(h) sanctions, disqualification, or other penalties for failure to comply with program rules or requirements; and

(i) special requirements or policies applicable to participants in the FAIM project.

(4) It is intended that rules adopted under [section 19] [53-4-212] comply with federal requirements under Title IV of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. 601, et seq., and 45 CFR parts

200 through 499, as amended, or, in the event that waivers of federal law have been granted by the U.S. department of health and human services, with the waivers.

(5) [Section 26] [53-6-113] grants the department additional rulemaking authority. It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules specifying the income limits for eligibility for extended medical assistance for persons receiving aid to families with dependent children under the FAIM project [both now FAIM financial assistance program] who lose eligibility because of increased income and specifying the length of time for which they may receive extended medical assistance.

It is intended that rules adopted under [section 26] [53-6-113] comply with waivers of federal medicaid law granted by the secretary of the U.S. department of health and human services pertaining to the FAIM project and promote the goals of the FAIM project of self-sufficiency and responsibility of participants. In adopting the rules, the department may consider the amount of funds appropriated by the legislature for the Montana medicaid program."

CHAPTER 3
GENERAL RELIEF

Chapter Case Notes

Eligibility — Date Determined: Petroleum County denied medical assistance benefits to unemployed applicant because his unemployment compensation exceeded the county income limitation. The county failed to reduce the applicant's income by the amount of the medical expenses as allowed for in the "spend-down" provision in the county plan. On judicial review before the District Court, the court remanded the case to the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to determine if the applicant was medically indigent. The Department responded that it was without authority to consider the matter further because the applicant at that time had a new job which placed the applicant above the statutory income limitation. The District Court entered a final judgment affirming the denial of benefits. On appeal, the Supreme Court upheld the statutory and county income limitations but held that the Department had used the wrong income in considering the applicant's need on remand from the District Court. The Supreme Court remanded for a determination of whether the applicant was medically needy under 53-3-103 (substantially reenacted as 53-3-206, now repealed) at the time medical treatment first began. Deaconess Medical Center of Billings, Inc. v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 222 M 127, 720 P2d 1165, 43 St. Rep. 1112 (1986).

Medical Assistance — Income Limitations Constitutional: Provision in 53-3-103(3), MCA (1983) (substantively reenacted as 53-3-206, now repealed; however, see 53-6-131), that denies medical assistance benefits to those with incomes in excess of 300% of the AFDC (now FAIM financial assistance) standard passes middle-tier scrutiny and is constitutional. The limitation is reasonable, and the state's interest in limiting medical assistance outweighs the interest in obtaining benefits by those whose incomes exceed the limitation. Much lower income limitation in the county plan with a "spend-down" provision, allowing medical expenses to be deducted from the income before comparison with the AFDC (now FAIM financial assistance) standard, is also constitutional. Denial of medical benefits solely because the applicant's income exceeds the AFDC (now FAIM financial assistance) standard would be unconstitutional. Deaconess Medical Center of Billings, Inc. v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 222 M 127, 720 P2d 1165, 43 St. Rep. 1112 (1986).

Indigent Student's Right to County Medical Assistance — Residence Question: A college student born and raised in Cascade County was injured far from home. During recuperation at her parents' residence in Cascade County, she applied for medical assistance. She was denied. The Supreme Court of Montana found her to be a resident of Cascade County for purposes of county medical assistance, noting that she gives the county as her permanent address and intends to reside there after she finishes school and citing the rule that it is customary to look to the parents' residence in order to determine the residence of the student. Michels v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 187 M 173, 609 P2d 271, 37 St. Rep. 546 (1980). (Decided prior to 1985 amendment.)

Use of Medical Resources: In order for a person to qualify for Medicaid, that person must be eligible, and to be eligible, a person must qualify under a state plan which has been approved by the Director of Health, Education, and Welfare. Such a plan must agree with all the statutes and regulations promulgated under the Social Security Act. In other words, use of the plan implies legal use under federal regulations which in turn means sole use by definition. Therefore, applicants or recipients who have access to medical resources will be required to use only the resources enumerated under the federal regulations. County medical programs are not considered resources under the regulations and are therefore excluded from use. Flathead Health Center v. Flathead County, 183 M 211, 598 P2d 1111, 36 St. Rep. 1465 (1979).

Unreasonable Application of Welfare Standards: The trial court did not err in holding as a matter of law that a recipient of plaintiff's services was medically indigent even though the recipient's spouse's income was above welfare standards, for such application of administrative standards was unreasonable in this case. Furthermore, recipient's indigent status was unaffected by her failure to have the federal government pay her medical bills as a qualified candidate for Indian medical benefits. Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Glacier County, 177 M 259, 581 P2d 830 (1978).

Measure of Eligibility: The proper measure for eligibility under the county medical assistance program is based on the applicant's available, spendable income or resources and disregards noncash income such as rent, food, and utilities that cannot be converted into cash necessary to pay medical bills. Wheatland County v. Bleeker, 175 M 478, 575 P2d 48 (1978).

Standard for Review — Clearly Erroneous: In an appeal from an order of District Court finding respondents eligible for county medical assistance, the Supreme Court found that evidence in the form of an unsolicited opinion voiced by an interested party, with no foundation, did not constitute substantial evidence which would render the decision clearly erroneous. Wheatland County v. Bleeker, 175 M 478, 575 P2d 48 (1978).

County of Most Significant Contacts: The hearings officer, Board of Social and Rehabilitation Appeals (now Board of Public Assistance), and District Court properly found Blaine County the resource financially responsible for paying the respondents' medical debts even though respondents resided in Hill County at the end of a year's residence in Montana because Blaine County had the most significant contacts. Blaine County v. Moore, 174 M 114, 568 P2d 1216 (1977). (Decided prior to 1985 amendment.)

County-State Obligation: Despite the invalidity of the requirement of 1-year's residency in the state in order to qualify for relief, county's obligation to pay general relief assistance may be limited by Legislature's residency requirements as it did in section 71-302, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed); where no provision has been made to care for transients, state must provide relief until such time as indigent has established county residency. Pease v. Hansen, 159 M 43, 494 P2d 925 (1972).

Durational Residency Requirement — Constitutionality — Historical Perspective: Durational residency requirement in state welfare program (since amended out) imposed unconstitutional restraint on right to travel. Pease v. Hansen, 404 US 70, 30 L Ed 2d 224, 92 S Ct 318 (1971), following Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 US 618, 22 L Ed 2d 600, 89 S Ct 1322 (1969), and reversing Pease v. Hansen, 157 M 99, 483 P2d 720 (1971).

Emergency Hospitalization:

Although family of 10 had earnings in excess of County Welfare Board's standard minimum income for determining indigency, application of the standard to deny medical assistance was unreasonable where the family had considerable medical expense and a history of indebtedness. St. Patrick Hosp. v. Powell County, 156 M 153, 477 P2d 340 (1970).

Hospital, located in one county, which performed emergency appendectomy on indigent who was resident of another county, was a real party in interest in suit against county in which patient resided; statute providing that medical aid for indigents is "responsibility of the county" was broad enough to encompass emergency medical aid rendered outside indigent's county of residence. Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Lewis & Clark County, 149 M 206, 425 P2d 316 (1967). (Decided prior to 1985 amendment.)

Evidence of Indigency: Fact that alleged indigent had never supported herself and apparently never would was proof of medical indigency in every legal and social sense in spite of fact she was employable and notwithstanding absence of evidence of reasons for her inability to be productive citizen. Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Lewis & Clark County, 149 M 206, 425 P2d 316 (1967). (Decided prior to 1985 amendment.)

Wandering Child: Mandamus lies to compel State Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to reimburse county for medical and hospital expenses paid for a wandering 13-year-old child from another state who had roamed from place to place for approximately 1 month, without means of support, before she threw herself in front of a moving automobile. State ex rel. Lewis & Clark County v. St. Bd. of Pub. Welfare, 141 M 209, 376 P2d 1002 (1962).

County in Which Injury Occurred Liable: Where an indigent nonresident is injured within county and requires immediate medical and surgical attention and hospitalization and is removed to another county to obtain such treatment, the county in which the injury occurred is liable. Musselshell County v. Petroleum County, 118 M 1, 161 P2d 905 (1945).

Relief Warrants to Be Readily Convertible Into Cash: Provision in 53-3-302 (now repealed) that relief disbursements shall be by warrant or check representing cash on demand means warrants or checks which are the equivalent of cash, i.e., readily convertible into cash without discount. State ex rel. Silver Bow County v. Brandjord, 107 M 231, 82 P2d 589 (1938).

Appeal From County to State Board: Exercise of the right of appeal from the action of a county body to a state body, as from a county to the State Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), is not always a condition precedent to the right to resort to the courts for relief, as where County Board of Public Welfare wrongfully refused to issue a check to applicant, in which case appeal to state Board would have been without object or purpose under the Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now, with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53). State ex rel. Wilson v. Weir, 106 M 526, 79 P2d 305 (1938).

Sending to Poor Farm Violation of Duty: Where a County Board of Public Welfare placed applicant in poor farm instead of issuing to him a warrant or check representing cash on demand as required by 53-3-302 (now repealed), it violated a clear legal duty, enforceable by the Writ of Mandate. State ex rel. Wilson v. Weir, 106 M 526, 79 P2d 305 (1938).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Residency Determination — Nursing Home Residents on General Relief: Under 53-3-306 (now repealed), a county could not automatically disclaim financial responsibility for new applicants for general relief who have moved to that county in order to receive medical care in a nursing home. The county of financial responsibility is the county where the applicant resides. Residence is determined by factors such as whether the placement in the nursing home is permanent or temporary, in which county the applicant is registered to vote, owns property, pays property taxes, or registers a vehicle, and in which county the applicant intends to remain. The original county remains financially responsible unless a court decree declares under 53-2-610 (now repealed) that the recipient's residence has changed. 40 A.G. Op. 8 (1983).

Workfare — Prevailing Wage for Similar Work: Prior to the 1983 amendment allowing payment at the minimum wage, 53-3-304 (now repealed) required that all participants in the "workfare" program receive benefits equal to wages paid at the prevailing rate for similar county work. The prevailing wage as determined under the "Little Bacon-Davis Act" (18-2-401 and 18-2-402) is the most frequent or commonly used rate of pay. The prevailing wage is not necessarily the minimum wage. The county could have paid the minimum wage only if similar work, as that done under workfare, had generally been performed for the minimum wage or if the county had never had similar work performed. To determine what is similar work, the county should classify work to be performed under the workfare program with other work closely resembling the type currently being done for the county. 40 A.G. Op. 3 (1983).

General Relief Apportionment Among Counties: A person who has moved from one county to another and did not receive public assistance from the original county is not the financial responsibility of the original county. 37 A.G. Op. 35 (1977).

General Provisions

Part Case Notes

Limitation of Assistance Not to Be Arbitrary Between Classes of Eligible Individuals: The state may legitimately limit its expenditures for public assistance, public education, or any other program evenhandedly applied. It may not limit its expenditures by the expedient of eliminating classes of eligible individuals from public assistance without regard to their constitutionally grounded right to society's aid when needed for the basic necessities of life. While not declaring that inhabitants have a constitutional right to public assistance, the Supreme Court did declare that the Legislature, in performing its duties under Art. XII, sec. 3, Mont. Const., may not act arbitrarily between classes of entitled persons. Butte Community Union v. Lewis, 229 M 212, 745 P2d 1128, 44 St. Rep. 1911 (1987).

Legislative Intent: Legislature has imposed upon County Welfare Department and County Commissioners the duty of establishing whether indigency exists in given case and has set up procedural steps to be followed in carrying out Public Welfare Act (Title 71, ch. 2 through 10, R.C.M. 1947, now, with substantial change, a major portion of Title 53). Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Lewis & Clark County, 149 M 206, 425 P2d 316 (1967).

Assistance to Striking Union Members: Mandamus could be used to compel the Department of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to rescind a general order providing that striking members of a union were to receive less general relief assistance than other general relief recipients and to require the Department to give union members the same general relief as given other applicants in the same class. State ex rel. Int'l Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers v. Dept. of Public Welfare, 136 M 283, 347 P2d 727 (1959).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

No Authority to File Property Lien Upon Overpayment of Assistance: A county welfare department has no statutory authority to assert a lien against the real property of a general assistance recipient who has received an excess of general assistance funds. The county may file a civil action for recovery of the overpayment. 43 A.G. Op. 10 (1989).

Indigent Residency Requirement for Nursing Home: A county may restrict entry into the county boarding or nursing home to only those indigent aged who are bona fide residents of the county as the obligation of the counties to provide institutional care to indigent aged appears to be limited to indigent county residents according to the language of 7-34-2302 (now repealed). 35 A.G. Retroactive Applicability: Section 45, Ch. 465, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to payments made after January 1, 2001, for mental health services provided to children with serious emotional disturbances for whom mental health services are not provided by any other public mental health services program and whose family income is at or below 150% of the federal poverty level."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 486 at beginning of (1) substituted "Subject to the provisions of subsections (2) through (5), assistance may" for "Assistance shall" and after "part" substituted (1)(a) through (1)(e) outlining eligible dependents for "any dependent child, as defined in 53-4-201, who is in need of such assistance.

(2) Aid to families with dependent children assistance payments may be made to"; inserted (2) describing assistance for which noncitizens are eligible; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Aid to families with dependent children shall be granted to or for the care of children of unemployed parents who would not otherwise be entitled to such aid because the child is living in the home with both parents. The department may adopt rules to administer the grant of assistance to children of unemployed parents pursuant to Title IV, section 407, of the federal Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 607), as amended"; inserted (3) outlining persons not eligible for assistance; inserted (4) providing when family not eligible for assistance; inserted (5) providing for interpretation of section; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 2, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 50, Ch. 486, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 370 in (2) and (3) substituted "aid to families with dependent children" for "aid to dependent children".

Chapter 403 in first sentence of (3), after "care of children", inserted "of unemployed parents" and in second sentence, after "administer", substituted "the grant of assistance to children of unemployed parents" for "this program".

1985 Amendment — No Definition of "Program": Inserted (3) requiring aid to dependent children to or for the care of children who would not otherwise be entitled to aid because the child is living in the home with both parents and allowing the Department to adopt rules to administer the program, which was enacted as two separate sections of Ch. 53, L. 1985, and was codified as one subsection for logical placement and convenience to the user. Chapter 53, L. 1985, enacting this subsection also amended 53-4-201 to include "continued unemployment" as an eligibility criteria for aid to dependent children. The title of Ch. 53, L. 1985, read, in part: "An act adding parental unemployment to the eligibility criteria for aid to dependent children". The "program" referred to in the second sentence of (3) is apparently a reference to aid to dependent children funding for children of continuously unemployed parents, although there is no substantive language establishing or defining such a program. The catchline to sec. 2, Ch. 53, L. 1985, referred to a "program". It read: "Aid to dependent children — unemployed parent program". However, catchlines are not part of the legislative text and do not have the force and effect of law; see 1-11-103.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Senate Bill 122 (Ch. 53, L. 1985) read: "Because section 3 [53-4-231(3)] delegates rulemaking authority to the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services], a statement of legislative intent is required. It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules to administer this program pursuant to Title IV, section 407 of the Social Security Act, as amended."

1981 Special Session Amendment: Inserted (2) providing assistance payments for certain needy pregnant women.

1981 Amendment: Deleted bond requirement for persons who are protective payees for needy children from the end of the section.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 80 (Ch. 398, L. 1981) provided: "Although a statement of intent is not specifically needed for this bill, the legislature felt that it was necessary to express its intention regarding the handling of protective payees for those recipients of public assistance who need aid in handling their finances. Because this bill removes the bonding requirement for protective payees, it was felt to be necessary to give some guidance on the handling of protective payees. The attached draft has been approved as a suitable approach to the protective payee situation. It is intended that SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] handle protective payees as described in the attached draft or in a manner substantially similar.

AFDC [NOW FAIM FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE] PROGRAM PROTECTIVE PAYEE

A protective payee program is established to assure that AFDC [now FAIM financial assistance] payments are used in a manner consistent with the purpose of assistance in providing for the best interest of the child/children. Montana SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] would establish the following procedure to administer the protective payee program:

1. Establish Need — When there is documented evidence that a caretaker mismanages funds and that the needs of the child are not consistently met, a protective payee may be established.

2. Selection of Payee — The protective payee must be reliable and capable of managing household funds.

Restrictions — The payee can be a family member, friend or staff member of a community or department agency. Ineligible persons would be ET staff, vendors of goods or services dealing directly with the client and specific restricted personnel of the agency. Those restricted include County Commissioners, executive heads of public welfare departments, special investigative or resource staff, staff handling fiscal processes and landlords.

Selection of Payee — The recipient may participate in the selection of the payee, following the selection criteria.

A contractual agreement shall be entered into between the payee and the county outlining the duties and responsibilities of each.

3. Monitor of Payee — The Department shall establish within reasonable guidelines, the method in which the payee shall carry out his responsibilities. Shelter, food and personal need of payment shall be provided in a manner designed to best meet the needs of the recipient.

A record of payments shall be kept on a regular basis by the payee. This record shall be accessible to the Department for review as frequently as indicated by circumstances, but at least every three months. The review shall specifically address the continuing need for a protective payee, and the way the responsibilities are being carried out.

4. Termination of Protective Payee — Termination shall occur when:

a. The caretaker is determined able to assume management of funds.

b. It appears that the protective payee arrangement likely will continue beyond two years. Judicial appointment of a guardian shall be sought.

5. Fair Hearing — Opportunity for a Fair Hearing shall be given to an individual who requests it as a result of any protective payee procedure.

A contractual agreement between the County Welfare Department and protective payee would be made. That agreement would designate the payee, the recipient, and the responsibilities and duties of both the payee and County Welfare Department. A statement would be included designating the payee's understanding of his personal liability in the event of irresponsible actions taken in the role of the payee.

PROTECTIVE PAYEE AGREEMENT

I, ..., hereby agree to accept the responsibilities and duties of Protective Payee for ..... until such time as I am relieved of said duties.

By signing this agreement I understand that my duties include providing for the shelter, food, and personal needs of ..... by properly disbursing the funds provided by the AFDC [now FAIM financial assistance] payment provided by The Montana State Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services].

I further acknowledge that my responsibilities include maintaining a regular record of receipts and method of disbursement to be available to the (county) Department of Public Welfare for review.

I understand that improperly exercising the responsibilities of Protective Payee shall result in the penalties as included in ..... MCA.

Child Support Not Court Ordered — Obligation Not Relieved: In an action brought by the Department of Revenue (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) pursuant to 40-5-221 and 53-4-248 to recoup funds paid by the state to support a father's two children, summary judgment for the Department was upheld. Although the trial court's prior dissolution and custody decree did not provide for support payments, a parent's legal and moral obligation to support his children was not relieved, nor was his obligation relieved by laches. St. v. Hubbard, 222 M 156, 720 P2d 1177, 43 St. Rep. 1135 (1986).

AFDC (now FAIM Financial Assistance) Payments — Father Not Absolved of Duty to Support Minor Children: The District Court did not abuse its discretion in ordering child support and maintenance. It is the legal as well as moral duty of husband to support his minor children. He is not absolved from this duty by public assistance provided to his children by a state agency in the form of AFDC (now FAIM financial assistance) payments. The District Court was not punishing husband for perceived marital misconduct. In re Marriage of Hickey, 213 M 38, 689 P2d 1222, 41 St. Rep. 1931 (1984).

State — Third "Person": Including the state as a "person" in the context of 40-6-215 was held proper in an action to recover amounts paid through aid to dependent children for the support and necessaries of children as it was beneficial to the state and general public. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services v. Hultgren, 168 M 257, 541 P2d 1211 (1975).

Part 6
Families Achieving Independence in Montana (FAIM)

Part Compiler's Comments

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 491, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 11] [53-2-901] grants the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] authority to adopt rules for the administration of the food stamp program.

(1) It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules concerning:

(a) eligibility for assistance, including income and resource limitations, income and resource exclusions, and transfers of resources;

(b) amounts of assistance and methods for determining benefit amounts;

(c) certification periods;

(d) reporting requirements;

(e) work registration and employment and training requirements and exemptions from those requirements;

(f) procedures and policies of the employment and training program;

(g) disqualification because of intentional program violations, voluntarily quitting a job without good cause, or any other violation of program rules;

(h) penalties applicable to recipients of aid to families with dependent children [now FAIM financial assistance] who have been sanctioned because of failure to meet any requirement of the aid to families with dependent children [now FAIM financial assistance] program; and

(i) special requirements or criteria applicable to participants in the families achieving independence in Montana (FAIM) project.

(2) It is intended that the rules adopted by the department comply with federal requirements under the Food Stamp Act Amendments of 1980, 7 U.S.C. 2011, et seq., and 7 CFR 271 through 285, as may be amended, or, in the event that waivers of federal law have been granted by the food and nutrition service of the U.S. department of agriculture, with the waivers.

(3) [Section 19] [53-4-212] revises the department's rulemaking authority for the aid to families with dependent children program, including the FAIM project [both now FAIM financial assistance program].

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules concerning:

(a) eligibility requirements, including gross and net income limitations, resource limitations, and income and resource exclusions;

(b) amounts of assistance and methods for computing benefit amounts;

(c) deprivation of parental support or care for purposes of qualifying as a dependent child;

(d) the degree of kinship required for a person to qualify as a specified caretaker relative with whom a child may live to be eligible for assistance;

(e) reporting requirements;

(f) requirements for participation in the JOBS program and exemptions from participation;

(g) procedures and policies of the JOBS program;

(h) sanctions, disqualification, or other penalties for failure to comply with program rules or requirements; and

(i) special requirements or policies applicable to participants in the FAIM project.

(4) It is intended that rules adopted under [section 19] [53-4-212] comply with federal requirements under Title IV of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. 601, et seq., and 45 CFR parts 200 through 499, as amended, or, in the event that waivers of federal law have been granted by the U.S. department of health and human services, with the waivers.

(5) [Section 26] [53-6-113] grants the department additional rulemaking authority. It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules specifying the income limits for eligibility for extended medical assistance for persons receiving aid to families with dependent children under the FAIM project [both now FAIM financial assistance program] who lose eligibility because of increased income and specifying the length of time for which they may receive extended medical assistance.

It is intended that rules adopted under [section 26] [53-6-113] comply with waivers of federal medicaid law granted by the secretary of the U.S. department of health and human services pertaining to the FAIM project and promote the goals of the FAIM project of self-sufficiency and responsibility of participants. In adopting the rules, the department may consider the amount of funds appropriated by the legislature for the Montana medicaid program."

Interim Study — Department of Public Health and Human Services to Study Increasing Reimbursement to Medicaid Direct-Care Service Providers in Order to Provide Employee Health Insurance: Section 1, Ch. 504, L. 2007, provided: "(1) The department of public health and human services, in conjunction with the commissioner of insurance, health insurers, persons providing medicaid personal assistance and other direct-care services and their employers, and other interested parties, shall conduct and coordinate a study that, at a minimum:

(a) (i) examines the feasibility of increasing medicaid payments to employers of personal-care attendants and other organizations that employ direct-care employees and that receive the majority of their revenue as a result of providing medicaid-funded long-term care services, with the increase in payments earmarked to pay the cost of providing employer-sponsored health insurance to those employees;

(ii) identifies organizations that employ personal-care attendants and direct-care employees and that receive the majority of their revenue for providing medicaid-funded long-term care services, including organizations such as personal-assistance providers, private-duty nursing providers, licensed nursing facilities, developmental disability community services providers, and providers of certain child and adult mental health services;

(iii) determines the number of employees that would be eligible for coverage;

(iv) calculates the cost to the state of the increased payments after recognizing that nearly 70% of the increase will be covered by the federal government's portion of the payments; and

(v) calculates, to the extent possible, the cost incurred by other government programs, such as temporary assistance to needy families and medicaid, due to the lack of health insurance on the part of personal-care attendants and other direct-care employees and calculates the projected impact, if any, that providing these employees with adequate health insurance would have on future utilization of and costs incurred by other government programs;

(b) determines, in conjunction with the commissioner of insurance, the health insurance coverage that employers would be required to provide to personal-care attendants and direct-care employees in order to be eligible to receive the earmarked increase in medicaid payments;

(c) determines the cost, if any, to individual employees for the proposed health insurance;

(d) calculates the increased need for and projected availability of personal-care attendants and direct-care employees in Montana over the next 20 to 30 years as a result of the aging population and examines whether the provision of health insurance for those workers has the potential to increase the number and quality of workers available in the future;

(e) explores the possibility of combining any health insurance program developed for personal-care attendants and direct-care employees with other state programs designed to provide Montanans with increased access to affordable health insurance, such as the small business health insurance pool; and

(f) calculates, to the extent possible, the health care costs that are shifted to the insurance premiums and other health care expenses paid by privately insured Montanans and their employers or that are incurred by hospitals as uncompensated care due to the lack of health insurance for personal-care attendants and direct-care employees.

(2) (a) The department of public health and human services may, to the extent that funds are available, establish a pilot program to provide employer-sponsored health insurance to a portion of the personal-care attendants and direct-care employees who are determined by the department to be eligible for the pilot program by increasing medicaid payments to their employers with the requirement that the increased payments be used to provide those employees with health insurance that meets the requirements established by the department.

(b) The purpose of the pilot program is to test the feasibility, impact, and cost of providing health insurance payments to the employers of personal-care attendants and direct-care employees. The pilot program may require partial payment of health insurance costs by an employee if necessary.

(c) In establishing and conducting the pilot program, the department of public health and human services shall consult with the commissioner of insurance, persons providing medicaid personal assistance and direct-care services and their employers, and other interested parties.

(3) If a pilot program is established, the department of public health and human services shall monitor the pilot program, shall report its study findings and pilot program results, if any, to the legislature, and shall report on the feasibility, impact, and cost of providing health insurance to personal-care attendants and direct-care employees who provide medicaid-funded long-term care services, as designated in subsection (1)(a). The report must be made to the legislature as provided in 5-11-210.

(4) The department of public health and human services may adopt rules to implement this section." Effective May 16, 2007, and terminates January 1, 2009.

Study of Conversion to Private Coverage: Chapter 523, L. 1995, requires the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to, if sufficient funds are available from public and private sources, contract with the Legislative Auditor for a study of the conversion and cost-effectiveness of converting Medicaid to a combined private insurance and medical savings accounts program. After the study is completed, if the Office of Budget and Program Planning decides that conversion would be cost-effective, the Department must apply to the United States government for a waiver of Medicaid statutes and rules and, if the waiver is granted, convert Medicaid to a combined private insurance and medical savings accounts program. The act is effective July 1, 1995, and terminates October 1, 1996.

Implied Contracts — Medicaid Payments: The principle underlying the implied contract doctrine is that one person should not be permitted to be unjustly enriched at the expense of another but should be required to make restitution for property or benefits received where it is just and equitable that such restitution be made and where such action involves no violation or frustration of law or opposition to public policy, either directly or indirectly. The circumstances on the record do not justify payment be made on any formula other than the "reasonable costs" formula as set forth in federal Medicaid statutes and regulations. Case Notes

Medicaid — Payer of Last Resort — Provider Obliged to Bill Third-Party Insurers First — Summary Judgment Granted: A passenger injured in a car accident incurred over $200,000 in hospital costs in the first 2 months following the accident. His mother, who had been appointed the conservator of his estate, successfully applied for Medicaid on her son's behalf. However, both drivers involved in the accident had insurance coverage that applied to the injuries incurred. Instead of billing Medicaid, the hospital billed the estate directly and filed a notice of lien with the insurance companies and the estate's attorneys. The estate sued the hospital, claiming the hospital was obligated to first bill Medicaid and accept its payment as payment in full. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the hospital, agreeing that the hospital was obligated to bill third-party insurers under the Montana Medicaid program, which provides that Medicaid is the payer of last resort. Estate of Donald v. Kalispell Regional Medical Center, 2011 MT 166, 361 Mont. 179, 258 P.3d 395.

Constitutionality of Montana Medicaid "No Corporation, No Trust" Rule: A provision of the Montana Medicaid Manual adopted by the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) established a "no corporation, no trust" rule providing that property held in a trust or owned by a corporation is not owned by a filing/assistance unit, so no personal property exclusions could be applied to trust or corporation property regardless of whether any member of the filing/assistance unit was a trust beneficiary or corporate shareholder. In order to circumvent the rule and reduce countable resources to qualify for Medicaid services for his wife, plaintiff traded a one-third interest in a corporation for a truck to be used by plaintiff for business purposes and self-support, thus converting the countable corporate interest into an excludable interest. Plaintiff later contended that the "no corporation, no trust" rule violated equal protection under the state constitution because no rational basis existed for discriminating between whether an asset is countable or excludable based on the form of ownership and because neither the goal of controlling Montana Medicaid costs nor any other professional reason provided a rational basis for the discrimination. The Supreme Court applied the rational basis test and agreed. The court noted a 2008 DPHHS rule that apparently permits an exclusion for property essential for self-support that is owned by a limited liability company, while still disallowing an exclusion for property owned by a corporation such as plaintiff's. Therefore, DPHHS's premise that a rational basis existed for excluding plaintiff's corporate property could not withstand scrutiny, and the court concluded that the "no corporation, no trust" rule as applied to plaintiff violated the right to equal protection. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008).

Medicaid — Allowable Use of Posteligibility Income to Pay Costs of Preeligibility Nursing Home Care: The District Court upheld the decision of the Board of Public Assistance affirming a decision by a hearings examiner preventing a woman from using her posteligibility income to pay for nursing home care costs incurred prior to her eligibility for Medicaid because the services were not covered by Medicaid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. A final decision by the administrator of the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), after a review of federal legislative history, concluded that a policy that allowed a deduction in the posteligibility program process only if an individual was eligible for Medicaid during the period was inconsistent with CMS policy. Under the CMS decision, costs incurred for services prior to Medicaid eligibility must be considered "not a Medicaid covered service" as long as they were not actually covered by Medicaid, and consistency with that decision was required in the Montana Medicaid plan. Thus, the use of posteligibility income to pay for nursing home care costs incurred prior to eligibility for Medicaid was allowed. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008).

Medicaid — Disallowance of Offset of Countable Resources by Amount of Accumulated Nursing Home Costs Affirmed: The District Court upheld a decision by the Board of Public Assistance affirming a decision by a hearings examiner not to offset plaintiffs' countable resources by the amount of their accumulated nursing home care expenses. The court reasoned that because federal law does not allow a deduction for incurred medical expenses in resource determinations, equal protection did not apply. On appeal, plaintiffs asserted that failure to allow the offset had no rational basis and therefore violated equal protection. However, plaintiffs provided no authority showing that federal law requires states to use resource spend down in administering Medicaid, so the equal protection claim was without merit and the District Court was affirmed. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008), distinguishing Deaconess Medical Center of Billings, Inc. v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 222 M 127, 720 P2d 1165 (1986).

Question of Applicability of Federal Medicaid Law to Members of Hutterite Colony — Remand: The District Court overruled a hearings examiner's findings that an express trust existed between an incorporated Hutterite Colony and the colony members. The hearings examiner determined that because colony trust assets were available to colony members and that because trust assets were in excess of the $3,000 allowable resource limit, the colony members were ineligible to receive federal Medicaid benefits. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied neutral secular principles of law to this church property dispute and held that an express trust existed between the corporation and the colony members. However, the court did not reach the issues of whether the colony owed a legal duty to support its members and whether colony members were eligible for benefits under the family-related Medicaid program, so the case was remanded for further findings and consideration of applicable federal law. In re Fair Hearing of Hofer v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 302, 329 M 368, 124 P3d 1098 (2005).

Medicaid Provider Reenrollment — Conviction of Unsworn Falsification to Authorities Reversed on Grounds of Insufficient Evidence of Intent to Mislead: Vainio, an optometrist, was convicted of one count of unsworn falsification to authorities under 45-7-203 in connection with information omitted on a Medicaid provider reenrollment form. The state claimed that Vainio should have listed his sister and wife as managing employees, his brother as a co-owner of the business, and all of the counties in which he owned optometric stores. Vainio had a longstanding relationship with the Medicaid program by the time that he filled out the reenrollment form, and maintained that he merely filled out the reenrollment form as he had the previous enrollment form. Section 45-7-203 requires proof that information was omitted from the form with the conscious objective of misleading a public servant in the performance of official duties. The state never presented any evidence of Vainio's intent to mislead, and absent sufficient evidence of that intent, the conviction was reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001).

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA. The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177 (1993), and distinguishing Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 M 212, 4 P3d 1193 (2000).

Supplementing Medicaid Payments Made Under "Reasonable Costs" Formula Prohibited: Participation in the federal Medicaid program is voluntary, but if a state elects to participate, it must comply with the requirements of the federal statutes and regulations in order to remain eligible for federal funds. Montana as a participant in the Medicaid program must conform to the Social Security Act and all valid regulations promulgated thereunder as long as it remains in the program. Under federal law and regulations, a state plan must provide that the Medicaid agency must limit participation in the Medicaid program to providers who accept, as payment in full, the amounts paid by the agency under the federal "reasonable costs" formula. Supplementing Medicaid payments beyond this formula is prohibited. Flathead Health Center v. Flathead County, 183 M 211, 598 P2d 1111, 36 St. Rep. 1465 (1979).

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 711, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 4 and 5] [53-6-108 and 53-6-113] grant authority to the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] and to the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] to adopt rules to administer and supervise services provided under the Montana medicaid program.

The bill expands the existing rulemaking authority of the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] under [section 5] [53-6-113] and provides new authority for the department to adopt rules under [section 4] [53-6-108] governing the application of sanctions or action against health care facilities that fail to meet the requirements for certification as a medicaid service provider. Under [section 5] [53-6-113], the department is authorized to establish rules necessary for reimbursement or payment of medicaid service providers. It is intended that these rules address the types of medical services that are eligible for medicaid reimbursement; the nature, amount, scope, and duration of services; the rates for reimbursement of services, and the department's interaction with medicaid service providers.

Rules adopted under [sections 4 and 5] [53-6-108 and 53-6-113] should be in accordance with federal regulations applicable to the medicaid program under Title XIX of the federal Social Security Act. In establishing rules on the scope of services and the rates for reimbursement of services, the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] should consider the amount of funds appropriated by the legislature for the Montana medicaid program. The department should also consider the need to provide for services in an efficient and cost-effective manner.

In adopting rules governing the provision of medicaid services, the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] shall take particular care to provide only those services that are medically necessary and to ensure that such services are provided in the least costly setting and by the most efficient and cost-effective means. For example, hospital treatment should not be provided if adequate but less costly nursing home or physician's office services are available.

Under [section 4] [53-6-108], the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] and the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] are given authority to establish standards for the health, safety, and care provided in a health care facility. This authority is intended to be in addition to existing authority of the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] under Title 50 of the Montana Code Annotated.

Pursuant to [section 4] [53-6-108], the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] shall adopt rules establishing appropriate sanctions or action that may be taken against a health care facility that does not meet the minimum standards for certification as a medicaid provider. Such sanctions or action may include civil monetary penalties with interest, the suspension and termination of medicaid certification, and the appointment of management personnel to oversee the operation of a health care facility on a temporary basis in the case of an emergency or when necessary for the orderly closure of a facility or to bring a facility into compliance with minimum standards. This authority is in addition to the authority provided to the department under section 53-6-111, MCA.

The bill also provides the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] authority to adopt rules establishing eligibility for medicaid payment of premiums on behalf of individuals eligible for medicare under Title XVIII of the federal Social Security Act. It is intended that these rules establish the conditions for payments by the department to the federal government for supplemental insurance coverage provided under medicare.

Finally, the bill grants the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] authority to adopt rules for the implementation of local demonstration programs, which would not be available to all residents of the state. The purpose of these demonstration programs is to provide for the delivery of different medical services to different classes of medically indigent persons on a trial basis in order to assess the efficiency or cost-effectiveness of providing alternative services."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 276, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it amends section 53-6-111, MCA, to authorize the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] to adopt rules in subsections (2) through (5).

Under present law, SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] has express rulemaking authority to administer and supervise the state's medical assistance program under Title 53 of the MCA. There is no express rulemaking authority for the Department to adopt rules establishing penalties and sanctions applicable to providers of medical assistance services and supplies who engage in fraudulent, abusive, or improper activities. The Montana Administrative Procedure Act, section 2-4-102(11)(a), MCA, requires that substantive rules be adopted under expressly delegated authority in order to be valid.

Federal regulations require the state to suspend or terminate from the Medicaid program any provider who has also been terminated from the Medicare program or lose federal financial participation in Medicaid payments to those providers. If SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] does not have the authority to suspend or terminate those providers, the state must continue to pay them but without federal funds which presently amount to 63 percent of the payments. Additional funds from the state's general fund would be needed to pay those providers of medical assistance in Montana.

The intent of this bill is to grant to the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] express authority to adopt rules establishing penalties and sanctions as enumerated in subsections (3) through (5) and the flexibility to comply with federal regulations and to adopt additional penalties and sanctions necessary to provide uninterrupted access to medical care and supplies in areas of Montana where alternative sources are unavailable."

Case Notes

Constitutionality of Montana Medicaid "No Corporation, No Trust" Rule: A provision of the Montana Medicaid Manual adopted by the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) established a "no corporation, no trust" rule providing that property held in a trust or owned by a corporation is not owned by a filing/assistance unit, so no personal property exclusions could be applied to trust or corporation property regardless of whether any member of the filing/assistance unit was a trust beneficiary or corporate shareholder. In order to circumvent the rule and reduce countable resources to qualify for Medicaid services for his wife, plaintiff traded a one-third interest in a corporation for a truck to be used by plaintiff for business purposes and self-support, thus converting the countable corporate interest into an excludable interest. Plaintiff later contended that the "no corporation, no trust" rule violated equal protection under the state constitution because no rational basis existed for discriminating between whether an asset is countable or excludable based on the form of ownership and because neither the goal of controlling Montana Medicaid costs nor any other professional reason provided a rational basis for the discrimination. The Supreme Court applied the rational basis test and agreed. The court noted a 2008 DPHHS rule that apparently permits an exclusion for property essential for self-support that is owned by a limited liability company, while still disallowing an exclusion for property owned by a corporation such as plaintiff's. Therefore, DPHHS's premise that a rational basis existed for excluding plaintiff's corporate property could not withstand scrutiny, and the court concluded that the "no corporation, no trust" rule as applied to plaintiff violated the right to equal protection. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008).

Medicaid — Allowable Use of Posteligibility Income to Pay Costs of Preeligibility Nursing Home Care: The District Court upheld the decision of the Board of Public Assistance affirming a decision by a hearings examiner preventing a woman from using her posteligibility income to pay for nursing home care costs incurred prior to her eligibility for Medicaid because the services were not covered by Medicaid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. A final decision by the administrator of the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), after a review of federal legislative history, concluded that a policy that allowed a deduction in the posteligibility program process only if an individual was eligible for Medicaid during the period was inconsistent with CMS policy. Under the CMS decision, costs incurred for services prior to Medicaid eligibility must be considered "not a Medicaid covered service" as long as they were not actually covered by Medicaid, and consistency with that decision was required in the Montana Medicaid plan. Thus, the use of posteligibility income to pay for nursing home care costs incurred prior to eligibility for Medicaid was allowed. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008).

Medicaid — Disallowance of Offset of Countable Resources by Amount of Accumulated Nursing Home Costs Affirmed: The District Court upheld a decision by the Board of Public Assistance affirming a decision by a hearings examiner not to offset plaintiffs' countable resources by the amount of their accumulated nursing home care expenses. The court reasoned that because federal law does not allow a deduction for incurred medical expenses in resource determinations, equal protection did not apply. On appeal, plaintiffs asserted that failure to allow the offset had no rational basis and therefore violated equal protection. However, plaintiffs provided no authority showing that federal law requires states to use resource spend down in administering Medicaid, so the equal protection claim was without merit and the District Court was affirmed. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008), distinguishing Deaconess Medical Center of Billings, Inc. v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 222 M 127, 720 P2d 1165 (1986).

Medical Provider Liable for Reimbursement of Medicaid Payments Erroneously Billed Under Pre-1999 Billing Codes: A 1999 change in Medicaid billing procedures implemented a national bill coding system that required medical providers to bill for each visit rather than for the actual time spent providing the service. Despite the change, Kirchner continued to use the old billing method until an audit revealed the problem. The Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) then required Kirchner to pay back fees that were improperly paid to Kirchner using the old coding system. Kirchner contested the DPHHS findings, but all administrative factfinders and the District Court concluded that Kirchner had in fact overbilled the Medicaid program. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the DPHHS interpretation of its rules and the billing codes was reasonable, that the findings of the hearings officer were adequately supported by the evidence and not clearly erroneous, and, in deference to the DPHHS interpretation of its rule, that the agency's interpretation would be sustained. Thus, Kirchner was not entitled to payment for overbilled services and was liable for reimbursement of the overpayment. Kirchner v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 202, 328 M 203, 119 P3d 82 (2005).

Interpretation of Administrative Rule Precluding Reimbursement of Shipping Costs for Diapers Affirmed: ARM 37.86.1806 states that Medicaid will not reimburse delivery fees in addition to the amount reimbursed for diapers. The Department of Public Health and Human Services interpreted the rule to preclude Medicaid reimbursement of any costs associated with transporting diapers from a provider to Medicaid recipients and concluded that shipping fees for diapers therefore included delivery fees. Plaintiff contested the Department's interpretation, and following an administrative hearing, the Department's interpretation was affirmed. On appeal, the Supreme Court examined the rule along with 1995 and 2001 amendments to the rule and concluded that the Department's interpretation was reasonable and not plainly inconsistent with the spirit of the rule. Plaintiff failed to meet the burden of establishing error based on the common meaning of terms or on the fact that the Department's policy of paying claims on an "as submitted" basis and then later auditing the payments constituted an interpretation of the rule as allowing reimbursement of diaper shipping costs. The District Court decision upholding the Department's interpretation was affirmed. Juro's United Drug v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2004 MT 117, 321 M 167, 90 P3d 388 (2004).

Veterans Administration (Now Department of Veterans Affairs) Per Diem Payments to Be Reported as Third-Party Liability Payments for Medicaid Reimbursement — Reasonable Administrative Rule Defining Third Party: A longstanding administrative rule of the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS), ARM 46.12.304 (now ARM 37.85.407), required monthly Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) per diem payments to be reported as third-party liability payments that would result in a reduction of Medicaid reimbursements. Plaintiff challenged the interpretation of the administrative rule with the Board of Public Assistance, which confirmed DPHHS's interpretation, and the District Court affirmed the finding of the Board. On appeal to the Supreme Court, plaintiff asserted that it was not required to report its receipt of monthly Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) per diem payments as anything other than a subsidy to offset against its general operating expenses. The Supreme Court found that the plain meaning of the rule provided specific notice that a public agency will be considered a third party if it is liable to pay all or part of the cost of medical treatment and medical-related services for a person's personal injury, disease, or illness. The rule sufficiently identified entities considered third parties, which included the Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs). DPHHS's interpretation of the rule lay within the range of reasonable interpretation permitted by the wording of the rule and was not plainly inconsistent with the spirit or plain language of the rule. Therefore, DPHHS's interpretation was correct, and the District Court did not err in holding that the decision of the Board of Public Assistance affirming DPHHS's interpretation was legally correct. Glendive Medical Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 131, 310 M 156, 49 P3d 560 (2002).

Contested Case — Requirement for Judicial Review — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Plaintiff, a nursing home operator, was notified by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) that it was disallowing certain nursing care costs claimed by plaintiff. The Department notified plaintiff that a hearing could be requested under the Department's administrative rules. Plaintiff requested time extensions in which to submit objections, and the Department agreed. The Department finally set a time limitation that plaintiff did not meet. The Department then filed its reimbursement rate for plaintiff. Plaintiff filed a complaint in District Court for judicial review of the Department's determination. The District Court dismissed the case. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that only a party who has exhausted all administrative remedies is entitled to judicial review if aggrieved in a contested case. A contested case is a determination of legal rights after an opportunity for hearing. Because there was no hearing in this case, dismissal was proper. B.G.M. Enterprises v. St., 673 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 1827 (1983) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports).

Supplementing Medicaid Payments Made Under "Reasonable Costs" Formula Prohibited: Participation in the federal Medicaid program is voluntary, but if a state elects to participate, it must comply with the requirements of the federal statutes and regulations in order to remain eligible for federal funds. Montana as a participant in the Medicaid program must conform to the Social Security Act and all valid regulations promulgated thereunder as long as it remains in the program. Under federal law and regulations, a state plan must provide that the Medicaid agency must limit participation in the Medicaid program to providers who accept, as payment in full, the amounts paid by the agency under the federal "reasonable costs" formula. Supplementing Medicaid payments beyond this formula is prohibited. Flathead Health Center v. Flathead County, 183 M 211, 598 P2d 1111, 36 St. Rep. 1465 (1979).

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules for eligibility that comply with federal requirements under Title XIX of the federal Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396, et seq.) and 42 CFR 430 through 498. The rules of the department should address the standards of eligibility for the Montana medicaid program, including income and resource criteria, treatment of resources, specification of groups eligible to receive medicaid, and all other considerations described in 53-6-113(2) through (4)."

Amendment of Administrative Rule Directed: Section 1, Ch. 457, L. 1989, provided: "The department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] shall amend rule 46.12.1204, Administrative Rules of Montana, to allow the sale of an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded that is made after July 1, 1982, to have property costs computed for the new owner at the lesser of historical costs or the rate used for all other intermediate care facilities, subject to the limitations in 42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(13)(C)." Effective April 5, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 711, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 4 and 5] [53-6-108 and 53-6-113] grant authority to the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] and to the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] to adopt rules to administer and supervise services provided under the Montana medicaid program.

The bill expands the existing rulemaking authority of the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] under [section 5] [53-6-113] and provides new authority for the department to adopt rules under [section 4] [53-6-108] governing the application of sanctions or action against health care facilities that fail to meet the requirements for certification as a medicaid service provider. Under [section 5] [53-6-113], the department is authorized to establish rules necessary for reimbursement or payment of medicaid service providers. It is intended that these rules address the types of medical services that are eligible for medicaid reimbursement; the nature, amount, scope, and duration of services; the rates for reimbursement of services, and the department's interaction with medicaid service providers.

Rules adopted under [sections 4 and 5] [53-6-108 and 53-6-113] should be in accordance with federal regulations applicable to the medicaid program under Title XIX of the federal Social Security Act. In establishing rules on the scope of services and the rates for reimbursement of services, the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] should consider the amount of funds appropriated by the legislature for the Montana medicaid program. The department should also consider the need to provide for services in an efficient and cost-effective manner.

In adopting rules governing the provision of medicaid services, the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] shall take particular care to provide only those services that are medically necessary and to ensure that such services are provided in the least costly setting and by the most efficient and cost-effective means. For example, hospital treatment should not be provided if adequate but less costly nursing home or physician's office services are available.

Under [section 4] [53-6-108], the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] and the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] are given authority to establish standards for the health, safety, and care provided in a health care facility. This authority is intended to be in addition to existing authority of the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health & human services] under Title 50 of the Montana Code Annotated.

Pursuant to [section 4] [53-6-108], the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] shall adopt rules establishing appropriate sanctions or action that may be taken against a health care facility that does not meet the minimum standards for certification as a medicaid provider. Such sanctions or action may include civil monetary penalties with interest, the suspension and termination of medicaid certification, and the appointment of management personnel to oversee the operation of a health care facility on a temporary basis in the case of an emergency or when necessary for the orderly closure of a facility or to bring a facility into compliance with minimum standards. This authority is in addition to the authority provided to the department under section 53-6-111, MCA.

The bill also provides the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] authority to adopt rules establishing eligibility for medicaid payment of premiums on behalf of individuals eligible for medicare under Title XVIII of the federal Social Security Act. It is intended that these rules establish the conditions for payments by the department to the federal government for supplemental insurance coverage provided under medicare.

Finally, the bill grants the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] authority to adopt rules for the implementation of local demonstration programs, which would not be available to all residents of the state. The purpose of these demonstration programs is to provide for the delivery of different medical services to different classes of medically indigent persons on a trial basis in order to assess the efficiency or cost-effectiveness of providing alternative services."

Case Notes

Medicaid — Allowable Use of Posteligibility Income to Pay Costs of Preeligibility Nursing Home Care: The District Court upheld the decision of the Board of Public Assistance affirming a decision by a hearings examiner preventing a woman from using her posteligibility income to pay for nursing home care costs incurred prior to her eligibility for Medicaid because the services were not covered by Medicaid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. A final decision by the administrator of the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), after a review of federal legislative history, concluded that a policy that allowed a deduction in the posteligibility program process only if an individual was eligible for Medicaid during the period was inconsistent with CMS policy. Under the CMS decision, costs incurred for services prior to Medicaid eligibility must be considered "not a Medicaid covered service" as long as they were not actually covered by Medicaid, and consistency with that decision was required in the Montana Medicaid plan. Thus, the use of posteligibility income to pay for nursing home care costs incurred prior to eligibility for Medicaid was allowed. Timm v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2008 MT 126, 343 M 11, 184 P3d 994 (2008).

Question of Applicability of Federal Medicaid Law to Members of Hutterite Colony — Remand: The District Court overruled a hearings examiner's findings that an express trust existed between an incorporated Hutterite Colony and the colony members. The hearings examiner determined that because colony trust assets were available to colony members and that because trust assets were in excess of the $3,000 allowable resource limit, the colony members were ineligible to receive federal Medicaid benefits. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied neutral secular principles of law to this church property dispute and held that an express trust existed between the corporation and the colony members. However, the court did not reach the issues of whether the colony owed a legal duty to support its members and whether colony members were eligible for benefits under the family-related Medicaid program, so the case was remanded for further findings and consideration of applicable federal law. In re Fair Hearing of Hofer v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 302, 329 M 368, 124 P3d 1098 (2005).

Interpretation of Administrative Rule Precluding Reimbursement of Shipping Costs for Diapers Affirmed: ARM 37.86.1806 states that Medicaid will not reimburse delivery fees in addition to the amount reimbursed for diapers. The Department of Public Health and Human Services interpreted the rule to preclude Medicaid reimbursement of any costs associated with transporting diapers from a provider to Medicaid recipients and concluded that shipping fees for diapers therefore included delivery fees. Plaintiff contested the Department's interpretation, and following an administrative hearing, the Department's interpretation was affirmed. On appeal, the Supreme Court examined the rule along with 1995 and 2001 amendments to the rule and concluded that the Department's interpretation was reasonable and not plainly inconsistent with the spirit of the rule. Plaintiff failed to meet the burden of establishing error based on the common meaning of terms or on the fact that the Department's policy of paying claims on an "as submitted" basis and then later auditing the payments constituted an interpretation of the rule as allowing reimbursement of diaper shipping costs. The District Court decision upholding the Department's interpretation was affirmed. Juro's United Drug v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2004 MT 117, 321 M 167, 90 P3d 388 (2004).

Veterans Administration (Now Department of Veterans Affairs) Per Diem Payments to Be Reported as Third-Party Liability Payments for Medicaid Reimbursement — Reasonable Administrative Rule Defining Third Party: A longstanding administrative rule of the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS), ARM 46.12.304 (now ARM 37.85.407), required monthly Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) per diem payments to be reported as third-party liability payments that would result in a reduction of Medicaid reimbursements. Plaintiff challenged the interpretation of the administrative rule with the Board of Public Assistance, which confirmed DPHHS's interpretation, and the District Court affirmed the finding of the Board. On appeal to the Supreme Court, plaintiff asserted that it was not required to report its receipt of monthly Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) per diem payments as anything other than a subsidy to offset against its general operating expenses. The Supreme Court found that the plain meaning of the rule provided specific notice that a public agency will be considered a third party if it is liable to pay all or part of the cost of medical treatment and medical-related services for a person's personal injury, disease, or illness. The rule sufficiently identified entities considered third parties, which included the Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs). DPHHS's interpretation of the rule lay within the range of reasonable interpretation permitted by the wording of the rule and was not plainly inconsistent with the spirit or plain language of the rule. Therefore, DPHHS's interpretation was correct, and the District Court did not err in holding that the decision of the Board of Public Assistance affirming DPHHS's interpretation was legally correct. Glendive Medical Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 131, 310 M 156, 49 P3d 560 (2002).

Contested Case — Requirement for Judicial Review — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Plaintiff, a nursing home operator, was notified by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) that it was disallowing certain nursing care costs claimed by plaintiff. The Department notified plaintiff that a hearing could be requested under the Department's administrative rules. Plaintiff requested time extensions in which to submit objections, and the Department agreed. The Department finally set a time limitation that plaintiff did not meet. The Department then filed its reimbursement rate for plaintiff. Plaintiff filed a complaint in District Court for judicial review of the Department's determination. The District Court dismissed the case. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that only a party who has exhausted all administrative remedies is entitled to judicial review if aggrieved in a contested case. A contested case is a determination of legal rights after an opportunity for hearing. Because there was no hearing in this case, dismissal was proper. B.G.M. Enterprises v. St., 673 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 1827 (1983) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports).

Implied Contracts — Medicaid Payments: The principle underlying the implied contract doctrine is that one person should not be permitted to be unjustly enriched at the expense of another but should be required to make restitution for property or benefits received where it is just and equitable that such restitution be made and where such action involves no violation or frustration of law or opposition to public policy, either directly or indirectly. The circumstances on the record do not justify payment be made on any formula other than the "reasonable costs" formula as set forth in federal Medicaid statutes and regulations. Flathead Health Center v. Flathead County, 183 M 211, 598 P2d 1111, 36 St. Rep. 1465 (1979).

Performance of Duty: Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) performed its duty in setting flat rate compensation for care of patients by skilled nursing homes, pending completion of statewide cost survey, and thus mandamus did not lie to compel Board to pay reasonable cost of care rather than flat rate. Lee v. Laitinen, 152 M 230, 448 P2d 154 (1968).

Occupational Therapists Not Permitted to Use Therapeutic Modalities — Rule Allowing for Reimbursement Void: The use of therapeutic modalities by occupational therapists has not been authorized by the Legislature and is impermissible. Therefore, ARM 46.12.547 (now repealed), authorizing occupational therapists to be reimbursed through Medicaid for modalities performed in the course of treatment, is invalid as an improper exercise of rulemaking authority. 44 A.G. Case Notes

Authority of Department to Contractually Bind State: Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) cannot claim, because funds might be cut off from the federal Department of Health, Education, and Welfare due to payments of standard charges to private hospitals, that it is not liable on contracts entered into with private hospitals as this section gives the Department authority to enter into contracts with either private or public hospitals and makes the Department and state liable for standard charges regardless of potential loss of funds from federal Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 167 M 383, 538 P2d 1021, 32 St. Rep. 801 (1975).

Medicaid Reimbursement: The department has authority under this section and 53-6-141 (now repealed) to contract with hospitals to reimburse them for "full and adequate costs" incurred by Medicaid patients, and the department rather than the federal government is the real party in interest under such contracts. Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 167 M 383, 538 P2d 1021 (1975).

(b) upon application, he would be eligible for financial assistance under any one of the federally aided programs referred to above;

(c) he would be entitled to financial assistance under one of the federally aided categories except that he does not meet the durational residence requirements or relative responsibility requirements of any of the public assistance programs above enumerated;

(d) he is in a medical institution and if he were no longer in such institution he would be eligible for financial assistance under one of the above programs;

(i) he is under 21 years of age, was in foster care under the supervision of the state, and has been adopted as a "hard-to-place" child.

(2) The department of social and rehabilitation services may by rule establish more restrictive property ownership eligibility criteria than required by federal law for federally aided categories of public assistance." Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 649 in (1), near beginning, inserted "under the Montana medicaid program"; and inserted (5) relating to medical assistance to pregnant women and to infants. Amendment effective July 1, 1989, and terminates June 30, 1991.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 310, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it amends 53-6-113 to authorize the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] to adopt rules to govern eligibility for the Montana medicaid program.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules for eligibility that comply with federal requirements under Title XIX of the federal Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396, et seq.) and 42 CFR 430 through 498. The rules of the department should address the standards of eligibility for the Montana medicaid program, including income and resource criteria, treatment of resources, specification of groups eligible to receive medicaid, and all other considerations described in 53-6-113(2) through (4)."

1987 Amendment: In (1)(a) and (1)(e) substituted "aid to families with dependent children" for "aid to dependent children".

1981 Amendment: Changed "shall" to "may" near the beginning of (1); changed "federally aided public assistance programs: old age assistance, aid to the blind, aid to dependent children, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled" to "federally funded supplemental security income assistance or aid to dependent children" in (1)(a); inserted (2) allowing the Department to establish more restrictive property ownership eligibility criteria than federally required; and made minor changes in phraseology.

1981 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 127 (Ch. 399, L. 1981) provided: "The bill as amended gives the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] rulemaking authority to grant medical assistance to one or more categories of persons who are eligible for federal financial assistance. These categories include supplemental security income assistance, aid to dependent children, and aid to certain others who may be in financial distress due to high medical expenditures. Furthermore, the bill gives the Department the authority to adopt rules that include eligibility criteria that are more restrictive than federal criteria.

Under present law, the Department must grant medical assistance to all persons in the categories listed in 53-6-131, MCA. The Department presently has express rulemaking authority to adopt rules to include federal eligibility requirements for each category and to define medical assistance but does not have authority to limit services by category of persons.

The availability of federal financial assistance as well as federal eligibility criteria will probably be changed next fiscal year. The Department needs to have the authority to redetermine eligibility criteria and to limit the categories of persons to whom medical assistance will be made available in order to choose the options which offer the most efficient and least costly eligibility system within financial limits."

Case Notes

Medicaid Third-Party Recovery Laws Inapplicable to Tobacco Settlement — Settlement Not Trigger for Remainder Payment: Plaintiff, on behalf of her deceased husband who had previously assigned a medical care claim to the state, contended that when Montana entered into a master settlement agreement with tobacco manufacturers based in part on Medicaid statistics, the agreement had the effect of releasing the remainder of any settlement money to Medicaid recipients pursuant to 53-2-612. The District Court disagreed, concluding that because the tobacco litigation was neither initiated by the Department of Public Health and Human Services nor filed in the name of the Medicaid recipients, the settlement did not trigger a remainder payment under 53-2-612(3)(c). The Supreme Court affirmed. Under the agreement, the definition of releasing parties excludes individual Medicaid recipients, and "released claims" includes only those claims that the state could have brought, so the state would have no standing to assert the individuals' claims for damages. Further, if there was any question as to whether Medicaid third-party recovery laws applied to the settlement payments, Congress made clear that they do not through passage of 42 U.S.C. 1396b(d)(3) in 1999. [Section 4] [53-6-804] authorizes the commissioner and the department to adopt rules regarding requirements for certification of long-term care insurance policies and certificates for the purposes of qualification for medical assistance benefits. [Section 5] [53-6-805] requires the department to adopt rules necessary for the administration of long-term care insurance partnerships, including eligibility requirements for disregard of resources and amounts of resources to be disregarded for the purposes of qualification for medical assistance benefits. In adopting rules pursuant to these sections, the commissioner and the department shall take into consideration the goal of reducing expenditures for long-term care by the Montana medicaid program."

(i) after the death of the recipient's surviving spouse, if any; and

(ii) if there is no surviving child of the recipient who is under age 21, blind, or permanently and totally disabled"; substituted (4) regarding recovery procedures for former language that read: "(4) Recoveries must be prorated to the federal government and the state in the proportion to which each contributed to the medical assistance. Recovery for medical assistance paid prior to July 1, 1974, shall be prorated to reimburse the county share of participation. The provisions of this section are hereby extended to provide for the recovery of all medical assistance paid under this part and likewise to all medical aid to the aged assistance paid by the department of social and rehabilitation services during the period of time July 1, 1965, through June 30, 1967"; and made minor changes in style. Compiler's Comments

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 525, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because [section 1] [53-6-145] requires the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] and the department of labor [and industry] to adopt rules governing the use of personal assistants by persons with disabilities.

The legislature intends that the rules adopted by the departments allow a person with a disability or an immediately involved representative, such as a parent or guardian, to arrange for and direct the use of a personal assistant. The rules must allow the person with a disability to act as though the person is the employer, for the purposes of selection, management, and supervision, of the personal assistant in making the decisions of who to employ, terms of employment, length of employment, and other matters, although the personal assistant is the employee of another person or entity. Before a person with a disability would be allowed to act as though that person is the employer, the person must also have a plan of care approved by a physician or health care professional, stating what aspects of the disabled person's care the personal assistant may be assigned.

The contents of a plan of care must be addressed by rule and must include the individual's needs for personal assistance services, a plan for emergency back-up, and tasks assigned to the personal assistant. The plan of care may also address training, recruitment, and replacement of personal assistants and schedules for supervision and annual review of care by the health care professional."

Case Notes

Medicaid Provider Reenrollment — Conviction of Unsworn Falsification to Authorities Reversed on Grounds of Insufficient Evidence of Intent to Mislead: Vainio, an optometrist, was convicted of one count of unsworn falsification to authorities under 45-7-203 in connection with information omitted on a Medicaid provider reenrollment form. The state claimed that Vainio should have listed his sister and wife as managing employees, his brother as a co-owner of the business, and all of the counties in which he owned optometric stores. Vainio had a longstanding relationship with the Medicaid program by the time that he filled out the reenrollment form, and maintained that he merely filled out the reenrollment form as he had the previous enrollment form. Section 45-7-203 requires proof that information was omitted from the form with the conscious objective of misleading a public servant in the performance of official duties. The state never presented any evidence of Vainio's intent to mislead, and absent sufficient evidence of that intent, the conviction was reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001).

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA. The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. Administrative Reorganization of Rehabilitative and Visual Services: Effective March 30, 1984, the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) combined their rules governing rehabilitative services and rules governing visual services by repealing all visual services rules formerly found in Title 46, chapter 7, ARM, and adding new rules and amending existing rules to cover visual services in Title 46, chapter 6, ARM Rehabilitative services (now Title 37, chapter 30, ARM Vocational rehabilitation). Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 199, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in that it delegates authority to adopt rules in sections 1 through 4.

1. Under present law, SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] has express rulemaking authority to carry out most of its duties under Title 53. The Department's present authority includes the power to adopt rules to implement and carry out the following: child welfare services; Aid to Dependent Children [now FAIM financial assistance] programs; subsidized adoption; protective services for adults; Medical Assistance programs; sheltered workshop programs; community based services; community homes and protective services for the developmentally disabled; and vocational rehabilitation programs.

2. While there are duties for which SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] has express rulemaking authority, there also are duties for which the Department's rulemaking authority could only be implied. The Montana Administrative Procedure Act, Section 2-4-102(11)(a), MCA, requires that substantive rules be adopted under express authority in order to be valid. Under an agreement with the Administrative Code Committee [now appropriate administrative rule review committee], SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] introduced legislation to eliminate this gap in the Department's express authority. This bill gives SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] express rulemaking authority to adopt rules to comply with federal law; to carry out its responsibilities for public welfare; and to administer vocational rehabilitation for the blind.

3. The express authority given to SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] under this bill will allow the Department to adopt rules which cover the following areas: eligibility requirements for various services; scope of services to be offered; specific criteria that providers of services must meet to qualify as providers; how, when, and in what form various types of assistance will be offered; and procedure for applying for and receiving aid. The area of social services is a field which evolves as the needs of the population change. Federal programs and their concomitant regulations are constantly being revised and altered. This legislation allows SRS [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] to adapt the specifics of its social services programs to meet those federal changes but within the confines of state law."

(b) is eligible for services under the terms of an agreement with another state or with the federal government.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by law or as specified in any agreement with the federal government with respect to classes of individuals certified to the department thereunder, the following vocational rehabilitation services shall be provided at public cost only to blind individuals found to require financial assistance with respect thereto:

(a) physical restoration;

(b) transportation not provided to determine the eligibility of the individual for vocational rehabilitation services and the nature and extent of the services necessary;

(c) occupational and business licenses;

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 396, L. 1989, provided: "This bill requires a statement of intent because [sections 2 and 13] [53-7-102 and 53-7-315] require the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] to adopt administrative rules for vocational rehabilitation programs for persons with employment handicaps and for persons with blindness and low vision.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules necessary for administration of vocational rehabilitation programs provided for under this bill. Rules adopted by the department may relate to: the provision of vocational rehabilitation services, development of individual rehabilitation service plans, eligibility for services, application requirements, service goals and design, quality of services, provider relationships, program standards, program staffing, staff training, provider accounting procedures, confidential information, recipient grievance procedures, fair hearings, and definitions necessary to carry out the provisions of this bill.

In developing its rules, the department shall provide such methods of administering vocational rehabilitation services as may be required by the federal government for state participation in programs funded under the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973."

CHAPTER 9
SERVICES FOR VICTIMS OF CRIME

Part 1
The Crime Victims Compensation Act of Montana

Part Official Comments

Source: Portions of this part are from the Uniform Crime Victims Reparations Act, National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, 1973. The commissioners' prefatory note and selected portions of the commissioners' comments have been included under the heading Official Comments.

Prefatory Note: This Act [part] establishes a state-financed program of reparations to persons who suffer personal injury and dependents of those who are killed by criminally injurious conduct or in attempts to prevent criminal conduct or to apprehend criminals. Reparations are measured by economic loss such as medical expenses, loss of earnings, and costs incurred in obtaining services as a substitute for those the victim would have provided. Throughout, the emphasis is on the victim rather than the perpetrator of the crime.

The civil and criminal liability of the offender is not covered by this Act, save for provisions directing the offender to reimburse the State. The actual financial return to the State through this mechanism is not anticipated to be large, and a realistic appraisal is that the costs of the program will be borne by the State and its citizens. A variety of limitations and exclusions stated in the Act are designed to limit those costs. The suggested maximum allowance of $50,000 per victim, the exclusion of motor vehicle accidents (with some exceptions), and elimination of pain and suffering as an element of awards are illustrations.

Probably the most perplexing policy choice to be made by any state instituting a program of this sort relates to the relevance, if any, of the financial condition of the victim. Some would further reduce costs by denying reparations to victims able to bear the economic loss caused by crime. Others would conclude that the victim's losses should be borne by the State irrespective of his financial resources. This Act is drafted to accommodate either choice, but the clear preference is to eliminate any "financial needs" or "financial stress" test as a condition precedent to receipt of benefits. [Montana did not adopt a financial needs or stress test.] For those states taking the other view, the Act contains a provision including this condition but defining it in terms of financial hardship or stress rather than "need." The objective of that definition is to ensure that the program is not an unnecessary substitute for welfare but is a program to protect against substantial changes in life style caused by losses through crime.

A kindred issue is that of allocation of criminally caused loss through personal injury among competing sources of payment such as insurance, workmen's compensation and Social Security. This Act reflects the policy choice that these programs are primary. Implementation of that policy occurs in two ways. First, insurers are not entitled to claim reimbursement from the State for their expenditures. Second, victims who have been paid, or who are entitled to be paid, by insurers will have their claims against the State fund reduced by the amount of available insurance. In somewhat overly simplistic terms, the policy of the Act is to preclude double recovery for any criminal incident.

Administration of the Act is entrusted to a three-man Board whose members will serve full or part time, depending upon the expectable workload in any state. [Montana entrusted administration to the Division of Workers' Compensation.] The Act includes procedural details which will be seen to parallel provisions of the Uniform Administrative Procedures Act. Any State legislature in a state having such an administrative procedures act will be well advised to eliminate the duplicate provisions herein.

53-9-103. Definitions.

Official Comments

The words "criminally injurious conduct" are used throughout this part rather than the simple word "crime" because if the word "crime" were used, it would need to be given an artificial meaning. The reason is that not all crimes will result in reparations under this part, and those crimes which are reparable fall under the definition here given for "criminally injurious conduct."

The definitions of "economic loss" [not adopted in Montana] and its components are derived, with essential modifications, from the Uniform Motor Vehicle Accident Reparations Act.

The victims of a large percentage of crimes are relatives by blood or marriage of the offender or his accomplice, or live in the same household with him. The award of reparations in these cases involves serious questions of policy. Among those questions are the cost of the program, the possibility of fraud and collusion, and other social judgments. The unjust enrichment language at the end of the first sentence of [subsection (2)] may or may not alone provide adequate protection. The language at the end of [subsection (2)] should be included or omitted in an enacting State according to the legislative appraisal of the questions of policy involved.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 713, L. 1985, provided: "The department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] currently does not have authority to either operate special programs for physically disabled individuals or license group homes on their behalf. House Bill No. 798 [Ch. 713, L. 1985] would grant such authority.

It is intended that this bill would address some of the more necessary needs of severely disabled persons who:

(1) have a permanent impairment of a physical nature that is diagnosed as such by a physician and substantially limits a major life activity, such as walking, self-care, seeing, hearing, or speaking;

(2) do not meet the state definition for developmental disability;

(3) do not meet the eligibility criteria of vocational rehabilitation; and

(4) do not qualify for medicaid waiver services.

These people represent a wide variety of disability groups, such as people with head or spinal cord injuries, people with a debilitating disease (multiple sclerosis, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, myasthenia gravis, cancer, etc.), multiply-disabled people, etc. An effort is currently underway to identify such severely physically disabled individuals in addition to the 426 known people that were considered too severe for vocational rehabilitation services in 1984. The fastest growing segment of this group is the head-injured.

Services to this group are the exception rather than the rule, and traditionally have been medical maintenance types of assistance from medicaid, medicare, or medical assistance.

Rules adopted by the department would have to address the problem of personalized service needs of these individuals which usually do not fit an existing structured service model. Based upon some experience with this group, it is presumed that the following types of services would be necessary:

(1) teaching individuals how to better manage their own personal care and thereby reducing the medicaid costs;

(2) instructing people in the use of transit systems to reduce the need for therapy and to increase mobility.

The residential or in-home services for the physically disabled population include but are not limited to:

(1) personal assistance (locating and supervising attendants);

(2) mobility (exploring transportation modes, evaluation of devices needed for ambulation);

(3) home management (adaptive techniques or equipment to facilitate independent housekeeping);

(4) problem solving (problem identification and methods of solution);

(5) equipment (identification of assistive equipment needs: selection, operation, care, and maintenance);

(6) sexuality (sexuality and disability, dating, role expectations); and

(7) other services the department considers appropriate.

In addition to such programmatic rules, it is intended that the department adopt rules for licensing of community homes and in cooperation with other agencies adopt rules to ensure that such homes provide necessary services for the well-being of the individuals in the homes and that their surroundings are safe and healthful. It is intended that the rules providing for such standards recognize the needs of the individual, the resources of home operators, and the goals of this legislation."

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 669, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it requires the committee on telecommunications services for the handicapped to adopt rules to administer and fund a program to provide specialized telecommunications equipment and services to persons who are handicapped.

It is the intent of the legislature that the committee adopt rules, in accordance with [section 8] [53-19-307], as may be necessary to administer the program. Rules adopted by the committee may address matters such as:

(1) eligibility for participation in the program;

(2) the types of equipment and services to be provided under the program;

(3) the conditions and terms for the loan or lease of specialized telecommunications equipment to eligible participants in the program;

(4) requirements governing the purchase or lease of specialized telecommunications equipment from qualified wholesale manufacturers; and

(5) the definition of terms used in the bill.

In addition, the legislature intends that the program be self-supporting and be funded by a 10-cent monthly charge on telephone customers provided for in [section 12] [53-19-311].

In adopting rules, the committee should consider the success of programs in other states that provide specialized telecommunications equipment and services to the handicapped, including programs established in Oregon and Idaho."

Chapter Case Notes

Dismissal of Charges Required if Defendant's Fitness to Proceed Undetermined After Ninety Days — Civil Proceedings Mandated Upon Dismissal: Pursuant to Jackson v. Ind., 406 US 715 (1972), after only a pretrial competency hearing, it is unconstitutional to hold a person who is unfit to proceed without following civil and criminal commitment procedures provided by state law. Due process requires, at a minimum, some rational relationship between the nature and duration of commitment and its purpose. Thus, 46-14-221 requires the committing court to review a defendant's fitness to proceed within 90 days of the original commitment, and if, after 90 days, the court finds that the defendant is still unable to proceed and will not be fit to proceed within the reasonably foreseeable future, the proceeding against the defendant must be dismissed. However, dismissal does not mandate freedom for a potentially violent mentally ill individual. The statute provides that once the criminal proceeding is dismissed, the next mandatory step is to pursue civil commitment proceedings under chapter 21 or this chapter. However, an alternative procedure is available under 46-14-202, in which the court may set the time for determining fitness to proceed. St. v. Tison, 2003 MT 342, 318 M 465, 81 P3d 471 (2003), following St. v. Meeks, 2002 MT 246, 312 M 126, 58 P3d 167 (2002).

Part Compiler's Comments

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 381, L. 1991, provided: "This bill provides a new definition of seriously developmentally disabled and establishes a new administrative process as part of the commitment of seriously developmentally disabled persons to residential facilities of the state of Montana. These changes are necessary to provide a commitment standard and process that will meet the new mission that has been developed for the state-operated residential facilities.

The new definition of seriously developmentally disabled incorporates behavioral language to cover endangered and dangerous persons as well as self-help deficit language to cover current residents. The incorporation into the commitment process of an administrative screening team ensures that persons who are to be placed in a residential facility are thoroughly considered for placement in community services before a commitment may be made.

Rules are necessary to implement the administrative screening process. Rules necessary for the screening process must provide for the membership, terms, and various responsibilities of the team and the standards and procedures used by the team in making placement determinations. New rules are to be adopted to implement the changes in the definition of professional person."

Evidence of Serious Developmental Disability Warranting Involuntary Commitment: The District Court did not err in involuntarily committing W.M. to the Montana Developmental Center for 1 year after admitting clear and convincing evidence of serious developmental disability and in light of the unanimous opinion of witnesses who testified at the commitment hearing that W.M. could not be served in presently existing community group home settings. There was no showing that W.M.'s procedural and due process rights were violated. In re W.M., 252 M 225, 828 P2d 378, 49 St. Rep. 227 (1992).

1995 Amendment — Phrase Change: Section 21, Ch. 255, L. 1995, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in the MCA to a person who is developmentally disabled or to a developmentally disabled person to a person with developmental disabilities. The change was not to be made to the phrase "seriously developmentally disabled". In this section, the Code Commissioner has made the change in (1).

Case Notes

Finding That Developmentally Disabled Person Not Involuntarily Held at State Center Not Clearly Erroneous— Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Precluding Judicial Review: Respondent was admitted to the Montana Developmental Center (MDC) on an emergency commitment in 1999, and the commitment was extended for 2 successive years. The MDC treatment team eventually reported that respondent had made substantial improvement and was no longer seriously developmentally disabled and recommended referral for community-based services. The state moved the District Court to adopt the recommendations, but the court did not immediately rule on the motion. Meanwhile, respondent's commitment order expired, although respondent remained at MDC, lacking any place else to go. Respondent subsequently petitioned for declaratory and injunctive relief to compel the state to immediately place respondent in a community-based service, arguing that the state's failure to do so left respondent in a de facto involuntary commitment. The District Court found that respondent was not being held involuntarily and dismissed the petition, and respondent appealed. Because respondent had failed to exhaust the administrative process, the record was insufficient for the Supreme Court to determine whether any of respondent's constitutional rights were violated as a result of the delay in community placement. However, the court noted that after the commitment order expired, respondent was free to leave MDC but chose not to, so the District Court's finding that respondent was not held involuntarily was not clearly erroneous. The District Court was affirmed. In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Case Notes

Involuntary Commitment Affirmed Given District Court Consideration of Person's Situation, Needs, and Future Placement: Following numerous violent incidents while L.S. was in a community-based group home, L.S. was committed to the Montana Developmental Center (MDC) on an emergency basis. While at MDC, L.S.'s behavior materially improved. The state subsequently petitioned for commitment at MDC for up to 1 year. Witnesses for L.S. argued that the appropriate placement would be in community-based services. The District Court found that L.S. had a developmental disability and impaired cognitive functioning and, without adequate community-based services available, posed a sufficient risk of harm to self or others to meet the statutory definition of "seriously developmentally disabled". The court committed L.S. to MDC for 1 year or until suitable placement in community-based services was available. L.S. appealed the commitment, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court fully considered L.S.'s situation, needs, and future placement, and it was not an abuse of discretion to commit L.S. to MDC pending availability of community-based services. In re L.S., 2009 MT 83, 349 M 518, 204 P3d 707 (2009). See also In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005), and In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009).

Clear and Convincing Evidence Standard of Proof Required in Commitment Proceeding Involving Persons With Developmental Disabilities: G.M. is a developmentally disabled man in his 30s who was repeatedly recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for about half his life. In 2007, the state petitioned to recommit G.M. G.M. filed a prehearing motion requesting that the state be required to prove physical facts or evidence beyond a reasonable doubt and all other matters by clear and convincing evidence, but the District Court denied the motion and G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court found no legal or factual reason to conclude that the standard of proof advocated by G.M. would protect individual constitutional rights to any greater degree than the established standard requiring the state to prove grounds for commitment by clear and convincing evidence, so the court held that a standard of proof higher than clear and convincing evidence was not appropriate for commitment proceedings involving persons with development disabilities. In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009), following Addington v. Tex., 441 US 418 (1979), and Heller v. Doe, 509 US 312 (1993).

Proper Consideration of Availability of Community-Based Services — No Absolute Right to Community-Based Services: In a prehearing motion during commitment proceedings, G.M. asked the District Court to hold that G.M. would not meet the definition of seriously developmentally disabled if G.M. could be safely and effectively habilitated through community-based services, whether or not those services were actually available to G.M., and that if there was no community-based facility available that would accept him, G.M. could not be committed to the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that while there is a statutory preference for community-based placement, there is no absolute right to such placement. G.M. appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Community-based facilities are defined as facilities and services that are available for the evaluation, treatment, and habilitation of persons with developmental disabilities, and here the District Court properly considered whether those services were actually available. However, there is no absolute right to placement in a community-based facility. G.M. provided no proof of any acceptable alternative placement or of the availability of community-based services. The Supreme Court could not determine from the record whether those services were actually available to G.M. but noted that the parties stipulated that G.M. could be placed in a community-based facility at any time during the commitment, presumably if a facility became available. In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009). See also In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Finding That Developmentally Disabled Person Not Involuntarily Held at State Center Not Clearly Erroneous— Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Precluding Judicial Review: Respondent was admitted to the Montana Developmental Center (MDC) on an emergency commitment in 1999, and the commitment was extended for 2 successive years. The MDC treatment team eventually reported that respondent had made substantial improvement and was no longer seriously developmentally disabled and recommended referral for community-based services. The state moved the District Court to adopt the recommendations, but the court did not immediately rule on the motion. Meanwhile, respondent's commitment order expired, although respondent remained at MDC, lacking any place else to go. Respondent subsequently petitioned for declaratory and injunctive relief to compel the state to immediately place respondent in a community-based service, arguing that the state's failure to do so left respondent in a de facto involuntary commitment. The District Court found that respondent was not being held involuntarily and dismissed the petition, and respondent appealed. Because respondent had failed to exhaust the administrative process, the record was insufficient for the Supreme Court to determine whether any of respondent's constitutional rights were violated as a result of the delay in community placement. However, the court noted that after the commitment order expired, respondent was free to leave MDC but chose not to, so the District Court's finding that respondent was not held involuntarily was not clearly erroneous. The District Court was affirmed. In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Finding That Individual Not Developmentally Disabled Erroneous Absent Evidence of Possible Safe Community Habilitation: Following a sexual assault on his 3-year-old niece, T.S.D. was committed to the Montana Developmental Center on an emergency petition while the state sought an adjudication for extended commitment. T.S.D.'s commitment was subsequently renewed for two 1-year periods. On hearing a third petition for commitment, the District Court concluded that T.S.D. could be safely and effectively habilitated in community-based services and thus was not seriously developmentally disabled. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The District Court mischaracterized the statement from the chief executive officer of a community services organization that T.S.D. could be safely habilitated. In light of evidence from the doctor at the Montana Developmental Center, the residential facility screening team, and the qualified mental retardation professional responsible for T.S.D.'s habilitation that

T.S.D. remained a threat to the safety of others and should not be placed in community services, the District Court's conclusion that T.S.D. was not seriously developmentally disabled was reversible error. In re T.S.D., 2005 MT 35, 326 M 82, 107 P3d 487 (2005).

Developmental Disability Affecting Fitness to Proceed to Trial: A developmental disability may affect a defendant in such a way as to render him unfit to proceed to trial; however, a developmental disability does not automatically mandate a finding of lack of fitness. That is for the trial court, in its discretion, to determine. St. v. Austad, 197 M 70, 641 P2d 1373, 39 St. Rep. 356 (1982).

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 395 (Ch. 569, L. 1983), provided: "A statement of intent is required for SB 395 because it authorizes the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] and the Department of Institutions [now Department of Corrections] to adopt rules for the certification of professional persons. It is the intent of SB 395 to have professional persons certified by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] and the Department of Institutions [now Department of Corrections] as qualified to provide those services.

The Legislature contemplates that certification of an individual as a professional person will be determined upon qualifications specified by rule. Those qualifications should be predicated upon education, experience, and skills. The specific qualifications will be those that are appropriate for an individual to carry out the professional person's responsibilities with respect to the developmentally disabled.

The rules should provide for the appropriate higher education degrees and the nature and degree of experience and skills that professional persons must possess. The rules should allow for varying combinations of education, experience, and skills that satisfy the professional person certification requirements. Among those degrees of higher education which are to be considered appropriate are psychology, social work, special education, or similar human service degrees.

The qualification set forth in the rules should be developed by reference to such nationally recognized standards as those of the Accreditation Council for Services for Mentally Retarded and other Developmentally Disabled persons (ACMRDD), Title XIX of the Social Security Act as amended, and federal regulations implementing that Act, and similar standards."

Release of Sealed Involuntary Commitment Records — Redacted Records Sufficiently Protective of Personal Privacy Rights: The Montana Advocacy Program (MAP) sought to disclose redacted District Court documents related to T.L.S.'s involuntary commitment for a serious developmental disability after T.L.S. died while residing at the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that MAP was required to establish a compelling state interest warranting public disclosure of the sealed court documents and denied the motion to release the court file. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the documents were sealed under 53-21-103 but that the commitment proceedings were conducted pursuant to this part, which does not contain any provisions relating to sealing and opening court records. Therefore, 53-21-103 did not apply, and MAP was not required to establish good cause before the court record could be opened. It was not disputed that the records were subject to public inspection under the constitutional right to know, which is presumed absent a showing of individual privacy rights sufficient to override the right to know, so the District Court erred in requiring MAP to show a compelling state interest. Thus, the question was whether T.L.S.'s privacy interest clearly exceeded the merits of public disclosure. It is the party asserting individual privacy rights that carries the burden to establish that those privacy rights exceed the merits of public disclosure. MAP contended, and the Supreme Court agreed, that the merits of public disclosure were substantial in light of the need to inform the public regarding the actions of the officials and employees involved in the commitment proceedings and to effectively advocate for legislative, administrative, and judicial reforms for the protection of the developmentally disabled. The Supreme Court concluded that T.L.S.'s privacy interests were sufficiently protected by redacting personal information from the record and ordered that the redacted documents be immediately released. Case Notes

Involuntary Commitment Affirmed Given District Court Consideration of Person's Situation, Needs, and Future Placement: Following numerous violent incidents while L.S. was in a community-based group home, L.S. was committed to the Montana Developmental Center (MDC) on an emergency basis. While at MDC, L.S.'s behavior materially improved. The state subsequently petitioned for commitment at MDC for up to 1 year. Witnesses for L.S. argued that the appropriate placement would be in community-based services. The District Court found that L.S. had a developmental disability and impaired cognitive functioning and, without adequate community-based services available, posed a sufficient risk of harm to self or others to meet the statutory definition of "seriously developmentally disabled". The court committed L.S. to MDC for 1 year or until suitable placement in community-based services was available. L.S. appealed the commitment, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court fully considered L.S.'s situation, needs, and future placement, and it was not an abuse of discretion to commit L.S. to MDC pending availability of community-based services. In re L.S., 2009 MT 83, 349 M 518, 204 P3d 707 (2009). See also In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005), and In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009).

Clear and Convincing Evidence Standard of Proof Required in Commitment Proceeding Involving Persons With Developmental Disabilities: G.M. is a developmentally disabled man in his 30s who was repeatedly recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for about half his life. In 2007, the state petitioned to recommit G.M. G.M. filed a prehearing motion requesting that the state be required to prove physical facts or evidence beyond a reasonable doubt and all other matters by clear and convincing evidence, but the District Court denied the motion and G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court found no legal or factual reason to conclude that the standard of proof advocated by G.M. would protect individual constitutional rights to any greater degree than the established standard requiring the state to prove grounds for commitment by clear and convincing evidence, so the court held that a standard of proof higher than clear and convincing evidence was not appropriate for commitment proceedings involving persons with development disabilities. In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009), following Addington v. Tex., 441 US 418 (1979), and Heller v. Doe, 509 US 312 (1993).

Proper Consideration of Availability of Community-Based Services — No Absolute Right to Community-Based Services: In a prehearing motion during commitment proceedings, G.M. asked the District Court to hold that G.M. would not meet the definition of seriously developmentally disabled if G.M. could be safely and effectively habilitated through community-based services, whether or not those services were actually available to G.M., and that if there was no community-based facility available that would accept him, G.M. could not be committed to the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that while there is a statutory preference for community-based placement, there is no absolute right to such placement. G.M. appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Community-based facilities are defined as facilities and services that are available for the evaluation, treatment, and habilitation of persons with developmental disabilities, and here the District Court properly considered whether those services were actually available. However, there is no absolute right to placement in a community-based facility. G.M. provided no proof of any acceptable alternative placement or of the availability of community-based services. The Supreme Court could not determine from the record whether those services were actually available to G.M. but noted that the parties stipulated that G.M. could be placed in a community-based facility at any time during the commitment, presumably if a facility became available. In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009). See also In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Error in Ordering Recommitment in Absence of Substantial Evidence That Community-Based Services Would Not Habilitate: T.P. was recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center after the District Court found that T.P. had behaviors posing an imminent risk of serious harm to herself or others that precluded community-based services. However, the evidence upon which the recommitment was based consisted only of general statements regarding physical aggression and deliberate self-harm that, without more, did not support a finding of actual or potential serious harm. Thus, the District Court improperly recommitted T.P. in the absence of substantial evidence that T.P. could not be habilitated in community-based services. In re T.P., 2008 MT 266, 345 M 152, 190 P3d 313 (2008).

Finding That Developmentally Disabled Person Not Involuntarily Held at State Center Not Clearly Erroneous— Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Precluding Judicial Review: Respondent was admitted to the Montana Developmental Center (MDC) on an emergency commitment in 1999, and the commitment was extended for 2 successive years. The MDC treatment team eventually reported that respondent had made substantial improvement and was no longer seriously developmentally disabled and recommended referral for community-based services. The state moved the District Court to adopt the recommendations, but the court did not immediately rule on the motion. Meanwhile, respondent's commitment order expired, although respondent remained at MDC, lacking any place else to go. Respondent subsequently petitioned for declaratory and injunctive relief to compel the state to immediately place respondent in a community-based service, arguing that the state's failure to do so left respondent in a de facto involuntary commitment. The District Court found that respondent was not being held involuntarily and dismissed the petition, and respondent appealed. Because respondent had failed to exhaust the administrative process, the record was insufficient for the Supreme Court to determine whether any of respondent's constitutional rights were violated as a result of the delay in community placement. However, the court noted that after the commitment order expired, respondent was free to leave MDC but chose not to, so the District Court's finding that respondent was not held involuntarily was not clearly erroneous. The District Court was affirmed. In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Finding That Individual Not Developmentally Disabled Erroneous Absent Evidence of Possible Safe Community Habilitation: Following a sexual assault on his 3-year-old niece, T.S.D. was committed to the Montana Developmental Center on an emergency petition while the state sought an adjudication for extended commitment. T.S.D.'s commitment was subsequently renewed for two 1-year periods. On hearing a third petition for commitment, the District Court concluded that T.S.D. could be safely and effectively habilitated in community-based services and thus was not seriously developmentally disabled. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The District Court mischaracterized the statement from the chief executive officer of a community services organization that T.S.D. could be safely habilitated. In light of evidence from the doctor at the Montana Developmental Center, the residential facility screening team, and the qualified mental retardation professional responsible for T.S.D.'s habilitation that T.S.D. remained a threat to the safety of others and should not be placed in community services, the District Court's conclusion that T.S.D. was not seriously developmentally disabled was reversible error. In re T.S.D., 2005 MT 35, 326 M 82, 107 P3d 487 (2005).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 252 in first sentence near middle after "commitment" inserted "to a residential facility or the imposition of the community treatment plan" and at end after "committed" substituted "or for which a community treatment plan is imposed" for "to the residential facility". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 255 deleted (1) that read: "(1) No person shall be admitted to a residential facility for longer than 30 days except on approval of the court. Whenever a person is admitted to a residential facility for longer than 30 days, the court may appoint a person other than the parents or guardian to act as responsible person for the resident. If there is no parent or guardian, the court shall appoint a responsible person"; in first sentence, near beginning, substituted "commitment" for "admission" and near end substituted "committed" for "admitted"; and made minor changes in style. Involuntary Commitment Affirmed Given District Court Consideration of Person's Situation, Needs, and Future Placement: Following numerous violent incidents while L.S. was in a community-based group home, L.S. was committed to the Montana Developmental Center

(MDC) on an emergency basis. While at MDC, L.S.'s behavior materially improved. The state subsequently petitioned for commitment at MDC for up to 1 year. Witnesses for L.S. argued that the appropriate placement would be in community-based services. The District Court found that L.S. had a developmental disability and impaired cognitive functioning and, without adequate community-based services available, posed a sufficient risk of harm to self or others to meet the statutory definition of "seriously developmentally disabled". The court committed L.S. to MDC for 1 year or until suitable placement in community-based services was available. L.S. appealed the commitment, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court fully considered L.S.'s situation, needs, and future placement, and it was not an abuse of discretion to commit L.S. to MDC pending availability of community-based services. Case Notes

Error in Ordering Recommitment in Absence of Substantial Evidence That Community-Based Services Would Not Habilitate: T.P. was recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center after the District Court found that T.P. had behaviors posing an imminent risk of serious harm to herself or others that precluded community-based services. However, the evidence upon which the recommitment was based consisted only of general statements regarding physical aggression and deliberate self-harm that, without more, did not support a finding of actual or potential serious harm. Thus, the District Court improperly recommitted T.P. in the absence of substantial evidence that T.P. could not be habilitated in community-based services. In re T.P., 2008 MT 266, 345 M 152, 190 P3d 313 (2008).

Release of Sealed Involuntary Commitment Records — Redacted Records Sufficiently Protective of Personal Privacy Rights: The Montana Advocacy Program (MAP) sought to disclose redacted District Court documents related to T.L.S.'s involuntary commitment for a serious developmental disability after T.L.S. died while residing at the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that MAP was required to establish a compelling state interest warranting public disclosure of the sealed court documents and denied the motion to release the court file. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the documents were sealed under 53-21-103 but that the commitment proceedings were conducted pursuant to this part, which does not contain any provisions relating to sealing and opening court records. Therefore, 53-21-103 did not apply, and MAP was not required to establish good cause before the court record could be opened. It was not disputed that the records were subject to public inspection under the constitutional right to know, which is presumed absent a showing of individual privacy rights sufficient to override the right to know, so the District Court erred in requiring MAP to show a compelling state interest. Thus, the question was whether T.L.S.'s privacy interest clearly exceeded the merits of public disclosure. It is the party asserting individual privacy rights that carries the burden to establish that those privacy rights exceed the merits of public disclosure. MAP contended, and the Supreme Court agreed, that the merits of public disclosure were substantial in light of the need to inform the public regarding the actions of the officials and employees involved in the commitment proceedings and to effectively advocate for legislative, administrative, and judicial reforms for the protection of the developmentally disabled. The Supreme Court concluded that T.L.S.'s privacy interests were sufficiently protected by redacting personal information from the record and ordered that the redacted documents be immediately released. In re T.L.S. v. Mont. Advocacy Program, 2006 MT 262, 334 M 146, 144 P3d 818 (2006).

Recommitment Improper When Petition Not Timely Filed: The Department of Corrections and Human Services (now Department of Corrections) failed to comply with the filing requirement specified in this section by filing a petition for recommitment 6 months after rather than 15 days before the commitment order expired. Because the petition was not timely filed, the District Court had no authority to recommit Morlock. In re Morlock, 261 M 499, 862 P2d 415, 50 St. Rep. 1426 (1993).

Case Notes

Proper Consideration of Availability of Community-Based Services — No Absolute Right to Community-Based Services: In a prehearing motion during commitment proceedings, G.M. asked the District Court to hold that G.M. would not meet the definition of seriously developmentally disabled if G.M. could be safely and effectively habilitated through community-based services, whether or not those services were actually available to G.M., and that if there was no community-based facility available that would accept him, G.M. could not be committed to the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that while there is a statutory preference for community-based placement, there is no absolute right to such placement. G.M. appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Community-based facilities are defined as facilities and services that are available for the evaluation, treatment, and habilitation of persons with developmental disabilities, and here the District Court properly considered whether those services were actually available. However, there is no absolute right to placement in a community-based facility. G.M. provided no proof of any acceptable alternative placement or of the availability of community-based services. The Supreme Court could not determine from the record whether those services were actually available to G.M. but noted that the parties stipulated that G.M. could be placed in a community-based facility at any time during the commitment, presumably if a facility became available. In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009). See also In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Constitutionality of Statute Governing Community Placement of Developmentally Disabled Individuals: Respondent attacked the constitutionality of this section on grounds that District Courts are statutorily not allowed to directly place individuals within community services following expiration of involuntary commitments, in violation of individuals' right of access to courts. The Supreme Court noted that under Art. XII, sec. 3, Mont. Const., the Legislature has enacted a statutory scheme, of which this section is a part, that designates the forms of available public assistance and that the scheme provides community-based services to the disabled through the administrative process as opposed to a direct judicial order. However, the preference for community placement over institutionalization does not create an absolute right to community placement, nor does this section preclude a person who is denied services through the administrative process from administrative appeal or judicial review. Respondent's constitutional challenge failed to recognize that the statute is only one part of the statutory scheme, and given respondent's overly narrow focus, the court concluded that this section is facially constitutional. In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005), followed in In re R.E.A., 2006 MT 12, 330 M 392, 127 P3d 517 (2006).

The court committed L.S. to MDC for 1 year or until suitable placement in community-based services was available. L.S. appealed the commitment, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court fully considered L.S.'s situation, needs, and future placement, and it was not an abuse of discretion to commit L.S. to MDC pending availability of community-based services. In re L.S., 2009 MT 83, 349 M 518, 204 P3d 707 (2009). See also In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005), and In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009).

Clear and Convincing Evidence Standard of Proof Required in Commitment Proceeding Involving Persons With Developmental Disabilities: G.M. is a developmentally disabled man in his 30s who was repeatedly recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for about half his life. In 2007, the state petitioned to recommit G.M. G.M. filed a prehearing motion requesting that the state be required to prove physical facts or evidence beyond a reasonable doubt and all other matters by clear and convincing evidence, but the District Court denied the motion and G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court found no legal or factual reason to conclude that the standard of proof advocated by G.M. would protect individual constitutional rights to any greater degree than the established standard requiring the state to prove grounds for commitment by clear and convincing evidence, so the court held that a standard of proof higher than clear and convincing evidence was not appropriate for commitment proceedings involving persons with development disabilities. In re G.M., 2009 MT 59, 349 M 320, 203 P3d 818 (2009), following Addington v. Tex., 441 US 418 (1979), and Heller v. Doe, 509 US 312 (1993).

Release of Sealed Involuntary Commitment Records — Redacted Records Sufficiently Protective of Personal Privacy Rights: The Montana Advocacy Program (MAP) sought to disclose redacted District Court documents related to T.L.S.'s involuntary commitment for a serious developmental disability after T.L.S. died while residing at the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that MAP was required to establish a compelling state interest warranting public disclosure of the sealed court documents and denied the motion to release the court file. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the documents were sealed under 53-21-103 but that the commitment proceedings were conducted pursuant to this part, which does not contain any provisions relating to sealing and opening court records. Therefore, 53-21-103 did not apply, and MAP was not required to establish good cause before the court record could be opened. It was not disputed that the records were subject to public inspection under the constitutional right to know, which is presumed absent a showing of individual privacy rights sufficient to override the right to know, so the District Court erred in requiring MAP to show a compelling state interest. Thus, the question was whether T.L.S.'s privacy interest clearly exceeded the merits of public disclosure. It is the party asserting individual privacy rights that carries the burden to establish that those privacy rights exceed the merits of public disclosure. MAP contended, and the Supreme Court agreed, that the merits of public disclosure were substantial in light of the need to inform the public regarding the actions of the officials and employees involved in the commitment proceedings and to effectively advocate for legislative, administrative, and judicial reforms for the protection of the developmentally disabled. The Supreme Court concluded that T.L.S.'s privacy interests were sufficiently protected by redacting personal information from the record and ordered that the redacted documents be immediately released. In re T.L.S. v. Mont. Advocacy Program, 2006 MT 262, 334 M 146, 144 P3d 818 (2006).

Finding That Developmentally Disabled Person Not Involuntarily Held at State Center Not Clearly Erroneous— Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Precluding Judicial Review: Respondent was admitted to the Montana Developmental Center (MDC) on an emergency commitment in 1999, and the commitment was extended for 2 successive years. The MDC treatment team eventually reported that respondent had made substantial improvement and was no longer seriously developmentally disabled and recommended referral for community-based services. The state moved the District Court to adopt the recommendations, but the court did not immediately rule on the motion. Meanwhile, respondent's commitment order expired, although respondent remained at MDC, lacking any place else to go. Respondent subsequently petitioned for declaratory and injunctive relief to compel the state to immediately place respondent in a community-based service, arguing that the state's failure to do so left respondent in a de facto involuntary commitment. The District Court found that respondent was not being held involuntarily and dismissed the petition, and respondent appealed. Because respondent had failed to exhaust the administrative process, the record was insufficient for the Supreme Court to determine whether any of respondent's constitutional rights were violated as a result of the delay in community placement. However, the court noted that after the commitment order expired, respondent was free to leave MDC but chose not to, so the District Court's finding that respondent was not held involuntarily was not clearly erroneous. The District Court was affirmed. In re T.W., 2005 MT 340, 330 M 84, 126 P3d 491 (2005).

Case Notes

State's Duty to Provide Institutional Care: The state has a duty under this section, not inconsistent with the theories of negligent hiring, negligent supervision, and agency, to provide proper care for persons admitted to a residential facility, and it was error for the District Court to refuse to instruct on those theories in a case in which that statutory duty was called into question. Case Notes

Involuntary Commitment and Medication — No Plain Error Found: After D.K.D. was found to be dangerous to himself and others, he was involuntarily committed under a District Court order stating that the staff at the Montana Developmental Center "shall have the authority to administer medication to D.K.D. on an involuntary basis, pursuant to their policy." The Supreme Court held that the District Court's order authorized the Center to do no more than its policies already authorized it to do and that the language of the order, although gratuitous, was not plain error under the common-law plain error doctrine. The Supreme Court would therefore not interfere with the District Court order, inasmuch as D.K.D.'s counsel failed to object to the order. In re D.K.D., 2011 MT 74, 360 Mont. 76, 250 P.3d 856.

1995 Amendment — Phrase Change: Section 21, Ch. 255, L. 1995, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in the MCA to a person who is developmentally disabled or to a developmentally disabled person to a person with developmental disabilities. The change was not to be made to the phrase "seriously developmentally disabled". In this section, the Code Commissioner has made the change in (1) and (2) and made minor changes in grammar to conform to the changes.

1985 Amendment: Near middle of (1) substituted "an evaluation to determine whether the person is developmentally disabled" for "initial intake and for diagnostic and counseling services through any comprehensive developmental disability center without reference to any other eligibility criteria"; and inserted (2) allowing the Department to provide services to certain developmentally disabled persons.

Case Notes

Constitutionality of Statute Governing Community Placement of Developmentally Disabled Individuals: Respondent attacked the constitutionality of 53-20-132 on grounds that District Courts are statutorily not allowed to directly place individuals within community services following expiration of involuntary commitments, in violation of individuals' right of access to courts. The Supreme Court noted that under Art. XII, sec. 3, Mont. Const., the Legislature has enacted a statutory scheme, of which 53-20-132 is a part, that designates the forms of available public assistance and that the scheme provides community-based services to the disabled through the administrative process as opposed to a direct judicial order. However, the preference for community placement over institutionalization does not create an absolute right to community placement, nor does 53-20-132 preclude a person who is denied services through the administrative process from administrative appeal or judicial review. Respondent's constitutional challenge failed to recognize that the statute is only one part of the statutory scheme, and given respondent's overly narrow focus, the court concluded that 53-20-132 is facially constitutional. Title 53, chapter 20, part 3, provides for community homes for developmentally disabled persons. It was the intent of part 3 to provide for the regulation of community homes by the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] and the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services]. The department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] was given authority to adopt reasonable rules and standards to carry out the administration and purposes of part 3. The department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] was given the authority to license community homes to insure the sanitation and safety of the residents. The authority was given the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] to license community homes in order to insure the quality of services provided. The authority to adopt rules relating to that licensing was not explicitly provided. The department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] has had to act under implied authority in licensing community group homes and adopting rules relating to licensing.

This bill provides the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] with explicit authority for the licensing of community group homes and for adopting rules relating to that licensing.

Among the areas that the rules relating to licensing will address are the following: facility acquisition, facility design, group home staffing, staff training, service goals and design, quality of services, client placement procedure, client rights and privileges, client grievance procedure, provider grievance procedure, and accounting procedures including accounting of client financial resources. Rules dealing with health and safety will be developed with the assistance of the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services], including water and waste disposal, food service, laundry, and safety standards which are compatible with the residential character of the facility.

The physical well-being and safety of the clients [are] provided for in that the group homes are to be certified for fire and life safety by the state fire marshal [now state fire prevention and investigation program of the department of justice] who shall adopt standards and notify the department upon certification of a community home as complying with those standards."

Title 37, chapter 89, ARM Mental health services.

Chapter Case Notes

Dismissal of Charges Required if Defendant's Fitness to Proceed Undetermined After Ninety Days — Civil Proceedings Mandated Upon Dismissal: Pursuant to Jackson v. Ind., 406 US 715 (1972), after only a pretrial competency hearing, it is unconstitutional to hold a person who is unfit to proceed without following civil and criminal commitment procedures provided by state law. Due process requires, at a minimum, some rational relationship between the nature and duration of commitment and its purpose. Thus, 46-14-221 requires the committing court to review a defendant's fitness to proceed within 90 days of the original commitment, and if, after 90 days, the court finds that the defendant is still unable to proceed and will not be fit to proceed within the reasonably foreseeable future, the proceeding against the defendant must be dismissed. However, dismissal does not mandate freedom for a potentially violent mentally ill individual. The statute provides that once the criminal proceeding is dismissed, the next mandatory step is to pursue civil commitment proceedings under chapter 20 or this chapter. However, an alternative procedure is available under 46-14-202, in which the court may set the time for determining fitness to proceed. St. v. Tison, 2003 MT 342, 318 M 465, 81 P3d 471 (2003), following St. v. Meeks, 2002 MT 246, 312 M 126, 58 P3d 167 (2002).

Right to Effective Assistance of Counsel for Person Subject to Involuntary Commitment Because of Mental Disorder — Strickland Test for Ineffective Assistance Inappropriate in Involuntary Commitment Proceedings: The right to counsel afforded by state law regarding the treatment of the seriously mentally ill provides a person who is subject to an involuntary commitment proceeding the right to effective assistance of counsel, which in turn provides that person the right to raise the allegation of ineffective assistance of counsel when challenging a commitment order. The test for ineffective assistance of counsel set out in Strickland v. Wash., 466 US 668 (1984), is inappropriate in involuntary commitment proceedings. However, the Strickland test simply does not go far enough to protect the liberty interests of persons involved in involuntary commitment proceedings who may or may not have broken any law but who, upon the expiration of a 90-day commitment, must indefinitely bear the badge of inferiority of a once involuntarily committed person with a proved mental disorder. Instead, upon a substantial showing of evidence to the issuing District Court or to the Supreme Court pursuant to 53-21-131 that counsel did not effectively represent the person's interests, an order of involuntary commitment should be vacated. The due process afforded individuals must serve to protect the fundamental liberty interests of dignity and integrity, and it is not only counsel, "but also courts, that are charged with the duty of safeguarding the due process rights of individuals involved at every stage of the proceedings". The Supreme Court identified five critical areas of representation that generally define the scope of effective counsel in involuntary commitment proceedings: (1) appointment of competent counsel; (2) the initial investigation; (3) the client interview; (4) the right to remain silent; and (5) counsel as an advocate and adversary. The statutory and constitutional standards must be rigorously adhered to in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of civil commitment proceedings, and it is imperative that the constitutional and legislated rights be formally and fairly balanced with the state's ultimate power to protect both the individual and the public from actual or perceived harm. In re K.G.F., 2001 MT 140, 306 M 1, 29 P3d 485 (2001), following Conservatorship of Roulet, 590 P2d 1 (Calif. 1979), and distinguishing In re Carmody, 653 NE 2d 977 (Ill. App. Ct. 1995).

Requirement of Note That Benefit of Rights Received: The District Court is required to note in its order of involuntary commitment that persons to be committed have received the benefit of all applicable statutory and constitutional rights. In re S.J. & T.F., 231 M 353, 753 P2d 319, 45 St. Rep. 675 (1988).

Release as Rendering Case Moot: A youth committed to a 3-month treatment at Rivendell raised several procedural questions relating to his commitment, but since he had been discharged from custody by the time the case was considered, the case was dismissed on grounds of mootness. In re T.J.F., 229 M 473, 747 P2d 1356, 44 St. Rep. 2145 (1987).

Admissibility of Evidence at Hearing on Transfer of Patient for Treatment: Between an initial commitment hearing and a hearing on the question of transferring treatment, appellant filed two motions in limine, which the District Court denied. The first motion requested that the state be precluded from eliciting testimony at the transfer hearing based on an evaluation made after the commitment hearing. On the second motion, he contended that the order of commitment was final as to all events litigated at the initial hearing and that none of the earlier events should have been referred to at the transfer hearing. He argued that 53-21-101, et seq., provided no authority for using evaluations made after a final commitment hearing in a later transfer hearing. Both 53-21-130 and 53-21-182 refer to transfers to other facilities for treatment; however, neither statute restricts what evidence may be admissible at a transfer hearing. The Supreme Court found no error in the denial of the motions, holding that any evidence admissible at a final commitment hearing which is relevant to the transfer should be admissible at the transfer hearing, including the opinions of professional persons and evidence of overt acts, as described in 53-21-126. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Detention Prior to Court Finding of Serious Mental Illness — Determination by Professional Person Rather Than Peace Officer: Appellant, M.C., argued that under 53-21-129, the peace officer makes the initial decision on whether an emergency situation exists and that in this case the officer did not make that decision. M.C. also contended that the evidence was insufficient to hold him on an emergency basis. The Supreme Court held that 53-21-129 merely permits the officer to take a person into custody for an evaluation. It does not give the officer authority to decide whether the person should be placed in emergency detention; rather, the professional person determines whether the person is seriously mentally ill and should be placed in emergency detention. Once that determination is made, it constitutes sufficient evidence that the person may be detained. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Stipulation to Commitment — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive Environment: The appellant, M.C., argued on appeal that evidence was insufficient to warrant his transfer to Montana State Hospital. At a commitment hearing, the District Court heard evidence on M.C.'s inability to cooperate in treatment at the Billings Mental Health Center, as well as testimony from a Center doctor indicating that Montana State Hospital was the least restrictive environment in which M.C. could receive the care and supervision he needed. After the hearing, M.C. and his counsel stipulated to, and the District Court ordered, a commitment to the Billings Mental Health Center or "another mental health facility in Montana". The Supreme Court held this evidence to be sufficient to support the District Court's action in committing M.C. to the Montana State Hospital. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Constitutionality of Statute Authorizing Emergency Transfer From State Institution to Mental Health Facility: In upholding the constitutionality of 53-21-130, the Supreme Court applied the test set forth by the U.S. Supreme Court in Vitek v. Jones, 445 US 480, 63 L Ed 2d 552, 100 S Ct 1254 (1980), and found that the interests of the state outweigh the interests of the individual transferred pursuant to 53-21-130 as long as the procedural safeguards mandated by that section are followed. In re the Petition of M.C., 211 M 105, 683 P2d 956, 41 St. Rep. 1242 (1984).

Serious Mental Illness — Source of Findings — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive: The District Court found that C.M. was seriously mentally ill and committed her to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital). C.M. appealed from the order of commitment. Three persons testified at the commitment hearing, C.M., C.M.'s mother, and a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist testified that C.M. was seriously mentally ill based on his own examination and on the observations of C.M.'s mother. The court held that a professional person may opine that a person is seriously mentally ill even though the evidence of an imminent threat of injury, required by statute, is obtained from a source other than the professional person. There was also sufficient evidence that a commitment to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital) was the least restrictive form of commitment. The order of the District Court was affirmed. In re C.M., 195 M 171, 635 P2d 273, 38 St. Rep. 1768 (1981).

Defendant Sane at Time of Crime — Insane at Other Times — Nonapplicability of Chapter: Defendant, convicted of aggravated assault, contended that sentencing to prison a man suffering from severe mental illness violates 53-21-101 as well as the constitutional ban against cruel and unusual punishment. When a defendant is convicted and claims that he was suffering at the time of the crime from a mental disease or defect that rendered him incapable of conforming his conduct to the requirements of the law, the sentencing judge is to consider the relevant evidence of the defendant's disorder. If the Judge finds the defendant did not suffer mental illness at the time of the crime, he is to be sentenced according to the guidelines in Title 46, ch. 18. If the finding is to the contrary, the defendant must be sentenced to Warm Springs (now Montana State Hospital). Despite the lack of provisions in Title 46, ch. 14, for sentencing a defendant who was sane at the time of the crime but may be insane at other times, Title 53, ch. 21, does not apply to criminal defendants. The defendant's claim that he is covered by Title 53, ch. 21, is in error.

Without a finding of insanity followed by sentencing to a penal institution without provision for adequate treatment, defendant has suffered no statutory or constitutional violation. St. v. Mercer, 191 M 418, 625 P2d 44, 38 St. Rep. 312 (1981).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Department Use of State Funds to Purchase Mental Health Services Nondiscriminatory: The Department of Institutions (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) may allocate state general fund appropriations to purchase services for certain priority populations from regional mental health centers without violating the discrimination provisions of 53-21-206 (now repealed) because the allocation procedures neither relate in any way to a patient's race, color, creed, religion, or ability to pay nor determine a patient's eligibility for mental health services. 43 A.G. Op. 64 (1990).

Commitment Procedures to Be Followed in Committing Mentally Ill Youth — Private Mental Health Facilities Not Precluded: Section 41-5-523 (renumbered 41-5-1512) does not authorize the Youth Court or the Department of Family Services [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] to commit a mentally ill or seriously mentally ill youth to a mental health treatment facility without following the commitment procedures set out in Title 53, ch. 21, part 1. There is, however, no statutory preclusion of commitment of a youth to private mental health facilities. 42 A.G. Op. 59 (1988).

State Grants to Regional Mental Health Centers — Conditions: State grants to regional mental health centers are properly conditioned upon each recipient center accounting for all of its funds through the state treasury and the Statewide Budget and Accounting System (SBAS). 37 A.G. Op. 127(1978).

Termination: Section 18, Ch. 376, L. 1987, provided: "This act terminates July 1, 1989." The termination date was extended by sec. 1, Ch. 541, L. 1989, which amended sec. 18, Ch. 376, L. 1987, to provide: "This act terminates July 1, 1997."

Report to Fifty-First Legislature: Chapter 376, L. 1987, enacted 53-21-135 through 53-21-137 (all now terminated) and amended 53-21-102, 53-21-106, 53-21-115, 53-21-116, 53-21-120 through 53-21-123, and 53-21-126 through 53-21-128. Section 18 of Ch. 376 terminated the new sections and amendments as of July 1, 1989. Section 16 of the act provided: "The mental disabilities board of visitors shall report to the 51st legislature on the effects of this act, including the effects on the treatment and rights of the mentally ill and the seriously mentally ill and the procedures established by this act, and shall include in the report any recommendations it may have."

Section Not Codified: Section 38-1312, R.C.M. 1947, a temporary provision restoring to legal capacity certain persons judged mentally ill, was not codified. That section has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 12, Ch. 466, L. 1975.

Representation of Mentally Ill Person on Criminal Charges — Civil Procedural Rights Inapplicable — Summary Judgment Proper: A $30 million damage suit brought against court-appointed attorneys after defendant was found not guilty of intimidation and criminal mischief by reason of mental disease or defect was properly dismissed by summary judgment after the District Court found the attorneys had not violated defendant's rights under 53-21-115 through 53-21-119, since those statutes involve civil commitments and do not apply to criminal proceedings. Civil Commitment Issue Raised by Supreme Court in Criminal Action: The Supreme Court reversed Allies' conviction for deliberate homicide. In its opinion, the court noted that the case was not a civil action brought under Title 53, ch. 21, to have an individual committed to a mental institution. If it were such a civil action, the court stated that it would have found substantial credible evidence upon which to base a finding that Allies is a dangerous individual who could not safely exist in our law-abiding society. Saving Clause: Section 40, Ch. 490, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Case Notes

Counsel's Failure to Obtain Independent Evaluation — No Ineffective Assistance: After being committed to the state hospital, the respondent claimed ineffective assistance of counsel based on an allegation that his counsel should have obtained an independent professional evaluation. The Supreme Court determined that counsel provided effective representation based on the services provided, including meetings with the respondent and a doctor, cross-examination of the doctor, and a deposition of the respondent the day before the hearing. In re C.R., 2012 MT 258, 367 Mont. 1, 289 P.3d 125, citing In re Mental Health of C.R.C., 2009 MT 125, 350 Mont. 211, 207 P.3d 289, and In re K.G.F., 2001 MT 140, 306 Mont. 1, 29 P.3d 485.

Acquiescence to Involuntary Commitment Without Patient's Consent — Client Refusal to Cooperate With Counsel — No Ineffective Assistance Given Counsel's Ongoing Advocacy: C.R.C. asserted that she received ineffective assistance of counsel when her attorney acquiesced to involuntary commitment of C.R.C. without her consent. The Supreme Court examined the record and found that the statutory guidelines for a waiver of C.R.C.'s rights were followed. In addition, the record revealed numerous facts to rebut the presumption that counsel was ineffective. C.R.C. refused to: (1) participate in her own defense; (2) meet with counsel; (3) attend court appearances; or (4) meet with a doctor for an independent psychological evaluation requested by counsel on C.R.C.'s behalf. The record also demonstrated that C.R.C. posed a danger to herself and others, requiring commitment. Yet even without C.R.C.'s input or cooperation, counsel continued to advocate on C.R.C.'s behalf, and counsel followed the law in waiving C.R.C.'s right to an adjudicatory hearing. Therefore, the presumption of ineffective assistance of counsel, when counsel acquiesced to involuntary commitment without C.R.C.'s consent, was rebutted by the facts of the case, and the Supreme Court declined to hold that counsel's actions were ineffective. In re Mental Health of C.R.C., 2009 MT 125, 350 M 211, 207 P3d 289 (2009). See also In re K.G.F., 2001 MT 140, 306 M 1, 29 P3d 485 (2001), and In re Mental Health of T.J.F., 2011 MT 28, 359 Mont. 213, 248 P.3d 804.

Failure of Counsel to Obtain Expert on General Tendencies of Mentally Ill Homeless Not Considered Ineffective Assistance: A trial on respondent's involuntary commitment was required within 7 days of the request for a jury trial. Respondent's counsel failed to secure a continuance in order to attempt to locate an expert to testify on the general ability of mentally ill homeless persons to care for themselves, and respondent asserted that counsel's conduct constituted ineffective assistance. Although the strict time constraints make advocacy challenging, evidence must be limited to a respondent's own particular set of circumstances, and in this case, any testimony given by an expert on the general tendencies of the mentally ill homeless would not have rebutted the state's testimony that respondent was unable to survive on his own. Thus, counsel's failure to procure the expert did not constitute ineffective assistance. In re Mental Health of T.M., 2004 MT 221, 322 M 394, 96 P3d 1147 (2004). For this purpose, injury means physical injury. A person may not be involuntarily committed to a mental health facility or detained for evaluation and treatment because the person is an epileptic, mentally deficient, mentally retarded, senile, or suffering from a mental disorder unless the condition causes the person to be seriously mentally ill within the meaning of this part"; and made minor changes in style. Case Notes

Inability to Appoint Friend of Respondent to Assist — Not Reversible Error: The failure of the District Court to appoint a friend of the respondent after having appointed one who was unwilling to serve and finding no one in the community who was willing to assist because of the respondent's psychosis and behavior, was not reversible error because this section requires that a person be willing to serve and the law does not require impossibilities. In re Mental Health of O.R.B., 2008 MT 301, 345 M 516, 191 P3d 482 (2008).

Clear Error in Finding That Behavior Posing Risk of Harm Precluded Community Placement — Involuntary Recommitment Reversed: The District Court held that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and that G.M.'s behavior could not be safely and effectively rehabilitated in community-based services because of behavior that posed an imminent risk of serious harm to G.M. or others. The court then ordered that G.M. be involuntarily recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for no more than 1 year. G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that all evidence was properly submitted and that expert testimony was properly admitted. However, G.M.'s expert's testimony and the actual incident reports presented by the state revealed that the reports did not give an accurate picture of G.M.'s condition, in that during most of the reported incidents, G.M. was not the aggressor. In fact, the reports affirmed G.M.'s expert's opinion that it was the group living environment that contributed significantly to G.M.'s behavioral difficulties and that placing G.M. in a community setting with fewer people would ameliorate G.M.'s aggressive tendencies. The state presented no evidence to contradict the expert's opinion that the institutional setting was probably responsible for the behaviors that kept G.M. in the institution and that individuals with worse aggressive tendencies were successfully living in community settings or to explain why G.M.'s actions would make placement in a community setting unsafe. Additionally, G.M.'s aunt's testimony regarding her personal observations of G.M.'s demeanor and self-control when not in an institutional setting confirmed the expert's opinion and tended to prove that G.M. did not pose a risk of harm and could be safely habilitated in the community. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the District Court incorrectly concluded that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and reversed with instructions to vacate the recommitment order. In re G.M., 2008 MT 200, 344 M 87, 186 P3d 229 (2008).

Sufficient Finding of Emergency Situation Justifying Involuntary Detainment: A Sheriff's report of about 25 incidents involving L.K.'s allegedly "extremely bizarre" behavior over a 3-day period, including at least two incidents related to threatened violence, justified the District Court's finding of an emergency situation warranting the involuntary commitment and detention at the state hospital for mental evaluation. In re Mental Health of L.K., 2008 MT 169, 343 M 366, 184 P3d 353 (2008).

Appointment of Complaining Witness as Friend of Respondent Reversible Error — Conflict of Interest — Issue Not Moot: In deciding the disposition of D.V.'s commitment proceedings, the District Court appointed D.V.'s mother as the friend of respondent, even though the mother was also the complaining witness who began the proceedings against D.V. following D.V.'s arrest for family member assault after D.V. allegedly threatened his mother. D.V. was subsequently involuntarily committed to the state mental hospital for 90 days. D.V. later appealed the District Court's order. Because D.V.'s commitment had already been served, the Supreme Court first considered whether the issue was moot. In this case, the involuntary commitment was too short to allow the issues to be fully litigated prior to D.V.'s release, and there was a reasonable expectation that D.V. could be subjected to the same action again in the future. The issues were capable of repetition while evading review, so the issue was not moot, and the Supreme Court thus considered the dispositive issue of the fairness of D.V.'s commitment proceedings. It was error for the District Court to appoint the victim of the crime that precipitated the proceedings to be the friend of respondent. The appointment was a conflict of interest and prejudiced D.V.'s right to a fair trial. The case was reversed with instructions to vacate the order of commitment. In re Mental Health of D.V., 2007 MT 351, 340 M 319, 174 P3d 503 (2007).

Cognitive Delays and Substance Abuse Not Factors to Be Used as Basis for Involuntary Commitment: Mental retardation is not a mental disorder for purposes of treatment of the seriously mentally ill, and cognitive delays may not be used for purposes of determining that because of a mental disorder, a person presents an imminent threat requiring involuntary commitment. Likewise, drug or alcohol addiction or intoxication does not constitute a mental disorder for purposes of treatment of the seriously mentally ill. Here, the District Court involuntarily committed respondent after including reference to respondent's mild mental retardation and polysubstance abuse in the finding that respondent suffered from a mental illness. That inclusion, when overlaid onto the court's subsequent findings and absent sufficient evidence, did not meet the statutory requirements for involuntary commitment, and the Supreme Court reversed the commitment order. In re A.K., 2006 MT 166, 332 M 511, 139 P3d 849 (2006).

Res Judicata Inapplicable to Involuntary Commitment Hearing — Criterion of "Seriously Mentally Ill" Only Issue: L.B. was examined by a professional person and determined to suffer from a serious mental disorder (see 1997 amendment) that required treatment. Following presentation of the professional's testimony at a hearing for involuntary commitment, the District Court held that the testimony was too speculative and ordered L.B. released. After the hearing, L.B. was detained by the Sheriff's office for a short time in an attempt to find a place for him, rather than just sending him out onto the streets. During his detention, L.B. was examined by a second professional person who determined that L.B. should be involuntarily committed to the state hospital for immediate treatment, and a second petition for commitment was filed that same day. The District Court subsequently determined that L.B.'s mental illness deprived him of the ability to protect his life or health and transferred him to the state hospital for treatment. L.B. argued that the doctrine of res judicata barred consideration of the second petition. However, the District Court expressly prohibited the introduction of evidence relating to the time period prior to the first hearing; therefore, the issues were not the same in the second hearing, nor could the first order releasing L.B. be considered final and subject to res judicata. The question of whether an individual is seriously mentally ill may be brought at any time as long as the necessary statutory criteria are met. A finding at one time that an individual does not suffer from a serious mental illness (see 1997 amendment) is not intended to be a final and irrevocable decision on the individual's mental health. In re Mental Health of L.C.B., 253 M 1, 830 P2d 1299, 49 St. Rep. 290 (1992).

Standard of Proof for Involuntary Commitment — Finding of Seriously Mentally Ill Upheld: The parents of G.P. filed a request with the Yellowstone County Attorney to have their son involuntarily committed. G.P. was evaluated by a psychiatrist who testified at the commitment hearing that G.P. was "beyond a reasonable doubt seriously mentally ill as defined in section 53-21-102, MCA" (see 1997 amendment). G.P. was committed and, on appeal, challenged the District Court finding that he was seriously mentally ill, rather than only mentally ill, claiming that there was no proof of overt acts. The Supreme Court held that overt acts are only necessary to prove serious mental illness based on "self-inflicted injury or injury to others or the imminent threat thereof" but not necessary to prove serious mental illness based on a respondent "suffering from a mental disorder . . . which has deprived the person afflicted of the ability to protect his life or health" as provided under this section. The Supreme Court noted that the psychiatrist testified that G.P. suffered from auditory hallucinations that directed him to do things that he could not control, that G.P.'s roommate testified that G.P. refused to take his medicine and denied that he needed medicine, and that G.P.'s parents testified that G.P. ate very little. The Supreme Court found that this evidence satisfied the standard in 53-21-126(2) because it indicated that G.P.'s illness was interrupting his cognitive process and causing delusional thinking, which condition rendered him unable to protect his own life or health. In re G.P., 246 M 195, 806 P2d 3, 47 St. Rep. 1840 (1990), followed in In re R.F., 2013 MT 59, 369 Mont. 236, 296 P.3d 1189.

Adequate Medical Care Not Basis for Disregarding Due Process: The medical center, in which the respondent was placed by the officers who picked her up, did not follow proper procedure, and the respondent was held without authority for 5 days before her competency hearing. The Supreme Court held that providing adequate medical care is not a basis for disregarding the due process and statutory rights of a person charged with being seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment). The court went on to admonish the medical center, the County Attorney's office, and the county family services department for their failure to comply with the due process rights of the respondent. Mental Health of E.P., 241 M 316, 787 P2d 322, 47 St. Rep. 297 (1990).

Finding of Mental Illness Supported by Overwhelming Evidence: The lower court found that the evidence demonstrated that the respondent was totally unable to take care of herself. The Supreme Court stated that after reviewing the record, it found that there was overwhelming evidence to support the lower court's finding. Mental Health of E.P., 241 M 316, 787 P2d 322, 47 St. Rep. 297 (1990).

"Seriously Mentally Ill" — Supporting Evidence:

Patient, appealing the order for his involuntary commitment to the state mental hospital, suffered from chronic paranoid schizophrenia that caused him to become angry and hostile when his delusions were challenged. Evidence showed he owned and carried weapons. There was sufficient evidence on which the court could base a finding of serious mental illness (see 1997 amendment). The statute does not require a court to wait until a person actually uses a weapon against another person before finding him seriously mentally ill. In re Mental Health of R.J.W., 226 M 419, 736 P2d 110, 44 St. Rep. 770 (1987).

Sufficient evidence supported an order of involuntary commitment when evidence presented at trial indicated the following: (1) respondent had exhibited violent behavior in the past; (2) his sister felt threatened by him on an occasion when he entered her home and demanded the keys to her car; (3) for no apparent reason, respondent entered the home of a family whom he did not know; and (4) a psychologist testified that respondent lacked ability to care for himself and posed a threat to others. In re D.B., 218 M 467, 709 P2d 161, 42 St. Rep. 1747 (1985).

A man who was hospitalized when police found him driving his car around in circles in a field and spouting "religious ideation", who told a nurse that he felt "like killing anybody and anyone in sight", who refused to take his prescribed medication, and who had been hospitalized five times previously when he refused medication was "seriously mentally ill" within the meaning of this statute (see 1997 amendment). There was sufficient evidence that commitment to Montana State Hospital at Warm Springs was the least restrictive form of commitment. The order of the District Court was affirmed. In re J.B., 217 M 504, 705 P2d 598, 42 St. Rep. 1335 (1985).

A woman who jumped out of a moving car with the intent to kill herself was "seriously mentally ill" within the meaning of this section (see 1997 amendment). In re the Mental Health of A.G., 208 M 366, 677 P2d 592, 41 St. Rep. 406 (1984).

There was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion that respondent was "seriously mentally ill" (see 1997 amendment) beyond a reasonable doubt, and respondent failed to overcome the burden of providing proof to the contrary; hence, extended detention was warranted. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

Suicidal Threats Constituting Emergency Situation: Threats to kill oneself as well as others, angry and abusive conduct toward others, a state of depression lasting a period of a week, and evidence of a previous suicide attempt 2 months earlier clearly indicated an emergency situation warranting detention under 53-21-129. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Detention Prior to Court Finding of Serious Mental Illness — Determination by Professional Person Rather Than Peace Officer: Appellant, M.C., argued that under 53-21-129, the peace officer makes the initial decision on whether an emergency situation exists and that in this case the officer did not make that decision. M.C. also contended that the evidence was insufficient to hold him on an emergency basis. The Supreme Court held that 53-21-129 merely permits the officer to take a person into custody for an evaluation. It does not give the officer authority to decide whether the person should be placed in emergency detention; rather, the professional person determines whether the person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and should be placed in emergency detention. Once that determination is made, it constitutes sufficient evidence that the person may be detained. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Stipulation to Commitment — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive Environment: The appellant, M.C., argued on appeal that evidence was insufficient to warrant his transfer to Montana State Hospital. At a commitment hearing, the District Court heard evidence on M.C.'s inability to cooperate in treatment at the Billings Mental Health Center, as well as testimony from a Center doctor indicating that Montana State Hospital was the least restrictive environment in which M.C. could receive the care and supervision he needed. After the hearing, M.C. and his counsel stipulated to, and the District Court ordered, a commitment to the Billings Mental Health Center or "another mental health facility in Montana". The Supreme Court held this evidence to be sufficient to support the District Court's action in committing M.C. to the Montana State Hospital. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Certified Professional's Testimony — Sufficient to Support Finding of Mental Disorder: J.M.'s cousin requested the Yellowstone County Attorney to petition that J.M. be declared seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and be committed to a mental health facility. Pursuant to 53-21-122, the District Court appointed a certified mental health professional to evaluate J.M. J.M. was uncooperative in responding to questions from the certified professional. Because of J.M.'s uncooperative attitude, the professional observed J.M. on only two occasions and relied on reports from other people concerning J.M. At the commitment hearing, the professional testified that J.M. was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and set forth the data for making the diagnosis, the characteristics of J.M.'s particular disorder, and the effect of the disorder on J.M. The testimony was sufficient to establish that J.M. was suffering from a mental disorder. In re J.M., 217 M 300, 704 P2d 1037, 42 St. Rep. 1212 (1985).

Commitment Procedural Safeguards Ignored: The State failed to follow the commitment procedural safeguards in handling Shennum's commitment. The record does not evidence the existence of an emergency situation sufficient to invoke 53-21-129. Shennum was not advised of his constitutional rights before a medical examination incorrectly obtained under a purported emergency situation. Absent an emergency, it was the duty of the County Attorney to proceed in accordance with 53-21-121 through 53-21-126 in order to commit Shennum as a seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) person. Several of the procedural protections contained in those sections were ignored. Therefore, the initial commitment was reversed with guidelines for the State to proceed properly in further commitment proceedings. In re Shennum, 210 M 442, 684 P2d 1073, 41 St. Rep. 1148 (1984).

Evidence Insufficient for Involuntary Commitment: Testimony at trial did not clearly and convincingly establish that respondent, due to his mental condition, was unable to protect his life or health at the time of the trial. Therefore, the evidence that respondent was "seriously mentally ill" within the meaning of 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment) was insufficient as a matter of law, and the District Court commitment order was vacated. In re R.T., 204 M 493, 665 P2d 789, 40 St. Rep. 1025 (1983).

Serious Mental Illness — Source of Findings — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive: The District Court found that C.M. was seriously mentally ill and committed her to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital). C.M. appealed from the order of commitment. Three persons testified at the commitment hearing, C.M., C.M.'s mother, and a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist testified that C.M. was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) based on his own examination and on the observations of C.M.'s mother. The court held that a professional person may opine that a person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) even though the evidence of an imminent threat of injury, required by statute, is obtained from a source other than the professional person. There was also sufficient evidence that a commitment to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital) was the least restrictive form of commitment. The order of the District Court was affirmed. In re C.M., 195 M 171, 635 P2d 273, 38 St. Rep. 1768 (1981).

Requirements to Support Finding of Serious Mental Illness: Appellant appeals from a commitment order based on a finding that he is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment). Such a finding requires the state to show (1) a mental disorder; and (2) that the mental disorder has resulted in self-inflicted injury, injury to others, or an "imminent threat thereof". In light of the difficulty of predicting that a given mental state is likely to result in future antisocial conduct, it is necessary to require the commission of some overt act. When this is coupled with psychiatric evaluation, the court will then be in a better position to assess the likelihood of the individual committing similar acts. The law requires only proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the threat of future injury presently exists and that the threat is imminent, that is, impending, likely to occur at any moment. The record showed that appellant caused several disturbances at the hotel where he stayed and then at the hospital. The record supported the finding that the appellant posed an "imminent threat of injury to others" and met the definition of "seriously mentally ill" in the statute (see 1997 amendment). In re F.B., 189 M 229, 615 P2d 867, 37 St. Rep. 1442 (1980), followed in In re Mental Health of A.S.B., 2008 MT 82, 342 M 169, 180 P3d 625 (2008). See also Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Reversal of Conviction as Creating Emergency Situation: The Supreme Court reversed a deliberate homicide conviction and ordered a new trial. The court noted that if the State decides that further prosecution is not possible, then an "emergency situation" would exist under 53-21-129 and in such event ordered the State to detain the defendant and to conduct an emergency evaluation. St. v. Allies, 186 M 99, 606 P2d 1043 (1979).

Determination of Mental Illness — Overt Act: A person who has spent a substantial portion of the last 20 years in institutions and who has a history of threatening others was found to be "seriously mentally ill", as defined by statute (see 1997 amendment). The statute requires an overt act and, while every threat cannot be considered an overt act, the testimony and circumstances of this case indicated that the appellant's threat fulfilled the requirement. In re Goedert, 180 M 484, 591 P2d 222, 36 St. Rep. 393 (1979).

Psychologist/Patient Privilege — Exception: The court properly permitted testimony of respondent's institutional psychologist and psychiatrist, in spite of the psychologist/patient and physician/patient privileges because mental health professionals on the hospital staff qualify as "neutral factfinders". In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

53-21-103. Court records to be kept separate.

Case Notes

Release of Sealed Involuntary Commitment Records — Redacted Records Sufficiently Protective of Personal Privacy Rights: The Montana Advocacy Program (MAP) sought to disclose redacted District Court documents related to T.L.S.'s involuntary commitment for a serious developmental disability after T.L.S. died while residing at the Montana Developmental Center. The District Court held that MAP was required to establish a compelling state interest warranting public disclosure of the sealed court documents and denied the motion to release the court file. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the documents were sealed under this section but that the commitment proceedings were conducted pursuant to Title 53, ch. 20, part 1, which does not contain any provisions relating to sealing and opening court records. Therefore, this section did not apply, and MAP was not required to establish good cause before the court record could be opened. It was not disputed that the records were subject to public inspection under the constitutional right to know, which is presumed absent a showing of individual privacy rights sufficient to override the right to know, so the District Court erred in requiring MAP to show a compelling state interest. Thus, the question was whether T.L.S.'s privacy interest clearly exceeded the merits of public disclosure. It is the party asserting individual privacy rights that carries the burden to establish that those privacy rights exceed the merits of public disclosure. MAP contended, and the Supreme Court agreed, that the merits of public disclosure were substantial in light of the need to inform the public regarding the actions of the officials and employees involved in the commitment proceedings and to effectively advocate for legislative, administrative, and judicial reforms for the protection of the developmentally disabled. The Supreme Court concluded that T.L.S.'s privacy interests were sufficiently protected by redacting personal information from the record and ordered that the redacted documents be immediately released. In re T.L.S. v. Mont. Advocacy Program, 2006 MT 262, 334 M 146, 144 P3d 818 (2006).

Right to Effective Assistance of Counsel for Person Subject to Involuntary Commitment Because of Mental Disorder — Strickland Test for Ineffective Assistance Inappropriate in Involuntary Commitment Proceedings: The right to counsel afforded by state law regarding the treatment of the seriously mentally ill provides a person who is subject to an involuntary commitment proceeding the right to effective assistance of counsel, which in turn provides that person the right to raise the allegation of ineffective assistance of counsel when challenging a commitment order. The test for ineffective assistance of counsel set out in Strickland v. Wash., 466 US 668 (1984), is inappropriate in involuntary commitment proceedings. However, the Strickland test simply does not go far enough to protect the liberty interests of persons involved in involuntary commitment proceedings who may or may not have broken any law but who, upon the expiration of a 90-day commitment, must indefinitely bear the badge of inferiority of a once involuntarily committed person with a proved mental disorder. Instead, upon a substantial showing of evidence to the issuing District Court or to the Supreme Court pursuant to 53-21-131 that counsel did not effectively represent the person's interests, an order of involuntary commitment should be vacated. The due process afforded individuals must serve to protect the fundamental liberty interests of dignity and integrity, and it is not only counsel, "but also courts, that are charged with the duty of safeguarding the due process rights of individuals involved at every stage of the proceedings". The Supreme Court identified five critical areas of representation that generally define the scope of effective counsel in involuntary commitment proceedings: (1) appointment of competent counsel; (2) the initial investigation; (3) the client interview; (4) the right to remain silent; and (5) counsel as an advocate and adversary. The statutory and constitutional standards must be rigorously adhered to in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of civil commitment proceedings, and it is imperative that the constitutional and legislated rights be formally and fairly balanced with the state's ultimate power to protect both the individual and the public from actual or perceived harm. Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 603, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it contains a delegation of authority, as defined in 5-4-403 [now repealed], providing the department of institutions [now department of corrections] statutory authorization to adopt rules to implement the provisions of the bill requiring confirmation that adequate treatment and evaluation are unavailable in the community.

The legislature contemplates that the department's rules will define the confirmation process in such a way as to provide adequate screening of voluntary admissions to the state hospital without creating an undue delay in meeting the needs of patients.

Specifically, the department should adopt rules that will address:

(1) adoption of a procedure requiring a written statement signed by an authorized person from the community mental health center either before or at the time the confirmation is obtained;

(2) the qualifications of community mental health staff who may confirm voluntary admissions;

(3) the procedure to be used in receiving confirmation from a community mental health center;

(4) the information about the patient and his treatment needs that must be communicated to the community mental health center by the professional person seeking confirmation;

(5) the method used by the mental health center to document the confirmation provided; and

(6) any other reasonable consideration not inconsistent with the purpose of this bill."

Extent of State Assumption: After state assumption pursuant to 53-2-811 (now repealed), the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is not responsible for the expenses associated with transfer of seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment to 53-21-102) patients involuntarily committed to the Montana State Hospital. The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) is not responsible by virtue of state assumption for those duties that do not statutorily attach to county welfare departments. Immediate Notice Requirements Inapplicable When Person Detained on Emergency Basis: After being detained on an emergency basis, L.K. was advised of her due process rights the next day. On appeal, L.K. asserted that the provisions of 53-21-114 required that she be advised of her constitutional rights at the time of detainment, and that failure to do so violated due process. The Supreme Court disagreed. Emergency mental health commitments are treated differently from other mental health commitments, and the immediate notice of constitutional rights is not required when a person is detained in an emergency situation pursuant to 53-21-129. L.K. was advised of her constitutional rights in a reasonably timely manner, and due process was satisfied. Patient Not Informed of Right to Refuse Medication — Waiver: A patient argued that the District Court erred in not finding a physician and hospital in violation of this section and 53-21-115 because she was not notified of her right to refuse medication. The Supreme Court held that under 53-21-119 she waived her right to refuse medication by requesting it or at least by not objecting to it and that failure to notify her of her right to refuse did not result in any actionable injury to her. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Commitment of Ward — Due Process Rights — Notice, Hearing, and Counsel: District Court order committing ward to Montana State Hospital for a 72-hour evaluation upon a request made by the ward's guardian was reversed where ward was not given notice of the impending commitment, an attorney, or a hearing prior to the commitment. The ward's statutory and constitutional due process rights were violated. Two days after the first order the County Attorney, at guardian's request, filed a petition for a 90-day commitment. The guardian consented and waived ward's rights to notice, counsel, and hearing prior to commitment. The petition was granted, which also violated ward's statutory and constitutional rights to due process. He had the right to notice, hearing, and counsel, and only the person to be committed, or if he is unable, his attorney and guardian acting in concert, may waive those rights. The ward had no attorney at the time of the guardian's waiver. In re Simons, 215 M 463, 698 P2d 850, 42 St. Rep. 544 (1985).

Respondent Not Required to Attend Commitment Hearing to Waive Right to Be Present — Record to Show Respondent Was Capable and Waiver Was Knowing and Intentional: A person who is the subject of a petition for involuntary commitment may waive the statutory right to be present at any hearing. However, the record must show that the absent person is capable of waiving his rights and that the person made an intentional and knowing waiver of the right to be present at a hearing. Because the record did not show that the respondent was capable of waiving her rights, the Supreme Court reversed her commitment to the Montana State Hospital. In re P.A.C., 2013 MT 84, 369 Mont. 407, 298 P.3d 1166. See also In re R.W.K., 2013 MT 54, 369 Mont. 193, 297 P.3d 318, holding that the respondent's attorney provided an effective waiver of the respondent's rights on behalf of the respondent and noting that the record reflected that the respondent was capable of waiving his rights and did so intentionally and knowingly.

Counsel's Failure to Obtain Independent Evaluation — No Ineffective Assistance: After being committed to the state hospital, the respondent claimed ineffective assistance of counsel based on an allegation that his counsel should have obtained an independent professional evaluation. The Supreme Court determined that counsel provided effective representation based on the services provided, including meetings with the respondent and a doctor, cross-examination of the doctor, and a deposition of the respondent the day before the hearing. Security Hearing — Exception to Right to Be Present at Any Hearing Regarding Involuntary Commitment: T.J.F. was not present at the security hearing held by the District Court to determine whether T.J.F. should be required to appear in full restraints during a bench trial. The District Court did not violate T.J.F.'s right to be present at the security hearing because a security hearing is simply an administrative proceeding to ensure the orderly conduct of the bench trial pursuant to 3-1-111. In re Mental Health of T.J.F., 2011 MT 28, 359 Mont. 213, 248 P.3d 804.

Administration of Medication During Emergency Detention Not Violative of Right to Be Free of Medication Prior to Initial Appearance: L.R. was held in emergency detention based on an inability to make reasonable and safe decisions for herself and was involuntarily medicated because of aggressive, intrusive, and volatile behavior on the day of the initial appearance on the state's petition for involuntary commitment. L.R. contended that the involuntary medication violated the right to refuse medication 24 hours before the initial appearance under 53-21-115. The state contended that under 53-21-129 the medication was properly administered because an emergency situation existed. The Supreme Court noted that an inconsistency existed between the statutes but concluded that the specific directive in 53-21-129 allowing for involuntary medication in emergency situations controlled the general statutory directive concerning a medication-free initial appearance in 53-21-115.Thus, even though L.R. was involuntarily medicated within 24 hours of the initial appearance, because an emergency situation existed and the medications were administered before the next business day, L.R.'s right to a medication-free hearing was not violated. In re Mental Health of L.R., 2010 MT 76, 356 Mont. 20, 231 P.3d 594.

Acquiescence to Involuntary Commitment Without Patient's Consent — Client Refusal to Cooperate With Counsel — No Ineffective Assistance Given Counsel's Ongoing Advocacy: C.R.C. asserted that she received ineffective assistance of counsel when her attorney acquiesced to involuntary commitment of C.R.C. without her consent. The Supreme Court examined the record and found that the statutory guidelines for a waiver of C.R.C.'s rights were followed. In addition, the record revealed numerous facts to rebut the presumption that counsel was ineffective. C.R.C. refused to: (1) participate in her own defense; (2) meet with counsel; (3) attend court appearances; or (4) meet with a doctor for an independent psychological evaluation requested by counsel on C.R.C.'s behalf. The record also demonstrated that C.R.C. posed a danger to herself and others, requiring commitment. Yet even without C.R.C.'s input or cooperation, counsel continued to advocate on C.R.C.'s behalf, and counsel followed the law in waiving C.R.C.'s right to an adjudicatory hearing. Therefore, the presumption of ineffective assistance of counsel, when counsel acquiesced to involuntary commitment without C.R.C.'s consent, was rebutted by the facts of the case, and the Supreme Court declined to hold that counsel's actions were ineffective. In re Mental Health of C.R.C., 2009 MT 125, 350 M 211, 207 P3d 289 (2009). Right to Be Present and Offer Evidence — Not Applicable to Probable Cause at Initial Appearance: E.T. underwent a mental health evaluation, and based upon the results, the County Attorney filed an involuntary commitment upon which the District Court determined that there was probable cause to support a commitment and detention pending E.T.'s initial appearance. At the initial appearance, E.T. objected to the District Court's finding of probable cause and requested a hearing on the probable cause. The court noted the objection but refused to hold a hearing at the initial appearance and stated E.T. would be able to present evidence and testimony at the hearing held pursuant to 53-21-126. E.T. appealed the District Court's refusal. The Supreme Court held that, based upon legislative history that allows the person subject to commitment adequate time to prepare for a hearing, the procedural rights provided under 53-21-115 do not apply to an initial appearance under 53-21-122. In addition, a person subject to immediate detention has the right to immediately contest a probable cause finding that results in an immediate detention pursuant to a hearing under 53-21-124. In re Mental Health of E.T., 2008 MT 299, 345 M 497, 191 P3d 470 (2008).

Muting of Respondent's Microphone at Commitment Hearing in Order to Prevent Disruptive Behavior Not Violative of Right to Be Heard: When L.K. did not respond to the District Court's warning to abstain from disrupting emergency commitment proceedings conducted via two-way electronic audio-video communication from the state hospital, the court muted L.K.'s microphone until permission was granted for L.K. to speak. On appeal, L.K. asserted that muting the microphone violated her right to be heard at the hearing. The Supreme Court disagreed. Although a person who is involuntarily detained has the right to be present, to offer evidence, to present witnesses, and to receive assistance of counsel, the person does not have the right to disrupt proceedings. In this case, the District Court afforded L.K. due process by consistently giving L.K. the opportunity to conform her behavior to the requirements of an orderly hearing, to hear witness testimony and observe the entire proceeding, and to consult with counsel at any time. In re Mental Health of L.K., 2008 MT 169, 343 M 366, 184 P3d 353 (2008).

Failure of District Court to Make Detailed Findings of Fact to Support Involuntary Commitment — Reversible Error: A hearing on a petition for involuntary commitment is not merely a pro forma requirement but an opportunity for both the petitioner and respondent to present evidence upon which a trial court can make required findings and enter appropriate orders. As petitioner, the state bears the burden of proving any physical facts or evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, the respondent's mental disorder to a reasonable medical certainty, and other matters by clear and convincing evidence. In ordering commitment, the trial court must make a detailed statement of facts upon which it found respondent to be suffering from a mental disorder requiring commitment. In this case, the issue was whether the trial court's findings met statutory requirements, which the Supreme Court reviewed de novo. The trial court merely recited the testimony of a health care professional, noted that it was consistent with another professional's findings, and ordered commitment. This was not the detailed statement of facts required under 53-21-127, and the Supreme Court reversed and remanded with instructions to vacate the commitment order. In re Mental Health of E.P.B., 2007 MT 224, 339 M 107, 168 P3d 662 (2007). See also In re L.L.A., 2011 MT 285, 362 Mont. 464, 267 P.3d 1 (reversing involuntary commitment where findings of fact contained seven brief findings of facts and did not comply with 53-21-127(8)(a)).

Denial of Motion for Continuance on Day of Trial in Order to Obtain Different Counsel Not Error: The District Court denied respondent's request on the day of trial to obtain private counsel, which respondent contended was an abuse of discretion. Respondent stated that he had no confidence in his appointed counsel because counsel did not obtain a second independent psychiatric evaluation. The Supreme Court noted that there must be a good cause and a compelling reason when a respondent seeks to dismiss counsel on the day of trial, which did not exist in this case. Respondent actually agreed with the first evaluation, and there was no other evidence that counsel did not advocate for respondent to the best of his ability. Further, respondent's indigency made it unlikely that private counsel could be retained. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in denying respondent's motion for a continuance in order to obtain different counsel. In re Mental Health of T.M., 2004 MT 221, 322 M 394, 96 P3d 1147 (2004).

Failure of Counsel to Obtain Expert on General Tendencies of Mentally Ill Homeless Not Considered Ineffective Assistance: A trial on respondent's involuntary commitment was required within 7 days of the request for a jury trial. Respondent's counsel failed to secure a continuance in order to attempt to locate an expert to testify on the general ability of mentally ill homeless persons to care for themselves, and respondent asserted that counsel's conduct constituted ineffective assistance. Although the strict time constraints make advocacy challenging, evidence must be limited to a respondent's own particular set of circumstances, and in this case, any testimony given by an expert on the general tendencies of the mentally ill homeless would not have rebutted the state's testimony that respondent was unable to survive on his own. Thus, counsel's failure to procure the expert did not constitute ineffective assistance. In re Mental Health of T.M., 2004 MT 221, 322 M 394, 96 P3d 1147 (2004). Right to Effective Assistance of Counsel for Person Subject to Involuntary Commitment Because of Mental Disorder — Strickland Test for Ineffective Assistance Inappropriate in Involuntary Commitment Proceedings: The right to counsel afforded by state law regarding the treatment of the seriously mentally ill provides a person who is subject to an involuntary commitment proceeding the right to effective assistance of counsel, which in turn provides that person the right to raise the allegation of ineffective assistance of counsel when challenging a commitment order. The test for ineffective assistance of counsel set out in Strickland v. Wash., 466 US 668 (1984), is inappropriate in involuntary commitment proceedings. However, the Strickland test simply does not go far enough to protect the liberty interests of persons involved in involuntary commitment proceedings who may or may not have broken any law but who, upon the expiration of a 90-day commitment, must indefinitely bear the badge of inferiority of a once involuntarily committed person with a proved mental disorder. Instead, upon a substantial showing of evidence to the issuing District Court or to the Supreme Court pursuant to 53-21-131 that counsel did not effectively represent the person's interests, an order of involuntary commitment should be vacated. The due process afforded individuals must serve to protect the fundamental liberty interests of dignity and integrity, and it is not only counsel, "but also courts, that are charged with the duty of safeguarding the due process rights of individuals involved at every stage of the proceedings". The Supreme Court identified five critical areas of representation that generally define the scope of effective counsel in involuntary commitment proceedings: (1) appointment of competent counsel; (2) the initial investigation; (3) the client interview; (4) the right to remain silent; and (5) counsel as an advocate and adversary. The statutory and constitutional standards must be rigorously adhered to in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of civil commitment proceedings, and it is imperative that the constitutional and legislated rights be formally and fairly balanced with the state's ultimate power to protect both the individual and the public from actual or perceived harm. Medical Rights Not Absolute — Restrictions Proper When Based on Necessity for Treatment, Evaluation, and Care: G.J.P. claimed numerous violations of his procedural and constitutional rights regarding the provision of his medical care after being confined for his manic episodes, including claims that: (1) a medical professional lacked knowledge of the requisite facts to make a request for commitment; (2) a mental evaluation was improperly conducted; (3) he was improperly secluded in isolation and restrained; (4) he was denied medical care for broken ribs; (5) he was denied the right of telephone communications; and (6) he was administered medication within 24 hours before his initial hearing on a motion for commitment, despite his objections. The Supreme Court recognized the rights of patients to receive proper medical care but noted that none of the rights are absolute. G.J.P. did not demonstrate any restrictions on his rights other than those necessary for his treatment, evaluation, and care or establish that reversal of his commitment would be a proper remedy for a denial or restriction of his rights. Lawful Detention Not Violative of Right to Vote: The constitutional right to vote may not be considered to be denied under this section when an emergency detention is lawfully justified. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Patient Not Informed of Right to Refuse Medication — Waiver: A patient argued that the District Court erred in not finding a physician and hospital in violation of 53-21-114 and this section because she was not notified of her right to refuse medication. The Supreme Court held that under 53-21-119 she waived her right to refuse medication by requesting it or at least by not objecting to it and that failure to notify her of her right to refuse did not result in any actionable injury to her. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Commitment of Ward — Due Process Rights — Notice, Hearing, and Counsel: District Court order committing ward to Montana State Hospital for a 72-hour evaluation upon a request made by the ward's guardian was reversed where ward was not given notice of the impending commitment, an attorney, or a hearing prior to the commitment. The ward's statutory and constitutional due process rights were violated. Two days after the first order the County Attorney, at guardian's request, filed a petition for a 90-day commitment. The guardian consented and waived ward's rights to notice, counsel, and hearing prior to commitment. The petition was granted, which also violated ward's statutory and constitutional rights to due process. He had the right to notice, hearing, and counsel, and only the person to be committed, or if he is unable, his attorney and guardian acting in concert, may waive those rights. The ward had no attorney at the time of the guardian's waiver. In re Simons, 215 M 463, 698 P2d 850, 42 St. Rep. 544 (1985).

Respondent Not Required to Attend Commitment Hearing to Waive Right to Be Present — Record to Show Respondent Was Capable and Waiver Was Knowing and Intentional: A person who is the subject of a petition for involuntary commitment may waive the statutory right to be present at any hearing. However, the record must show that the absent person is capable of waiving his rights and that the person made an intentional and knowing waiver of the right to be present at a hearing. Because the record did not show that the respondent was capable of waiving her rights, the Supreme Court reversed her commitment to the Montana State Hospital.

Commitment Hearing Via Videoconference Without Individual's Presence Improper Absent Waiver of Right to Be Present: The District Court conducted a videoconference commitment hearing to determine whether L.K. should be involuntarily committed to the state hospital for a mental disorder. The court concluded that L.K. should be committed for 90 days, and L.K. appealed on grounds that use of a videoconference was improper and that because the hearing was conducted outside L.K.'s presence after she voluntarily left the conference, her statutory right to be present at the hearing was violated. The Supreme Court first concluded that the District Court was not precluded from holding the hearing via videoconference, as allowed under 53-21-140, because L.K. made no objection. However, even though L.K. voluntarily left the videoconference and had the right to return and participate at any time before the hearing concluded, there was nothing in the record to indicate that L.K. waived the right to be physically present at the hearing under the criteria in 53-21-119. Absent compliance with the waiver requirements, the District Court could not conduct the hearing in L.K.'s absence so the commitment order was reversed. Respondent Allowed to Remain in Court Following Outbursts During Voir Dire — No Prejudice: Respondent's counsel was concerned that respondent might be unruly during an involuntary commitment trial, which might prejudice respondent to the jury, and informed the court that respondent might have to be removed from the courtroom. At the beginning of voir dire, respondent made several relatively innocuous outbursts, and respondent's counsel requested that respondent be removed. The court was concerned with violating respondent's fundamental right to be present and explained the situation to respondent, who agreed not to be disruptive and made no further outbursts. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that respondent's behavior during voir dire was not so prejudicial that the jury could not objectively consider the evidence and that the District Court did not abuse its discretion in allowing respondent to remain in the courtroom. Reliance on Counsel's Representations for Waiver of Rights for Involuntary Commitment Appropriate: The District Court did not violate the respondent's statutory due process rights by failing to obtain a personal waiver of rights directly through questioning when the respondent attended and was represented by counsel and by a friend of respondent at the involuntary commitment hearing. Under the circumstances, the representation to the District Court by the respondent's counsel was sufficient to support the civil commitment under 53-21-119. Commitment Hearing Via Videoconference Without Individual's Presence Improper Absent Waiver of Right to Be Present: The District Court conducted a videoconference commitment hearing to determine whether L.K. should be involuntarily committed to the state hospital for a mental disorder. The court concluded that L.K. should be committed for 90 days, and L.K. appealed on grounds that use of a videoconference was improper and that because the hearing was conducted outside L.K.'s presence after she voluntarily left the conference, her statutory right to be present at the hearing was violated. The Supreme Court first concluded that the District Court was not precluded from holding the hearing via videoconference, as allowed under 53-21-140, because L.K. made no objection. However, even though L.K. voluntarily left the videoconference and had the right to return and participate at any time before the hearing concluded, there was nothing in the record to indicate that L.K. waived the right to be physically present at the hearing under the criteria in 53-21-119. Absent compliance with the waiver requirements, the District Court could not conduct the hearing in L.K.'s absence so the commitment order was reversed. Acquiescence to Involuntary Commitment Without Patient's Consent — Client Refusal to Cooperate With Counsel — No Ineffective Assistance Given Counsel's Ongoing Advocacy: C.R.C. asserted that she received ineffective assistance of counsel when her attorney acquiesced to involuntary commitment of C.R.C. without her consent. The Supreme Court examined the record and found that the statutory guidelines for a waiver of C.R.C.'s rights were followed. In addition, the record revealed numerous facts to rebut the presumption that counsel was ineffective. C.R.C. refused to: (1) participate in her own defense; (2) meet with counsel; (3) attend court appearances; or (4) meet with a doctor for an independent psychological evaluation requested by counsel on C.R.C.'s behalf. The record also demonstrated that C.R.C. posed a danger to herself and others, requiring commitment. Yet even without C.R.C.'s input or cooperation, counsel continued to advocate on C.R.C.'s behalf, and counsel followed the law in waiving C.R.C.'s right to an adjudicatory hearing. Therefore, the presumption of ineffective assistance of counsel, when counsel acquiesced to involuntary commitment without C.R.C.'s consent, was rebutted by the facts of the case, and the Supreme Court declined to hold that counsel's actions were ineffective. Appointment of Complaining Witness as Friend of Respondent Reversible Error — Conflict of Interest — Issue Not Moot: In deciding the disposition of D.V.'s commitment proceedings, the District Court appointed D.V.'s mother as the friend of respondent, even though the mother was also the complaining witness who began the proceedings against D.V. following D.V.'s arrest for family member assault after D.V. allegedly threatened his mother. D.V. was subsequently involuntarily committed to the state mental hospital for 90 days. D.V. later appealed the District Court's order. Because D.V.'s commitment had already been served, the Supreme Court first considered whether the issue was moot. In this case, the involuntary commitment was too short to allow the issues to be fully litigated prior to D.V.'s release, and there was a reasonable expectation that D.V. could be subjected to the same action again in the future. The issues were capable of repetition while evading review, so the issue was not moot, and the Supreme Court thus considered the dispositive issue of the fairness of D.V.'s commitment proceedings. It was error for the District Court to appoint the victim of the crime that precipitated the proceedings to be the friend of respondent. The appointment was a conflict of interest and prejudiced D.V.'s right to a fair trial. The case was reversed with instructions to vacate the order of commitment. In re Mental Health of D.V., 2007 MT 351, 340 M 319, 174 P3d 503 (2007).

Respondent Allowed to Remain in Court Following Outbursts During Voir Dire — No Prejudice: Respondent's counsel was concerned that respondent might be unruly during an involuntary commitment trial, which might prejudice respondent to the jury, and informed the court that respondent might have to be removed from the courtroom. At the beginning of voir dire, respondent made several relatively innocuous outbursts, and respondent's counsel requested that respondent be removed. The court was concerned with violating respondent's fundamental right to be present and explained the situation to respondent, who agreed not to be disruptive and made no further outbursts. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that respondent's behavior during voir dire was not so prejudicial that the jury could not objectively consider the evidence and that the District Court did not abuse its discretion in allowing respondent to remain in the courtroom. In re Mental Health of T.M., 2004 MT 221, 322 M 394, 96 P3d 1147 (2004).

Right to Effective Assistance of Counsel for Person Subject to Involuntary Commitment Because of Mental Disorder — Strickland Test for Ineffective Assistance Inappropriate in Involuntary Commitment Proceedings: The right to counsel afforded by state law regarding the treatment of the seriously mentally ill provides a person who is subject to an involuntary commitment proceeding the right to effective assistance of counsel, which in turn provides that person the right to raise the allegation of ineffective assistance of counsel when challenging a commitment order. The test for ineffective assistance of counsel set out in Strickland v. Wash., 466 US 668 (1984), is inappropriate in involuntary commitment proceedings. However, the Strickland test simply does not go far enough to protect the liberty interests of persons involved in involuntary commitment proceedings who may or may not have broken any law but who, upon the expiration of a 90-day commitment, must indefinitely bear the badge of inferiority of a once involuntarily committed person with a proved mental disorder. Instead, upon a substantial showing of evidence to the issuing District Court or to the Supreme Court pursuant to 53-21-131 that counsel did not effectively represent the person's interests, an order of involuntary commitment should be vacated. The due process afforded individuals must serve to protect the fundamental liberty interests of dignity and integrity, and it is not only counsel, "but also courts, that are charged with the duty of safeguarding the due process rights of individuals involved at every stage of the proceedings". The Supreme Court identified five critical areas of representation that generally define the scope of effective counsel in involuntary commitment proceedings: (1) appointment of competent counsel; (2) the initial investigation; (3) the client interview; (4) the right to remain silent; and (5) counsel as an advocate and adversary. The statutory and constitutional standards must be rigorously adhered to in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of civil commitment proceedings, and it is imperative that the constitutional and legislated rights be formally and fairly balanced with the state's ultimate power to protect both the individual and the public from actual or perceived harm. Termination of Parental Rights — Appointment of Guardian for Incompetent Parent or Waiver of Right to Appear Required: Where mother was under order of commitment and was confined at Montana State Hospital at time of entry of order terminating her parental rights, the Supreme Court reversed and remanded on ground that she was incompetent and either a guardian ad litem should have been appointed for her under former Rule 17(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), or a waiver of her right to appear under subsection (2) of this section should have been entered. The fact that she was represented by appointed counsel does not meet the requirements of former Rule 17(c). Custody of R.A.D., 231 M 143, 753 P2d 862, 44 St. Rep. 2018 (1987). Patient Not Informed of Right to Refuse Medication — Waiver: A patient argued that the District Court erred in not finding a physician and hospital in violation of 53-21-114 and 53-21-115 because she was not notified of her right to refuse medication. The Supreme Court held that under this section she waived her right to refuse medication by requesting it or at least by not objecting to it and that failure to notify her of her right to refuse did not result in any actionable injury to her. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Commitment of Ward — Due Process Rights — Notice, Hearing, and Counsel: District Court order committing ward to Montana State Hospital for a 72-hour evaluation upon a request made by the ward's guardian was reversed where ward was not given notice of the impending commitment, an attorney, or a hearing prior to the commitment. The ward's statutory and constitutional due process rights were violated. Two days after the first order the County Attorney, at guardian's request, filed a petition for a 90-day commitment. The guardian consented and waived ward's rights to notice, counsel, and hearing prior to commitment. The petition was granted, which also violated ward's statutory and constitutional rights to due process. He had the right to notice, hearing, and counsel, and only the person to be committed, or if he is unable, his attorney and guardian acting in concert, may waive those rights. The ward had no attorney at the time of the guardian's waiver. In re Simons, 215 M 463, 698 P2d 850, 42 St. Rep. 544 (1985).

1987 Amendment: Inserted (5) disallowing a detention order when a petition has been filed under 53-21-121(1)(b); and inserted (6) disallowing involuntary commitment or detention of certain persons absent serious mental illness.

No Error in Instruction Quoting Statute Verbatim: Joshua Lloyd suffered a seizure after being transferred to the Kalispell Regional Hospital's security room. His personal representative sued the hospital and others. During trial, the District Court instructed the jury on negligence per se by quoting mental health statutes verbatim to the jury. The Supreme Court said that giving jury instructions by quoting directly from the statutes may not be the best practice, but noted that the instructions proposed by opposing counsel were also direct quotations of mental health statutes. Given that situation, the Supreme Court held that there was no error in giving jury instructions in the form of direct quotations from the statutes. Buhr v. Flathead County, 268 M 223, 886 P2d 381, 51 St. Rep. 1258 (1994).

Hospital's Failure to Agree in Writing to Detainment — No Negligence: The provisions of this section that no person may be detained unless the hospital or mental health facility agrees in writing to admission does not create a basis of liability but is intended to aid in proof that the patient was in fact admitted. When the hospital did not deny admitting the patient, a prima facie case of negligence could not be made. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Weight Given Professional Decision as to Least Restrictive Environment: By its very nature, the concept of a least restrictive environment involves medical connotations outside the scope of knowledge of the layperson and is a judgment that can only be made by an expert who has considered all facts of the case in light of what would be reasonable in similar circumstances. Absent evidence that a patient was placed in other than the least restrictive environment, her lay observations were insufficient to defeat District Court award of summary judgment to the attending physician and the hospital. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Stipulation to Commitment — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive Environment: The appellant, M.C., argued on appeal that evidence was insufficient to warrant his transfer to Montana State Hospital. At a commitment hearing, the District Court heard evidence on M.C.'s inability to cooperate in treatment at the Billings Mental Health Center, as well as testimony from a Center doctor indicating that Montana State Hospital was the least restrictive environment in which M.C. could receive the care and supervision he needed. After the hearing, M.C. and his counsel stipulated to, and the District Court ordered, a commitment to the Billings Mental Health Center or "another mental health facility in Montana". The Supreme Court held this evidence to be sufficient to support the District Court's action in committing M.C. to the Montana State Hospital. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Serious Mental Illness — Source of Findings — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive: The District Court found that C.M. was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment to 53-21-102) and committed her to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital). C.M. appealed from the order of commitment. Three persons testified at the commitment hearing, C.M., C.M.'s mother, and a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist testified that C.M. was seriously mentally ill based on his own examination and on the observations of C.M.'s mother. The court held that a professional person may opine that a person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment to 53-21-102) even though the evidence of an imminent threat of injury, required by statute, is obtained from a source other than the professional person. There was also sufficient evidence that a commitment to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital) was the least restrictive form of commitment. The order of the District Court was affirmed. In re C.M., 195 M 171, 635 P2d 273, 38 St. Rep. 1768 (1981).

Statute Permissive After 2009 Amendments — Friend of Respondent Not Required: The respondent claimed that his statutory and constitutional rights were violated when the District Court and the County Attorney failed to offer a court-appointed friend prior to his commitment to the state hospital. The Supreme Court determined that the language in 53-21-121 regarding a court-appointed friend is permissive based on amendments by the 2009 Legislature, and therefore there was no manifest miscarriage of justice and the integrity of the proceeding was not compromised. In re C.R., 2012 MT 258, 367 Mont. 1, 289 P.3d 125.

No Causal Connection Between Cognitive Disorder and Alleged Criminal Activity — Commitment Order Unwarranted: D.M.S. was charged with two felony DUIs and was the primary suspect in a felony arson investigation involving five vehicle fires. Following a competency evaluation, the District Court adjudicated D.M.S. unfit to proceed in the criminal cases because of the mental disease or defect of cognitive disorder not otherwise specified (NOS), combined with alcohol abuse, borderline intellectual functioning, and antisocial personality disorder. The charges were subsequently dismissed, and the County Attorney immediately filed a petition to commit D.M.S. to the state hospital. After detention and evaluation of D.M.S. at the state hospital, the doctor who conducted the evaluation concluded that D.M.S. did not meet the criteria for commitment. D.M.S. moved to dismiss the petition, but the motion was denied and the case went to trial. The jury found that D.M.S. would be a danger if untreated, and the District Court ordered a 90-day commitment. After the commitment was served, D.M.S. appealed the commitment order. The state did not present any evidence indicating that because of the cognitive disorder NOS, as opposed to alcoholism or antisocial behavior, D.M.S. caused injury or posed a threat of injury to self or others. Therefore, the evidence did not establish a causal connection between the cognitive disorder NOS and the behavior described in the reports or alleged by law enforcement officers. Absent a causal connection, even when viewed in a light most favorable to the state, a rational trier of fact could not have found D.M.S. in need of commitment to the state hospital. The Supreme Court reversed the commitment order and remanded for further proceedings. Pending Appeal Not Divesting District Court of Jurisdiction Over Subsequent Petitions Filed Under Same Cause Number: The District Court Uniform Caseload Filing Standards are intended solely for recordkeeping purposes within the office of the Clerk of Court, and nothing in the standards suggests that a respondent's pending appeal of a single commitment order divests a District Court of subject matter jurisdiction over any subsequent petitions filed under the same cause number. An appeal to the Supreme Court divests the District Court of jurisdiction over only the order or judgment from which the appeal is taken. In re G.M., 2007 MT 100, 337 M 116, 157 P3d 687 (2007). Proper Finding of Mental Disorder — Remand for Determination of Least Restrictive Environment: Respondent expressed suicidal thoughts, mood disorder, and paranoia. Following evaluation, respondent was found to suffer from a mental disorder and was involuntarily committed to the state hospital for up to 3 months. Respondent appealed. The Supreme Court held that the state met its burden of proving that respondent required commitment because he suffered from a mental illness and because his recent and relevant overt acts and omissions posed an imminent threat of self-inflicted injury or injury to others. However, the court remanded because the District Court did not address with detailed findings of fact whether commitment to the state hospital represented the least restrictive environment needed to permit effective treatment and to protect respondent as required in 53-21-127. In re Mental Health of D.S., 2005 MT 152, 327 M 391, 114 P3d 264 (2005).

Statutory Requirements Not Adhered to by Medical Center: A woman was brought by police to the medical center because the officers believed that she was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment). Although the center extended good medical coverage, it held the woman for 5 days rather than 1 before petitioning the District Court to commit her. The lower court found that the evidence demonstrated that the respondent was totally unable to take care of herself. The Supreme Court stated that after reviewing the record, it found that there was overwhelming evidence to support the lower court's finding. The Supreme Court stated that although the case was moot in that the woman had been subsequently released, the medical center had not met the statutory guidelines. The court cautioned that proper procedures should be established to protect the due process rights of the mentally ill. Mental Health of E.P., 241 M 316, 787 P2d 322, 47 St. Rep. 297 (1990).

Evidence of Past Violent Behavior — Admissible in Commitment Proceeding: It was not error, in an involuntary commitment proceeding, to admit evidence of violent behavior by respondent even though the behavior had occurred several years before this proceeding and the incidents were not set forth as allegations in the petition. In re D.B., 218 M 467, 709 P2d 161, 42 St. Rep. 1747 (1985).

Commitment Procedural Safeguards Ignored: The State failed to follow the commitment procedural safeguards in handling Shennum's commitment. The record does not evidence the existence of an emergency situation sufficient to invoke 53-21-129. Shennum was not advised of his constitutional rights before a medical examination incorrectly obtained under a purported emergency situation. Absent an emergency, it was the duty of the County Attorney to proceed in accordance with 53-21-121 through 53-21-126 in order to commit Shennum as a seriously mentally ill person. Several of the procedural protections contained in those sections were ignored. Therefore, the initial commitment was reversed with guidelines for the State to proceed properly in further commitment proceedings. "Seriously Mentally Ill" — Supporting Evidence: There was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion that respondent was "seriously mentally ill", as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), beyond a reasonable doubt, and respondent failed to overcome the burden of providing proof to the contrary; hence, extended detention was warranted. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

Involuntary Commitment — Failure to Appoint Friend of Respondent Reversible Error: In an involuntary commitment case, the District Court made no serious attempt to appoint a friend of respondent for the individual and committed the individual to the state mental hospital. The individual appealed. Because the case involved a substantial liberty interest and failure to review the error would compromise the integrity of the judicial process, the Supreme Court reviewed the case under the plain error doctrine and remanded. The District Court essentially ignored the statutory requirement in 53-21-122 to appoint a friend of respondent, constituting reversible error. In re Mental Health of J.D.L., 2008 MT 445, 348 M 1, 199 P3d 805 (2008), followed in In re Mental Health of A.S.F., 2008 MT 450, 348 M 45, 199 P3d 808 (2008).

Inability to Appoint Friend of Respondent to Assist — Not Reversible Error: The failure of the District Court to appoint a friend of the respondent after having appointed one who was unwilling to serve and finding no one in the community who was willing to assist because of the respondent's psychosis and behavior, was not reversible error because this section requires that a person be willing to serve and the law does not require impossibilities. In re Mental Health of O.R.B., 2008 MT 301, 345 M 516, 191 P3d 482 (2008).

Right to Be Present and Offer Evidence — Not Applicable to Probable Cause at Initial Appearance: E.T. underwent a mental health evaluation, and based upon the results, the County Attorney filed an involuntary commitment upon which the District Court determined that there was probable cause to support a commitment and detention pending E.T.'s initial appearance. At the initial appearance, E.T. objected to the District Court's finding of probable cause and requested a hearing on the probable cause. The court noted the objection but refused to hold a hearing at the initial appearance and stated E.T. would be able to present evidence and testimony at the hearing held pursuant to 53-21-126. E.T. appealed the District Court's refusal. The Supreme Court held that, based upon legislative history that allows the person subject to commitment adequate time to prepare for a hearing, the procedural rights provided under 53-21-115 do not apply to an initial appearance under 53-21-122. In addition, a person subject to immediate detention has the right to immediately contest a probable cause finding that results in an immediate detention pursuant to a hearing under 53-21-124. In re Mental Health of E.T., 2008 MT 299, 345 M 497, 191 P3d 470 (2008).

Denial of Motion for Continuance on Day of Trial in Order to Obtain Different Counsel Not Error: The District Court denied respondent's request on the day of trial to obtain private counsel, which respondent contended was an abuse of discretion. Respondent stated that he had no confidence in his appointed counsel because counsel did not obtain a second independent psychiatric evaluation. The Supreme Court noted that there must be a good cause and a compelling reason when a respondent seeks to dismiss counsel on the day of trial, which did not exist in this case. Respondent actually agreed with the first evaluation, and there was no other evidence that counsel did not advocate for respondent to the best of his ability. Further, respondent's indigency made it unlikely that private counsel could be retained. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in denying respondent's motion for a continuance in order to obtain different counsel. Failure to Appoint Professional Person in Strict Accordance With Statute — Reliance Upon Report of Professional Person Held Insufficient: Lewis and Clark County petitioned the District Court for the involuntary civil commitment of R.M., alleging that R.M. was seriously mentally ill, as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment). Attached to the petition was a "present mental status" report by Frazer. The District Court conducted an immediate hearing at which Frazer testified, but no other witnesses were called. 1073 (1984), and In re S.J., 231 M 353, 753 P2d 319 (1988), the Supreme Court held that the procedural requirements of the civil commitment statutes must be strictly adhered to. The Supreme Court held that it made no difference that the "present mental status" report was prepared by a professional person; the District Court did not appoint a professional person, so that person could not examine R.M. following the person's appointment and then prepare a lawful report. The Supreme Court refused to indulge the state's attempted distinctions concerning compliance with the "heart" of the commitment requirements. In re Mental Health of R.M., 270 M 40, 889 P2d 1201, 52 St. Rep. 68 (1995).

Certified Professional's Testimony — Sufficient to Support Finding of Mental Disorder: J.M.'s cousin requested the Yellowstone County Attorney to petition that J.M. be declared seriously mentally ill, as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), and be committed to a mental health facility. Pursuant to 53-21-122, the District Court appointed a certified mental health professional to evaluate J.M. J.M. was uncooperative in responding to questions from the certified professional. Because of J.M.'s uncooperative attitude, the professional observed J.M. on only two occasions and relied on reports from other people concerning J.M. At the commitment hearing, the professional testified that J.M. was seriously mentally ill, as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), and set forth the data for making the diagnosis, the characteristics of J.M.'s particular disorder, and the effect of the disorder on J.M. The testimony was sufficient to establish that J.M. was suffering from a mental disorder. In re J.M., 217 M 300, 704 P2d 1037, 42 St. Rep. 1212 (1985).

Involuntary Commitment — Appointment of Two Professionals — One May Testify: The lower court appointed two psychiatrists—one to examine G.S. and one to present those findings at the commitment hearing since the examining doctor would be unavailable. The Supreme Court held that the lower court did not err in allowing the second psychiatrist to offer an opinion on the subject's mental condition without formally examining the patient, but relying, instead, on the first doctor's report. Of critical importance is the fact that the doctor who ultimately did diagnose G.S.'s mental condition was available for cross-examination. The critical requirement of professional justification was satisfied. Rule 703, Montana Rules of Evidence, clearly provides that one doctor can state his expert opinion based on another doctor's report. Section 46-14-213(1) does not apply since the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure apply to involuntary commitment procedures. In re G.S., 215 M 384, 698 P2d 406, 42 St. Rep. 451 (1985).

Commitment Procedural Safeguards Ignored: The State failed to follow the commitment procedural safeguards in handling Shennum's commitment. The record does not evidence the existence of an emergency situation sufficient to invoke 53-21-129. Shennum was not advised of his constitutional rights before a medical examination incorrectly obtained under a purported emergency situation. Absent an emergency, it was the duty of the County Attorney to proceed in accordance with 53-21-121 through 53-21-126 in order to commit Shennum as a seriously mentally ill person. Several of the procedural protections contained in those sections were ignored. Therefore, the initial commitment was reversed with guidelines for the State to proceed properly in further commitment proceedings. In re Shennum, 210 M 442, 684 P2d 1073, 41 St. Rep. 1148 (1984), followed in In re Mental Health of R.M., 270 M 40, 889 P2d 1201, 52 St. Rep. 68 (1995).

"Seriously Mentally Ill" — Supporting Evidence: There was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion that respondent was "seriously mentally ill", as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), beyond a reasonable doubt, and respondent failed to overcome the burden of providing proof to the contrary; hence, extended detention was warranted. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 481 inserted (2)(a) regarding recommendations in report; inserted (3)(b) regarding suspension of commitment hearing; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 490 in (1) inserted fourth sentence requiring that the written report contain a statement of the professional person's recommendations to the court; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 40, Ch. 490, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendment: In (2)(a), near beginning, inserted "if he has been detained".

Case Notes

Failure to File Report Not Fatal When Findings and Conclusions Provided in Testimony: Respondent's procedural due process rights were not implicated when the court was given ample opportunity to hear a professional person's report in the form of testimony. In addition, the respondent's own evaluator who attended the examination that was the subject of the report advised the respondent's attorney that he would not testify because he agreed with the findings contained in the report. In re N.A., 2013 MT 255, 371 Mont. 531, 309 P.3d 27.

Commitment Recommendation Report Lacked Recommendation for Disposition — De Minimis Error: Although the report of the professional person recommending commitment did not include his recommendation for disposition as required by this section, the error was de minimis because the detailed testimony of the professional person, both at the probable cause hearing and at the commitment hearing, satisfied statutory requirements and gave notice to O.R.B. In re Mental Health of O.R.B., 2008 MT 301, 345 M 516, 191 P3d 482 (2008).

Right to Be Present and Offer Evidence — Not Applicable to Probable Cause at Initial Appearance: E.T. underwent a mental health evaluation, and based upon the results, the County Attorney filed an involuntary commitment upon which the District Court determined that there was probable cause to support a commitment and detention pending E.T.'s initial appearance. At the initial appearance, E.T. objected to the District Court's finding of probable cause and requested a hearing on the probable cause. The court noted the objection but refused to hold a hearing at the initial appearance and stated E.T. would be able to present evidence and testimony at the hearing held pursuant to 53-21-126. E.T. appealed the District Court's refusal. The Supreme Court held that, based upon legislative history that allows the person subject to commitment adequate time to prepare for a hearing, the procedural rights provided under 53-21-115 do not apply to an initial appearance under 53-21-122. In addition, a person subject to immediate detention has the right to immediately contest a probable cause finding that results in an immediate detention pursuant to a hearing under 53-21-124. Proper Finding of Mental Disorder — Remand for Determination of Least Restrictive Environment: Respondent expressed suicidal thoughts, mood disorder, and paranoia. Following evaluation, respondent was found to suffer from a mental disorder and was involuntarily committed to the state hospital for up to 3 months. Respondent appealed. The Supreme Court held that the state met its burden of proving that respondent required commitment because he suffered from a mental illness and because his recent and relevant overt acts and omissions posed an imminent threat of self-inflicted injury or injury to others. However, the court remanded because the District Court did not address with detailed findings of fact whether commitment to the state hospital represented the least restrictive environment needed to permit effective treatment and to protect respondent as required in 53-21-127. In re Mental Health of D.S., 2005 MT 152, 327 M 391, 114 P3d 264 (2005).

Failure to Present Statutorily Required Evidence — Involuntary Commitment Based on Hearsay Reversed: The only state witness at D.L.T.'s commitment trial was a psychologist who testified regarding matters reported by D.L.T.'s husband and parents, another doctor, and a City Court Judge. Under 53-21-126, the state is also required to present evidence of recent overt acts or omissions separate from a professional person's testimony. Here, the only evidence of D.L.T.'s acts or omissions leading to injury or imminent threat of injury was the hearsay statements of persons not present at the hearing. The laws regarding involuntary commitment must be strictly followed. Because the state failed to introduce the statutorily required evidence, the criteria for involuntary commitment were not met, and the Supreme Court reversed. In re Mental Health of D.L.T., 2003 MT 46, 314 M 297, 67 P3d 189 (2003).

Specific Procedural Safeguards Imposed by Statute to Be Followed: The County Attorney filed a petition alleging that respondent was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment to 53-21-102). At or immediately following the initial appearance, the court issued an order directing that a hearing be held 5 minutes after the initial appearance, stated that a hospital employee's mental evaluation report (done before the initial appearance) was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this section, and ordered that respondent be involuntarily committed to the state hospital. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The District Court erred when it failed to comply with the specific requirements of this section concerning appointment of and examination by a professional person before commitment proceedings continue. In re Mental Health of D.H., 270 M 480, 893 P2d 330, 52 St. Rep. 294 (1995).

1991 Amendments: Chapter 312 in (2) of temporary version, in third sentence after "regional", deleted "central" and in three places substituted reference to community mental health center for reference to mental health facility. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 636 in (2) deleted second through sixth sentences authorizing detention of respondent in jail or correctional facility if no mental health facility is available, requiring immediate notification of jail detention and need for mental health facility placement, and requiring identification of appropriate placement, report on status of placement to jail or correctional facility within every 12-hour period, and prompt notification of court and transfer of respondent to mental health facility when reasonably practical; inserted (4) prohibiting detention of respondent in jail or correctional facility pending hearing or trial to determine issue of commitment; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1989 Amendment: In (2) inserted second through sixth sentences stating circumstances and procedure under which respondent may be detained (see 1989 Session Law for text); in (3), at beginning, inserted "If the respondent is detained"; and made minor changes in form.

Case Notes

Counsel's Failure to Obtain Independent Evaluation — No Ineffective Assistance: After being committed to the state hospital, the respondent claimed ineffective assistance of counsel based on an allegation that his counsel should have obtained an independent professional evaluation. The Supreme Court determined that counsel provided effective representation based on the services provided, including meetings with the respondent and a doctor, cross-examination of the doctor, and a deposition of the respondent the day before the hearing. In re C.R., 2012 MT 258, 367 Mont. 1, 289 P.3d 125, citing In re Mental Health of C.R.C., 2009 MT 125, 350 Mont. 211, 207 P.3d 289, and In re K.G.F., 2001 MT 140, 306 Mont. 1, 29 P.3d 485.

Respondent's Testimony Unreliable — Commitment Order and Administration of Medication Warranted: The District Court ordered involuntary commitment and the involuntary administration of medication after receiving testimony from a doctor, the respondent, and a relative of the respondent. On appeal, the respondent argued that his testimony was sufficient to create reasonable doubt, but the Supreme Court disagreed and affirmed, concluding that the respondent's testimony was unreliable. The District Court correctly determined that the respondent suffered from a mental disorder and that one of the criteria for commitment under 53-21-126 was met. In re C.R., 2012 MT 258, 367 Mont. 1, 289 P.3d 125.

No Evidence That Substance Abuse Caused Conduct That Was Basis for Determination of Mental Illness: The District Court, in concluding that T.J.F. met the statutory criteria for involuntary commitment, did not err by failing to consider T.J.F.'s substance abuse. While there was evidence that T.J.F. used drugs occasionally, there was no evidence in the record that T.J.F. was addicted to drugs or that T.J.F. was using drugs at the time T.J.F. was fleeing from police, running in and out of traffic, causing drivers to slam on their brakes, and punching a patrol car. Expert testimony on the record demonstrated that T.J.F.'s mental disorder caused T.J.F. to exhibit behaviors that put him and others in the community at risk of harm. In re Mental Health of T.J.F., 2011 MT 28, 359 Mont. 213, 248 P.3d 804.

Sufficient Detailed Findings to Support Involuntary Commitment: L.R. asserted that the evidence supporting the District Court's conclusion that she was unable to provide for her needs was not clear and convincing. The Supreme Court disagreed. The District Court found that L.R. suffered from mental illness, identified as a bipolar disorder in an acute manic phase, and that the mental illness was serious because it rendered L.R. unable to make rational decisions or to care for or protect herself. The court also found that L.R. was paranoid, had grandiose thoughts, showed extreme religious ideation, and was suspicious of those trying to help her. These findings were sufficiently detailed to support commitment and provided clear and convincing evidence that L.R. should be committed because of an inability to provide for her own basic needs. In re Mental Health of L.R., 2010 MT 76, 356 Mont. 20, 231 P.3d 594, distinguishing In re E.P.B., 2007 MT 224, 339 Mont. 107, 168 P.3d 662.

Acquiescence to Involuntary Commitment Without Patient's Consent — Client Refusal to Cooperate With Counsel — No Ineffective Assistance Given Counsel's Ongoing Advocacy: C.R.C. asserted that she received ineffective assistance of counsel when her attorney acquiesced to involuntary commitment of C.R.C. without her consent. The Supreme Court examined the record and found that the statutory guidelines for a waiver of C.R.C.'s rights were followed. In addition, the record revealed numerous facts to rebut the presumption that counsel was ineffective. C.R.C. refused to: (1) participate in her own defense; (2) meet with counsel; (3) attend court appearances; or (4) meet with a doctor for an independent psychological evaluation requested by counsel on C.R.C.'s behalf. The record also demonstrated that C.R.C. posed a danger to herself and others, requiring commitment. Yet even without C.R.C.'s input or cooperation, counsel continued to advocate on C.R.C.'s behalf, and counsel followed the law in waiving C.R.C.'s right to an adjudicatory hearing. Therefore, the presumption of ineffective assistance of counsel, when counsel acquiesced to involuntary commitment without C.R.C.'s consent, was rebutted by the facts of the case, and the Supreme Court declined to hold that counsel's actions were ineffective. In re Mental Health of C.R.C., 2009 MT 125, 350 M 211, 207 P3d 289 (2009). No Causal Connection Between Cognitive Disorder and Alleged Criminal Activity — Commitment Order Unwarranted: D.M.S. was charged with two felony DUIs and was the primary suspect in a felony arson investigation involving five vehicle fires. Following a competency evaluation, the District Court adjudicated D.M.S. unfit to proceed in the criminal cases because of the mental disease or defect of cognitive disorder not otherwise specified (NOS), combined with alcohol abuse, borderline intellectual functioning, and antisocial personality disorder. The charges were subsequently dismissed, and the County Attorney immediately filed a petition to commit D.M.S. to the state hospital. After detention and evaluation of D.M.S. at the state hospital, the doctor who conducted the evaluation concluded that D.M.S. did not meet the criteria for commitment. D.M.S. moved to dismiss the petition, but the motion was denied and the case went to trial. The jury found that D.M.S. would be a danger if untreated, and the District Court ordered a 90-day commitment. After the commitment was served, D.M.S. appealed the commitment order. The state did not present any evidence indicating that because of the cognitive disorder NOS, as opposed to alcoholism or antisocial behavior, D.M.S. caused injury or posed a threat of injury to self or others. Therefore, the evidence did not establish a causal connection between the cognitive disorder NOS and the behavior described in the reports or alleged by law enforcement officers. Absent a causal connection, even when viewed in a light most favorable to the state, a rational trier of fact could not have found D.M.S. in need of commitment to the state hospital. The Supreme Court reversed the commitment order and remanded for further proceedings. In re D.M.S., 2009 MT 41, 349 M 257, 203 P3d 776 (2009), following In re Mental Health of A.K., 2006 MT 166, 332 M 511, 139 P3d 849 (2006), and followed in In re Mental Health of M.C.D., 2010 MT 15, 355 Mont. 97, 225 P.3d 1214.

Findings on Section Criteria — Not All Criteria Need Be Met: O.R.B. contended that two findings made under this section were clearly erroneous as descriptions of potential dangers, rather than imminent dangers, but the Supreme Court stated that commitment is justified if any of the criteria under this section are met, which does not require findings as requested by O.R.B. In re Mental Health of O.R.B., 2008 MT 301, 345 M 516, 191 P3d 482 (2008).

Right to Be Present and Offer Evidence — Not Applicable to Probable Cause at Initial Appearance: E.T. underwent a mental health evaluation, and based upon the results, the County Attorney filed an involuntary commitment upon which the District Court determined that there was probable cause to support a commitment and detention pending E.T.'s initial appearance. At the initial appearance, E.T. objected to the District Court's finding of probable cause and requested a hearing on the probable cause. The court noted the objection but refused to hold a hearing at the initial appearance and stated E.T. would be able to present evidence and testimony at the hearing held pursuant to 53-21-126. E.T. appealed the District Court's refusal. The Supreme Court held that, based upon legislative history that allows the person subject to commitment adequate time to prepare for a hearing, the procedural rights provided under 53-21-115 do not apply to an initial appearance under 53-21-122. In addition, a person subject to immediate detention has the right to immediately contest a probable cause finding that results in an immediate detention pursuant to a hearing under 53-21-124. In re Mental Health of E.T., 2008 MT 299, 345 M 497, 191 P3d 470 (2008).

Clear Error in Finding That Behavior Posing Risk of Harm Precluded Community Placement — Involuntary Recommitment Reversed: The District Court held that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and that G.M.'s behavior could not be safely and effectively rehabilitated in community-based services because of behavior that posed an imminent risk of serious harm to G.M. or others. The court then ordered that G.M. be involuntarily recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for no more than 1 year. G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that all evidence was properly submitted and that expert testimony was properly admitted. However, G.M.'s expert's testimony and the actual incident reports presented by the state revealed that the reports did not give an accurate picture of G.M.'s condition, in that during most of the reported incidents, G.M. was not the aggressor. In fact, the reports affirmed G.M.'s expert's opinion that it was the group living environment that contributed significantly to G.M.'s behavioral difficulties and that placing G.M. in a community setting with fewer people would ameliorate G.M.'s aggressive tendencies. The state presented no evidence to contradict the expert's opinion that the institutional setting was probably responsible for the behaviors that kept G.M. in the institution and that individuals with worse aggressive tendencies were successfully living in community settings or to explain why G.M.'s actions would make placement in a community setting unsafe. Additionally, G.M.'s aunt's testimony regarding her personal observations of G.M.'s demeanor and self-control when not in an institutional setting confirmed the expert's opinion and tended to prove that G.M. did not pose a risk of harm and could be safely habilitated in the community. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the District Court incorrectly concluded that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and reversed with instructions to vacate the recommitment order. In re G.M., 2008 MT 200, 344 M 87, 186 P3d 229 (2008).

Attachment and Incorporation of Hearsay Report Into Commitment Order Rendered Harmless by Nonhearsay Testimony: A.S.B. asserted that the District Court erred in attaching and incorporating the report of an examining professional that contained inadmissible hearsay. The Supreme Court agreed that the District Court erred, but in light of the fact that information in the report was adequately supported by the hearing testimony of the same professional as well as two other professionals and a police officer, the error was harmless. In re Mental Health of A.S.B., 2008 MT 82, 342 M 169, 180 P3d 625 (2008).

Constitutionality of Deterioration Standard in Involuntary Commitment Cases Not Raised in District Court — Substantial Rights Not Sufficiently Affected to Warrant Review: A.S.B. contended on appeal that the deterioration standard set out in this section is unconstitutional because it purports to allow involuntary commitment based on the mere possibility that an individual's condition may worsen to a point at which the person poses a threat of harm to self or others and that the speculative nature of the standard was not a constitutionally adequate purpose for the confinement. However, A.S.B. did not raise the constitutional issue in District Court, and the Supreme Court held that the alleged error did not affect A.S.B.'s substantial rights sufficiently to warrant review. In re Mental Health of A.S.B., 2008 MT 82, 342 M 169, 180 P3d 625 (2008).

Sufficient Evidence That Untreated Mental Condition Posed Threat of Harm — Involuntary Commitment Affirmed: A.S.B. argued that there was insufficient evidence to support the District Court's finding by clear and convincing evidence that A.S.B.'s mental condition, if left untreated, would deteriorate to a point at which A.S.B. would pose a threat to himself or others. The Supreme Court disagreed. Three examining professionals testified that A.S.B. was likely to hurt somebody if he was not treated for paranoid schizophrenia, so the state met the requirement of proving that A.S.B.'s condition would predictably result in deterioration if untreated, thereby threatening the well-being of himself or others. In re Mental Health of A.S.B., 2008 MT 82, 342 M 169, 180 P3d 625 (2008).

Failure of District Court to Make Detailed Findings of Fact to Support Involuntary Commitment — Reversible Error: A hearing on a petition for involuntary commitment is not merely a pro forma requirement but an opportunity for both the petitioner and respondent to present evidence upon which a trial court can make required findings and enter appropriate orders. As petitioner, the state bears the burden of proving any physical facts or evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, the respondent's mental disorder to a reasonable medical certainty, and other matters by clear and convincing evidence. In ordering commitment, the trial court must make a detailed statement of facts upon which it found respondent to be suffering from a mental disorder requiring commitment. In this case, the issue was whether the trial court's findings met statutory requirements, which the Supreme Court reviewed de novo. The trial court merely recited the testimony of a health care professional, noted that it was consistent with another professional's findings, and ordered commitment. This was not the detailed statement of facts required under 53-21-127, and the Supreme Court reversed and remanded with instructions to vacate the commitment order. In re Mental Health of E.P.B., 2007 MT 224, 339 M 107, 168 P3d 662 (2007). See also In re L.L.A., 2011 MT 285, 362 Mont. 464, 267 P.3d 1 (reversing involuntary commitment where findings of fact contained seven brief findings of facts and did not comply with 53-21-127(8)(a)).

Cognitive Delays and Substance Abuse Not Factors to Be Used as Basis for Involuntary Commitment: Mental retardation is not a mental disorder for purposes of treatment of the seriously mentally ill, and cognitive delays may not be used for purposes of determining that because of a mental disorder, a person presents an imminent threat requiring involuntary commitment. Likewise, drug or alcohol addiction or intoxication does not constitute a mental disorder for purposes of treatment of the seriously mentally ill. Here, the District Court involuntarily committed respondent after including reference to respondent's mild mental retardation and polysubstance abuse in the finding that respondent suffered from a mental illness. That inclusion, when overlaid onto the court's subsequent findings and absent sufficient evidence, did not meet the statutory requirements for involuntary commitment, and the Supreme Court reversed the commitment order. In re A.K., 2006 MT 166, 332 M 511, 139 P3d 849 (2006).

Proper Finding of Mental Disorder — Remand for Determination of Least Restrictive Environment: Respondent expressed suicidal thoughts, mood disorder, and paranoia. Following evaluation, respondent was found to suffer from a mental disorder and was involuntarily committed to the state hospital for up to 3 months. Respondent appealed. The Supreme Court held that the state met its burden of proving that respondent required commitment because he suffered from a mental illness and because his recent and relevant overt acts and omissions posed an imminent threat of self-inflicted injury or injury to others. However, the court remanded because the District Court did not address with detailed findings of fact whether commitment to the state hospital represented the least restrictive environment needed to permit effective treatment and to protect respondent as required in 53-21-127. In re Mental Health of D.S., 2005 MT 152, 327 M 391, 114 P3d 264 (2005).

Failure to Present Statutorily Required Evidence — Involuntary Commitment Based on Hearsay Reversed: The only state witness at D.L.T.'s commitment trial was a psychologist who testified regarding matters reported by D.L.T.'s husband and parents, another doctor, and a City Court Judge. Under this section, the state is also required to present evidence of recent overt acts or omissions separate from a professional person's testimony. Here, the only evidence of D.L.T.'s acts or omissions leading to injury or imminent threat of injury was the hearsay statements of persons not present at the hearing. The laws regarding involuntary commitment must be strictly followed. Because the state failed to introduce the statutorily required evidence, the criteria for involuntary commitment were not met, and the Supreme Court reversed. In re Mental Health of D.L.T., 2003 MT 46, 314 M 297, 67 P3d 189 (2003).

Erroneous Reliance on Inadmissible Hearsay Evidence to Support Commitment — Harmless Error Doctrine Inapplicable: The District Court involuntarily committed T.J.D., with the commitment suspended on the condition that T.J.D. immediately begin participation in mental health treatment, after finding that T.J.D. had engaged in continuing behavior that threatened others and endangered the community, that the behavior was consistent with mental illness, and that there was no evidence that the behavior would change. T.J.D. appealed on grounds that the court relied on inadmissible hearsay in a doctor's report to support the commitment. The Supreme Court agreed and reversed. The doctor was the only witness at the commitment hearing, and the doctor's report was the only evidence in the record. Hearsay statements in the report that were allegedly made by T.J.D.'s boyfriend were the only evidence that the court could have relied on to find an imminent threat of injury. The only other evidence was acts that occurred in 1983 and 1997, and could not be considered imminent to support a commitment in 2000, because the acts were not sufficiently recent in time as to be material and relevant to T.J.D.'s present condition. The Supreme Court also declined to apply the harmless error doctrine, which the state argued should apply because the commitment was suspended on conditions, and T.J.D. suffered no harmful effect from the commitment. Although the commitment was suspended, T.J.D.'s liberty was still restricted by the conditions, and the stigma involved in a civil commitment remained; thus, the error was not harmless. In re Mental Health of T.J.D., 2002 MT 24, 308 M 222, 41 P3d 323 (2002).

Verbal Threat as Constituting Overt Act: E.M., a 57-year-old woman, was committed to a mental institution mainly on the basis of verbal threats on her part that she was going to get a gun and kill her neighbor and herself. The Supreme Court held that a verbal threat could constitute an overt act of an imminent threat of injury to herself or another, which is the statutory requirement to trigger commitment of a disturbed person. In re Mental Health of E.M., 265 M 211, 875 P2d 355, 51 St. Rep. 487 (1994), followed in In re D.D., 277 M 164, 920 P2d 973, 53 St. Rep. 587 (1996).

Exclusionary Rule Inapplicable to Civil Involuntary Commitment Hearing: L.B. was examined by a professional person and determined to suffer from a serious mental disorder that required treatment. Following presentation of the professional's testimony at a hearing for involuntary commitment, the District Court held that the testimony was too speculative and ordered L.B. released. After the hearing, L.B. was detained by the Sheriff's office for a short time in an attempt to find a place for him, rather than just sending him out onto the streets. During his detention, L.B. was examined by a second professional person who determined that L.B. should be involuntarily committed to the state hospital for immediate treatment, and a second petition for commitment was filed that same day. The District Court subsequently determined that L.B.'s mental illness deprived him of the ability to protect his life or health and transferred him to the state hospital for treatment. L.B. argued that all evidence obtained after the order for release should be suppressed under the exclusionary rule because such proceedings may result in a massive curtailment of liberty for the person committed. However, noting the civil nature of commitment proceedings, the Supreme Court declined to apply the criminal law exclusionary rule because to suppress relevant evidence would defeat the purpose of the proceeding, which is to secure the appropriate treatment for those who need it and are unable to obtain it because of their mental condition. In re Mental Health of L.C.B., 253 M 1, 830 P2d 1299, 49 St. Rep. 290 (1992).

Res Judicata Inapplicable to Involuntary Commitment Hearing: L.B. was examined by a professional person and determined to suffer from a serious mental disorder that required treatment. Following presentation of the professional's testimony at a hearing for involuntary commitment, the District Court held that the testimony was too speculative and ordered L.B. released. After the hearing, L.B. was detained by the Sheriff's office for a short time in an attempt to find a place for him, rather than just sending him out onto the streets. During his detention, L.B. was examined by a second professional person who determined that L.B. should be involuntarily committed to the state hospital for immediate treatment, and a second petition for commitment was filed that same day. The District Court subsequently determined that L.B.'s mental illness deprived him of the ability to protect his life or health and transferred him to the state hospital for treatment. L.B. argued that the doctrine of res judicata barred consideration of the second petition. However, the District Court expressly prohibited the introduction of evidence relating to the time period prior to the first hearing; therefore, the issues were not the same in the second hearing, nor could the first order releasing L.B. be considered final and subject to res judicata. The question of whether an individual is seriously mentally ill may be brought at any time as long as the necessary statutory criteria are met. A finding at one time that an individual does not suffer from a serious mental illness is not intended to be a final and irrevocable decision on the individual's mental health. In re Mental Health of L.C.B., 253 M 1, 830 P2d 1299, 49 St. Rep. 290 (1992).

Standard of Proof:

The parents of G.P. filed a request with the Yellowstone County Attorney to have their son involuntarily committed. G.P. was evaluated by a psychiatrist who testified at the commitment hearing that G.P. was "beyond a reasonable doubt seriously mentally ill as defined in section 53-21-102, MCA" (see 1997 amendment). G.P. was committed and, on appeal, challenged the District Court finding that he was seriously mentally ill, rather than only mentally ill, claiming that there was no proof of overt acts. The Supreme Court held that overt acts are only necessary to prove serious mental illness based on "self-inflicted injury or injury to others or the imminent threat thereof" but not necessary to prove serious mental illness based on a respondent "suffering from a mental disorder . . . which has deprived the person afflicted of the ability to protect his life or health" as provided under 53-21-102. The Supreme Court noted that the psychiatrist testified that G.P. suffered from auditory hallucinations that directed him to do things that he could not control, that G.P.'s roommate testified that G.P. refused to take his medicine and denied that he needed medicine, and that G.P.'s parents testified that G.P. ate very little. The Supreme Court found that this evidence satisfied the standard in subsection (2) of this section because it indicated that G.P.'s illness was interrupting his cognitive process and causing delusional thinking, which condition rendered him unable to protect his own life or health. In re G.P., 246 M 195, 806 P2d 3, 47 St. Rep. 1840 (1990), followed in In re Mental Health of L.C.B., 253 M 1, 830 P2d 1299, 49 St. Rep. 290 (1992), and In re R.F., 2013 MT 59, 369 Mont. 236, 296 P.3d 1189.

Patient, appealing the order for his involuntary commitment to the state mental hospital, suffered from chronic paranoid schizophrenia that caused him to become angry and hostile when his delusions were challenged. Evidence showed he owned and carried weapons. There was sufficient evidence on which the court could base a finding of serious mental illness (see 1997 amendment). The statute does not require a court to wait until a person actually uses a weapon against another person before finding him seriously mentally ill. In re Mental Health of R.J.W., 226 M 419, 736 P2d 110, 44 St. Rep. 770 (1987).

Proof that appellant made verbal threats about feeling like "killing anybody and anyone in sight", refused to take medication, and had had five previous hospitalizations precipitated by refusal to take medication was sufficient to meet the standard of proof required by this section. In re J.B., 217 M 504, 705 P2d 598, 42 St. Rep. 1335 (1985).

Proof that appellant jumped out of a moving car with the intent to kill herself was sufficient to meet the standard of proof required by this section. In re the Mental Health of A.G., 208 M 366, 677 P2d 592, 41 St. Rep. 406 (1984).

Order Extending Involuntary Commitment Proper — Threat of Physical Injury: It was not error for the District Court to extend the involuntary commitment of a seriously mentally ill patient in light of sufficient evidence that she had made suicidal and homicidal threats, was considered an imminent threat of physical injury to herself or others, and needed institutional supervision to ensure continuation of her medical therapeutic intervention program. Threats made within 4 months were sufficiently recent in time to be material and relevant as to patient's present condition. In re M.J.P., 226 M 183, 734 P2d 689, 44 St. Rep. 572 (1987).

Sufficient Evidence of Mental Condition — Lapse of Time Between Overt Acts and Commitment Hearing: D.R.S. contended that the state failed to show "overt acts, sufficiently recent in time as to be material and relevant" to his condition at the time of a commitment hearing. He claimed the acts allegedly committed almost 2 ½ years prior to the hearing did not satisfy the requirement of a recent overt act. The Supreme Court noted that the time lapse between the overt acts and the hearing was due to his serious mental illness (see 1997 amendment). Evidence showed that his condition remained as it was at the time of the overt acts and that he would be imminently dangerous within 2 months of leaving the supervised hospital setting. In affirming the order of commitment, the court found that these circumstances were such that the time lapse did not preclude relying on the overt acts as evidence of D.R.S.'s mental condition. In re Mental Health of D.R.S., 221 M 245, 718 P2d 335, 43 St. Rep. 783 (1986).

Admissibility of Evidence at Hearing on Transfer of Patient for Treatment: Between an initial commitment hearing and a hearing on the question of transferring treatment, appellant filed two motions in limine, which the District Court denied. The first motion requested that the state be precluded from eliciting testimony at the transfer hearing based on an evaluation made after the commitment hearing. On the second motion, he contended that the order of commitment was final as to all events litigated at the initial hearing and that none of the earlier events should have been referred to at the transfer hearing. He argued that 53-21-101, et seq., provided no authority for using evaluations made after a final commitment hearing in a later transfer hearing. Both 53-21-130 and 53-21-182 refer to transfers to other facilities for treatment; however, neither statute restricts what evidence may be admissible at a transfer hearing. The Supreme Court found no error in the denial of the motions, holding that any evidence admissible at a final commitment hearing which is relevant to the transfer should be admissible at the transfer hearing, including the opinions of professional persons and evidence of overt acts, as described in 53-21-126. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Detention Prior to Court Finding of Serious Mental Illness — Determination by Professional Person Rather Than Peace Officer: Appellant, M.C., argued that under 53-21-129, the peace officer makes the initial decision on whether an emergency situation exists and that in this case the officer did not make that decision. M.C. also contended that the evidence was insufficient to hold him on an emergency basis. The Supreme Court held that 53-21-129 merely permits the officer to take a person into custody for an evaluation. It does not give the officer authority to decide whether the person should be placed in emergency detention; rather, the professional person determines whether the person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and should be placed in emergency detention. Once that determination is made, it constitutes sufficient evidence that the person may be detained. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Stipulation to Commitment — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive Environment: The appellant, M.C., argued on appeal that evidence was insufficient to warrant his transfer to Montana State Hospital. At a commitment hearing, the District Court heard evidence on M.C.'s inability to cooperate in treatment at the Billings Mental Health Center, as well as testimony from a Center doctor indicating that Montana State Hospital was the least restrictive environment in which M.C. could receive the care and supervision he needed. After the hearing, M.C. and his counsel stipulated to, and the District Court ordered, a commitment to the Billings Mental Health Center or "another mental health facility in Montana". The Supreme Court held this evidence to be sufficient to support the District Court's action in committing M.C. to the Montana State Hospital. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Evidence of Past Violent Behavior — Admissible in Commitment Proceeding: It was not error, in an involuntary commitment proceeding, to admit evidence of violent behavior by respondent even though the behavior had occurred several years before this proceeding and the incidents were not set forth as allegations in the petition. In re D.B., 218 M 467, 709 P2d 161, 42 St. Rep. 1747 (1985).

Certified Professional's Testimony — Sufficient to Support Finding of Mental Disorder: J.M.'s cousin requested the Yellowstone County Attorney to petition that J.M. be declared seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and be committed to a mental health facility. Pursuant to 53-21-122, the District Court appointed a certified mental health professional to evaluate J.M. J.M. was uncooperative in responding to questions from the certified professional. Because of J.M.'s uncooperative attitude, the professional observed J.M. on only two occasions and relied on reports from other people concerning J.M. At the commitment hearing, the professional testified that J.M. was seriously mentally ill and set forth the data for making the diagnosis, the characteristics of J.M.'s particular disorder, and the effect of the disorder on J.M. The testimony was sufficient to establish that J.M. was suffering from a mental disorder. In re J.M., 217 M 300, 704 P2d 1037, 42 St. Rep. 1212 (1985).

Involuntary Commitment — Appointment of Two Professionals — One May Testify: The lower court appointed two psychiatrists—one to examine G.S. and one to present those findings at the commitment hearing since the examining doctor would be unavailable. The Supreme Court held that the lower court did not err in allowing the second psychiatrist to offer an opinion on the subject's mental condition without formally examining the patient, but relying, instead, on the first doctor's report. Of critical importance is the fact that the doctor who ultimately did diagnose G.S.'s mental condition was available for cross-examination. The critical requirement of professional justification was satisfied. Rule 703, Montana Rules of Evidence, clearly provides that one doctor can state his expert opinion based on another doctor's report. Section 46-14-213(1) does not apply since the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure apply to involuntary commitment procedures. In re G.S., 215 M 384, 698 P2d 406, 42 St. Rep. 451 (1985).

Substantial Evidence to Support Order of Commitment — Scope of Review: The Supreme Court found substantial evidence to support the lower court's order of commitment. The oral testimony of Dr. Hughes, various medical reports submitted by the psychiatrists, and hospital records were relied upon by the judge. Appellant expressly asked the Supreme Court to review the weight of Dr. Hughes' testimony. That is not the role of an appellate court. The trier of fact makes findings, and the Supreme Court will not disturb them unless shown to be clearly erroneous. In re G.S., 215 M 384, 698 P2d 406, 42 St. Rep. 451 (1985).

Commitment Procedural Safeguards Ignored: The State failed to follow the commitment procedural safeguards in handling Shennum's commitment. The record does not evidence the existence of an emergency situation sufficient to invoke 53-21-129. Shennum was not advised of his constitutional rights before a medical examination incorrectly obtained under a purported emergency situation. Absent an emergency, it was the duty of the County Attorney to proceed in accordance with 53-21-121 through 53-21-126 in order to commit Shennum as a seriously mentally ill person. Several of the procedural protections contained in those sections were ignored. Therefore, the initial commitment was reversed with guidelines for the State to proceed properly in further commitment proceedings. In re Shennum, 210 M 442, 684 P2d 1073, 41 St. Rep. 1148 (1984).

Evidence Insufficient for Involuntary Commitment: Testimony at trial did not clearly and convincingly establish that respondent, due to his mental condition, was unable to protect his life or health at the time of the trial. Therefore, the evidence that respondent was "seriously mentally ill" within the meaning of 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment) was insufficient as a matter of law, and the District Court commitment order was vacated. In re R.T., 204 M 493, 665 P2d 789, 40 St. Rep. 1025 (1983).

Serious Mental Illness — Source of Findings — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive: The District Court found that C.M. was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and committed her to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital). C.M. appealed from the order of commitment. Three persons testified at the commitment hearing, C.M., C.M.'s mother, and a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist testified that C.M. was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) based on his own examination and on the observations of C.M.'s mother. The court held that a professional person may opine that a person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) even though the evidence of an imminent threat of injury, required by statute, is obtained from a source other than the professional person. There was also sufficient evidence that a commitment to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital) was the least restrictive form of commitment. The order of the District Court was affirmed. In re C.M., 195 M 171, 635 P2d 273, 38 St. Rep. 1768 (1981). See also In re J.M., 217 M 300, 704 P2d 1037, 42 St. Rep. 1212 (1985).

Constitutionality — Burden of Persuasion Not Met: Where, following a brief interview with a mental health counselor-therapist, the appellant was found to be seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) "to a reasonable medical certainty" and was committed to a state mental hospital, the Supreme Court found that 53-21-126 did not alter the standard of proof of clear and convincing evidence of mental disorder required for involuntary commitment in Addington v. Addington, 441 US 418 (1979). The court found that 53-21-126 merely creates a standard for the medical witness testimony at commitment proceedings, which must, when considered with all other evidence in the case, show by clear and convincing evidence that a mental disorder exists. Because the District Court had erred in its finding that the legal standard was met by the evidence presented, the Supreme Court reversed the decision of the District Court. In re N.B., 190 M 319, 620 P2d 1228, 37 St. Rep. 2031 (1980).

Requirements to Support Finding of Serious Mental Illness: Appellant appeals from a commitment order based on a finding that he is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment). Such a finding requires the state to show (1) a mental disorder; and (2) that the mental disorder has resulted in self-inflicted injury, injury to others, or an "imminent threat thereof". In light of the difficulty of predicting that a given mental state is likely to result in future antisocial conduct, it is necessary to require the commission of some overt act. When this is coupled with psychiatric evaluation, the court will then be in a better position to assess the likelihood of the individual committing similar acts. The law requires only proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the threat of future injury presently exists and that the threat is imminent, that is, impending, likely to occur at any moment. The record showed that appellant caused several disturbances at the hotel where he stayed and then at the hospital. The record supported the finding that the appellant posed an "imminent threat of injury to others" and met the definition of "seriously mentally ill" (see 1997 amendment) in the statute. In re F.B., 189 M 229, 615 P2d 867, 37 St. Rep. 1442 (1980), followed in In re D.D., 277 M 164, 920 P2d 973, 53 St. Rep. 587 (1996), and In re Mental Health of A.S.B., 2008 MT 82, 342 M 169, 180 P3d 625 (2008).

Determination of Mental Illness — Overt Act: A person who has spent a substantial portion of the last 20 years in institutions and who has a history of threatening others was found to be "seriously mentally ill", as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment). The statute requires an overt act and, while every threat cannot be considered an overt act, the testimony and circumstances of this case indicated that the appellant's threat fulfilled the requirement. In re Goedert, 180 M 484, 591 P2d 222, 36 St. Rep. 393 (1979).

"Seriously Mentally Ill" — Supporting Evidence: There was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion that respondent was "seriously mentally ill", as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), beyond a reasonable doubt, and respondent failed to overcome the burden of providing proof to the contrary; hence, extended detention was warranted. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

(v) make some other appropriate order for treatment"; in (4) at beginning inserted exception clause and substituted "this section" for "this subsection"; in (7) in second sentence inserted "or program or an appropriate course of treatment as provided in subsection (3)(b)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 490 in (1), after "respondent is not", substituted "suffering from a mental disorder or does not require commitment" for "seriously mentally ill"; in(2)(a), in first sentence after "respondent is", substituted "suffering from a mental disorder and requires commitment" for "seriously mentally ill"; in (2)(a)(i), after "respondent to", substituted "the state hospital" for "a facility"; inserted (2)(a)(ii) regarding commitment to a community facility or program for up to 3 months; in (2)(b), after "custody", inserted "or course of treatment"; in (2)(c), in first sentence after first "alternatives", inserted "in subsection (2)(a)", deleted former second sentence that read: "The court shall consider and shall describe in its order what alternatives for treatment of the respondent are available, what alternatives were investigated, and why the investigated alternatives were not deemed suitable", in second and third sentences, after "facility", inserted "or a physician designated by the court", at end of fourth sentence, after "facility", inserted "or program", and deleted last sentence that read: "The court shall enter into the record a detailed statement of the facts upon which it found the respondent to be seriously mentally ill and, if the court authorized involuntary medication, of the facts upon which it found involuntary medication to be necessary"; inserted (2)(d) and (2)(e) regarding required findings related to commitment; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 40, Ch. 490, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 434 in (2)(c), in both versions, inserted third through ninth sentences outlining procedure for involuntarily administering medication to patient at mental health facility and at end of last sentence inserted "and, if the court authorized involuntary medication, of the facts upon which it found involuntary medication to be necessary"; and made minor changes in style.

Code Commissioner Change: Pursuant to sec. 4, Ch. 546, L. 1995, the Code Commissioner substituted Department of Public Health and Human Services for Department of Corrections and Human Services.

1987 Amendment: In (1), near beginning, inserted "mentally ill or"; in (2)(a), near beginning, inserted "in a proceeding under 53-21-121(1)(a)"; inserted (3) establishing conditions on an order of temporary treatment; and inserted (4) outlining required court actions regarding findings of fact, naming of the responsible facility, and legal enforcement of medication requirements.

Case Notes

Detailed Statement of Facts — No Application to Involuntary Medication: Following a 2-day trial, a jury concluded by special verdict form that L.A. was suffering from a mental disorder and required involuntary medication. L.A. claimed that the special verdict form did not satisfy the requirement that the District Court make a detailed statement of facts supporting an order of involuntary medication. The Supreme Court concluded that the statute requiring a detailed order does not apply to involuntary medication. In re L.A., 2013 MT 327, 372 Mont. 368, 313 P.3d 115.

Jury Verdict for Involuntary Commitment — Detailed Statement of Facts Unnecessary When Court Findings Support Reasoning to Commit: Following a 2-day trial, a jury concluded by special verdict form that L.A. was suffering from a mental disorder and was an imminent threat to herself. L.A. appealed her involuntary commitment, claiming that the special verdict form did not satisfy the requirement that the District Court make a detailed statement of facts supporting an order of commitment. The Supreme Court concluded that when a jury finds for commitment, the requirement for a District Court to provide a detailed statement of facts in its posttrial disposition order is unworkable because the judge is not privy to the jury's reasoning. Here, the Supreme Court concluded that the special verdict form, along with the additional findings by the judge, satisfied the statute. In re L.A., 2013 MT 327, 372 Mont. 368, 313 P.3d 115.

Valid Order Authorizing Involuntary Medication: Counsel for the respondent alleged the District Court's order of commitment was insufficient to allow the respondent his medication to be involuntarily administered, but the District Court's directive that the respondent "shall take such medication . . . both at the state hospital and, also, during community outpatient treatment" was sufficient to authorize involuntary medication when the District Court's other findings made clear the necessity for the involuntary medication to protect the respondent. In re R.W.K., 2013 MT 54, 369 Mont. 193, 297 P.3d 318.

Respondent's Testimony Unreliable — Commitment Order and Administration of Medication Warranted: The District Court ordered involuntary commitment and the involuntary administration of medication after receiving testimony from a doctor, the respondent, and a relative of the respondent. On appeal, the respondent argued that his testimony was sufficient to create reasonable doubt, but the Supreme Court disagreed and affirmed, concluding that the respondent's testimony was unreliable. The District Court correctly determined that the respondent suffered from a mental disorder and that one of the criteria for commitment under 53-21-126 was met. In re C.R., 2012 MT 258, 367 Mont. 1, 289 P.3d 125.

No Evidence That Substance Abuse Caused Conduct That Was Basis for Determination of Mental Illness: The District Court, in concluding that T.J.F. met the statutory criteria for involuntary commitment, did not err by failing to consider T.J.F.'s substance abuse. While there was evidence that T.J.F. used drugs occasionally, there was no evidence in the record that T.J.F. was addicted to drugs or that T.J.F. was using drugs at the time T.J.F. was fleeing from police, running in and out of traffic, causing drivers to slam on their brakes, and punching a patrol car. Expert testimony on the record demonstrated that T.J.F.'s mental disorder caused T.J.F. to exhibit behaviors that put him and others in the community at risk of harm. In re Mental Health of T.J.F., 2011 MT 28, 359 Mont. 213, 248 P.3d 804.

Sufficient Detailed Findings to Support Involuntary Commitment: L.R. asserted that the evidence supporting the District Court's conclusion that she was unable to provide for her needs was not clear and convincing. The Supreme Court disagreed. The District Court found that L.R. suffered from mental illness, identified as a bipolar disorder in an acute manic phase, and that the mental illness was serious because it rendered L.R. unable to make rational decisions or to care for or protect herself. The court also found that L.R. was paranoid, had grandiose thoughts, showed extreme religious ideation, and was suspicious of those trying to help her. These findings were sufficiently detailed to support commitment and provided clear and convincing evidence that L.R. should be committed because of an inability to provide for her own basic needs. In re Mental Health of L.R., 2010 MT 76, 356 Mont. 20, 231 P.3d 594, distinguishing In re E.P.B., 2007 MT 224, 339 Mont. 107, 168 P.3d 662.

Findings Sufficiently Detailed — Written and Oral: O.R.B. contended that the District Court made generalized findings of fact, but the Supreme Court reviewing the order and transcript determined that the District Court provided an impressive amount of detail satisfying the requirements of this section. In re Mental Health of O.R.B., 2008 MT 301, 345 M 516, 191 P3d 482 (2008). See also In re Ward Revocable Trust, 2011 MT 308, 363 Mont. 72, 265 P.3d 1260.

Failure of District Court to Make Detailed Findings of Fact to Support Involuntary Commitment — Reversible Error: A hearing on a petition for involuntary commitment is not merely a pro forma requirement but an opportunity for both the petitioner and respondent to present evidence upon which a trial court can make required findings and enter appropriate orders. As petitioner, the state bears the burden of proving any physical facts or evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, the respondent's mental disorder to a reasonable medical certainty, and other matters by clear and convincing evidence. In ordering commitment, the trial court must make a detailed statement of facts upon which it found respondent to be suffering from a mental disorder requiring commitment. In this case, the issue was whether the trial court's findings met statutory requirements, which the Supreme Court reviewed de novo. The trial court merely recited the testimony of a health care professional, noted that it was consistent with another professional's findings, and ordered commitment. This was not the detailed statement of facts required under this section, and the Supreme Court reversed and remanded with instructions to vacate the commitment order. In re Mental Health of E.P.B., 2007 MT 224, 339 M 107, 168 P3d 662 (2007). See also In re L.L.A., 2011 MT 285, 362 Mont. 464, 267 P.3d 1 (reversing involuntary commitment where findings of fact contained seven brief findings of facts and did not comply with 53-21-127(8)(a)).

Failure of District Court to Provide Detailed Facts Supporting Commitment Order — Commitment Order Reversed: Because the statutes governing involuntary commitment are critically important because of the calamitous effect of a commitment, trial courts must strictly comply with the relevant statutes, including the requirement to provide a detailed statement of facts supporting an order of commitment. Here, failure of a trial court to provide the required statement of facts warranted reversal of a commitment order. In re G.M., 2007 MT 100, 337 M 116, 157 P3d 687 (2007), following In re A.K., 2006 MT 166, 332 M 511, 139 P3d 849 (2006).

Cognitive Delays and Substance Abuse Not Factors to Be Used as Basis for Involuntary Commitment: Mental retardation is not a mental disorder for purposes of treatment of the seriously mentally ill, and cognitive delays may not be used for purposes of determining that because of a mental disorder, a person presents an imminent threat requiring involuntary commitment. Likewise, drug or alcohol addiction or intoxication does not constitute a mental disorder for purposes of treatment of the seriously mentally ill. Here, the District Court involuntarily committed respondent after including reference to respondent's mild mental retardation and polysubstance abuse in the finding that respondent suffered from a mental illness. That inclusion, when overlaid onto the court's subsequent findings and absent sufficient evidence, did not meet the statutory requirements for involuntary commitment, and the Supreme Court reversed the commitment order. In re A.K., 2006 MT 166, 332 M 511, 139 P3d 849 (2006).

Proper Finding of Mental Disorder — Remand for Determination of Least Restrictive Environment: Respondent expressed suicidal thoughts, mood disorder, and paranoia. Following evaluation, respondent was found to suffer from a mental disorder and was involuntarily committed to the state hospital for up to 3 months. Respondent appealed. The Supreme Court held that the state met its burden of proving that respondent required commitment because he suffered from a mental illness and because his recent and relevant overt acts and omissions posed an imminent threat of self-inflicted injury or injury to others. However, the court remanded because the District Court did not address with detailed findings of fact whether commitment to the state hospital represented the least restrictive environment needed to permit effective treatment and to protect respondent as required in this section. In re Mental Health of D.S., 2005 MT 152, 327 M 391, 114 P3d 264 (2005).

Findings Required as Prerequisite for Involuntary Medication Order — Due Process and Right to Privacy — Common Law Superseded: S.C. was ordered by the District Court to undergo involuntary medication to treat her schizophrenia and appealed to the Supreme Court, claiming that the District Court violated her common-law right to refuse medication and her right to privacy and due process. S.C. also claimed that the District Court did not make the statutorily required finding stating the reason why involuntary medication was chosen by the District Court from among other alternatives available. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court, holding that: (1) because there was a statutory scheme for ordering involuntary medication, there was no common-law right in Montana to refuse medication; (2) S.C.'s premise, that she had been unlawfully declared incompetent, was a false premise in that the statutory scheme required a finding of a mental disorder rather than incompetency and that S.C. had not particularly shown how the Montana commitment statutes were unconstitutional; and (3) it was clear from the detailed findings of the District Court that the court believed that involuntary medication was the most appropriate and least restrictive alternative. The Supreme Court also relied on the doctrine of implied findings to hold that the District Court had made all of the findings necessary to invoke the remedy of involuntary medication. In re Mental Health of S.C., 2000 MT 370, 303 M 444, 15 P3d 861, 57 St. Rep. 1584 (2000).

Requirement of Note That Benefit of Rights Received: The District Court is required to note in its order of involuntary commitment that persons to be committed have received the benefit of all applicable statutory and constitutional rights. In re S.J. & T.F., 231 M 353, 753 P2d 319, 45 St. Rep. 675 (1988).

Lack of Detailed Statement Harmless Error: Patient appealed the order for his involuntary commitment to the state mental hospital, claiming the findings under this section were not adequate. The findings of fact that lead to the conclusion the patient was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) did not contain a detailed statement of facts as contemplated by the statute, but given the detail in the record as a whole, this was harmless error. In re Mental Health of R.J.W., 226 M 419, 736 P2d 110, 44 St. Rep. 770 (1987), followed in In re D.D., 277 M 164, 920 P2d 973, 53 St. Rep. 587 (1996).

Conditional Release Based on Patient's Cooperation Proper: It was not error for the District Court to recommit a patient to Montana State Hospital for 6 months, with conditional release to a local mental health program within that time based on the patient's cooperation in taking prescribed medication, participating in counseling, and fulfilling other conditions necessary to prevent a relapse. In re M.J.P., 226 M 183, 734 P2d 689, 44 St. Rep. 572 (1987).

Stipulation to Commitment — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive Environment: The appellant, M.C., argued on appeal that evidence was insufficient to warrant his transfer to Montana State Hospital. At a commitment hearing, the District Court heard evidence on M.C.'s inability to cooperate in treatment at the Billings Mental Health Center, as well as testimony from a Center doctor indicating that Montana State Hospital was the least restrictive environment in which M.C. could receive the care and supervision he needed. After the hearing, M.C. and his counsel stipulated to, and the District Court ordered, a commitment to the Billings Mental Health Center or "another mental health facility in Montana". The Supreme Court held this evidence to be sufficient to support the District Court's action in committing M.C. to the Montana State Hospital. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Evidence Insufficient for Involuntary Commitment:

Sufficient evidence supported an order of involuntary commitment when evidence presented at trial indicated the following: (1) respondent had exhibited violent behavior in the past; (2) his sister felt threatened by him on an occasion when he entered her home and demanded the keys to her car; (3) for no apparent reason, respondent entered the home of a family whom he did not know; and (4) a psychologist testified that respondent lacked ability to care for himself and posed a threat to others. In re D.B., 218 M 467, 709 P2d 161, 42 St. Rep. 1747 (1985).

Testimony at trial did not clearly and convincingly establish that respondent, due to his mental condition, was unable to protect his life or health at the time of the trial. Therefore, the evidence that respondent was "seriously mentally ill" within the meaning of 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment) was insufficient as a matter of law, and the District Court commitment order was vacated. In re R.T., 204 M 493, 665 P2d 789, 40 St. Rep. 1025 (1983).

Serious Mental Illness — Source of Findings — Montana State Hospital as Least Restrictive: The District Court found that C.M. was seriously mentally ill and committed her to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital). C.M. appealed from the order of commitment. Three persons testified at the commitment hearing, C.M., C.M.'s mother, and a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist testified that C.M. was seriously mentally ill based on his own examination and on the observations of C.M.'s mother. The court held that a professional person may opine that a person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) even though the evidence of an imminent threat of injury, required by statute, is obtained from a source other than the professional person. There was also sufficient evidence that a commitment to Warm Springs State Hospital (now Montana State Hospital) was the least restrictive form of commitment. The order of the District Court was affirmed. In re C.M., 195 M 171, 635 P2d 273, 38 St. Rep. 1768 (1981).

Commitment to State Hospital: Montana law requires that, in determining the treatment to be provided to a person adjudged seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment), the court choose the least restrictive alternatives necessary to protect the respondent and the public and to permit effective treatment. Court findings, based largely on the testimony of two psychologists and one psychiatrist, were found to have been based on adequate consideration of alternatives in the case of a diagnosed paranoid schizophrenic with a 20-year history of mental health problems. In re Goedert, 180 M 484, 591 P2d 222, 36 St. Rep. 393 (1979).

"Seriously Mentally Ill" — Supporting Evidence: There was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion that respondent was "seriously mentally ill", as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), beyond a reasonable doubt, and respondent failed to overcome the burden of providing proof to the contrary; hence, extended detention was warranted. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

Disagreement by Physicians: Where medical jurors disagreed as to necessity of commitment of petitioner in mental institution, order of commitment issued by District Court was void and of no effect. Application of Bushman, 153 M 422, 458 P2d 81 (1969).

Fairness of Inquisition: Petitioner who was committed to state hospital was not deprived of his constitutional rights where it appeared that District Judge and court attendants went to hospital to advise him of hearing date and his privilege to have counsel, his mother was present at the hearing, which was held in the hospital, and everything was done by the court to see that petitioner's rights were protected and no advantage was taken of him. Petition of Kolocotronis, 145 M 564, 402 P2d 977 (1965).

Attorney General's Opinions

Commitment Procedures to Be Followed in Committing Mentally Ill Youth — Private Mental Health Facilities Not Precluded: Section 41-5-523 (renumbered 41-5-1512) does not authorize the Youth Court or the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to commit a mentally ill or seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) youth to a mental health treatment facility without following the commitment procedures set out in Title 53, ch. 21, part 1. There is, however, no statutory preclusion of commitment of a youth to private mental health facilities. 42 A.G. Op. 59 (1988).

Returning Patients to Montana State Hospital — Financial Responsibility: A Sheriff who returns a patient to Warm Springs (now Montana State Hospital) pursuant to 7-32-2144 when the patient has been subjected to an involuntary civil or a criminal commitment is entitled to reimbursement for his costs from the applicable county for a person committed pursuant to 46-14-221 and 46-14-222 or the institution to which the person is committed when committed pursuant to 46-14-301, 53-21-121, 53-21-124, and 53-21-127. 37 A.G. Op. 129 (1978).

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 513 in (1)(a) in first sentence after "hospital" inserted "a behavioral health inpatient facility"; in (1)(b) in second sentence after "10 days" inserted "not including Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays", inserted third sentence providing that previous commitment is considered extended until hearing is held when hearing requested less than 10 days prior to termination of previous commitment authority, and inserted fourth sentence requiring notice of hearing to include notice of extension; in (1)(d) at end of second sentence deleted reference to subsection (3) of 53-21-127 and in third sentence after "order" inserted "extending the commitment period" and after "6 months" inserted "and may not commit the patient to a behavioral health inpatient facility"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Chapter 554 in (1)(a) near beginning inserted reference to the Montana mental health nursing care center. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 10, Ch. 513, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 342 in (1)(a) after "commitment" inserted "to the state hospital or the period of commitment to a community facility or program or a course of treatment" and substituted reference to 53-21-127 for reference to 53-21-127(2); in (1)(d) in second sentence after "commitment" deleted "custody in relatives, outpatient therapy, or other order" and substituted reference to 53-21-127(3) for reference to 53-21-127(2); inserted (2) authorizing respondent to request that treating provider petition district court for extension of commitment order prior to end of period of commitment to community facility, program, or course of treatment, requiring written report and evaluation to accompany petition, and requiring extension procedure to follow outlined statutorily required procedure; in (3) in first sentence inserted "under subsection (1) or (2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 490 throughout section substituted "commitment" and "committed" for "detention" and "detained"; in (1)(d), in first sentence after "patient not", substituted "to be suffering from a mental disorder and requiring commitment" for "seriously mentally ill" and in second sentence, after "suffer from", substituted "a mental disorder and to require commitment" for "serious mental illness"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 40, Ch. 490, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 376 in temporary version in (1) inserted introductory clause; in (1)(a), after "3-month period", deleted "of detention provided for in 53-21-127(2)"; inserted (2) outlining the procedure required to extend a period of temporary treatment; in (3), near beginning, inserted "of the period of detention provided for in 53-21-127(2)"; and inserted (4) providing that a period of temporary treatment may be extended only once. Amendments terminate July 1, 1997.

Chapter 434 in first sentence of (1)(a) substituted "may petition the district court in the county where the patient is detained" for "may petition the court" and at end of sentence inserted "unless otherwise ordered by the original committing court".

Case Notes

Clear Error in Finding That Behavior Posing Risk of Harm Precluded Community Placement — Involuntary Recommitment Reversed: The District Court held that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and that G.M.'s behavior could not be safely and effectively rehabilitated in community-based services because of behavior that posed an imminent risk of serious harm to G.M. or others. The court then ordered that G.M. be involuntarily recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for no more than 1 year. G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that all evidence was properly submitted and that expert testimony was properly admitted. However, G.M.'s expert's testimony and the actual incident reports presented by the state revealed that the reports did not give an accurate picture of G.M.'s condition, in that during most of the reported incidents, G.M. was not the aggressor. In fact, the reports affirmed G.M.'s expert's opinion that it was the group living environment that contributed significantly to G.M.'s behavioral difficulties and that placing G.M. in a community setting with fewer people would ameliorate G.M.'s aggressive tendencies. The state presented no evidence to contradict the expert's opinion that the institutional setting was probably responsible for the behaviors that kept G.M. in the institution and that individuals with worse aggressive tendencies were successfully living in community settings or to explain why G.M.'s actions would make placement in a community setting unsafe. Additionally, G.M.'s aunt's testimony regarding her personal observations of G.M.'s demeanor and self-control when not in an institutional setting confirmed the expert's opinion and tended to prove that G.M. did not pose a risk of harm and could be safely habilitated in the community. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the District Court incorrectly concluded that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and reversed with instructions to vacate the recommitment order. In re G.M., 2008 MT 200, 344 M 87, 186 P3d 229 (2008).

Claim of Failure to Rule on Petition for Conservatorship Unfounded: Through counsel, G.J.P. filed a petition asking the District Court, in the alternative, to: (1) direct counsel how to proceed to protect G.J.P.'s assets, legal practice, and clients; (2) appoint a conservator of his estate; or (3) enter other appropriate orders for the protection of G.J.P.'s assets and clients. In response, the court entered an order authorizing counsel to secure G.J.P.'s mail. G.J.P. was discharged from the state hospital 12 days later. The allegation that there was a failure to rule on the petition was thus unfounded. The court did not err in granting the alternative motion. In re G.J.P., 266 M 370, 880 P2d 1311, 51 St. Rep. 847 (1994).

detainment, made at his initial appearance before the court, should have been granted. It was not error for the court to allow continued confinement based on probable cause established by documents attached to the petition for involuntary commitment and on G.J.P.'s own testimony at the initial hearing. The judgments of the County Attorney and the District Court are built-in checks upon the discretion of a professional person to restrain a person for more than 1 day. In re G.J.P., 266 M 370, 880 P2d 1311, 51 St. Rep. 847 (1994).

Order Extending Involuntary Commitment Proper — Threat of Physical Injury: It was not error for the District Court to extend the involuntary commitment of a seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) patient in light of sufficient evidence that she had made suicidal and homicidal threats, was considered an imminent threat of physical injury to herself or others, and needed institutional supervision to ensure continuation of her medical therapeutic intervention program. Threats made within 4 months were sufficiently recent in time to be material and relevant as to patient's present condition. In re M.J.P., 226 M 183, 734 P2d 689, 44 St. Rep. 572 (1987).

"Seriously Mentally Ill" — Supporting Evidence: There was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion that respondent was "seriously mentally ill", as defined in 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment), beyond a reasonable doubt, and respondent failed to overcome the burden of providing proof to the contrary; hence, extended detention was warranted. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

Written Report of Professional Person — Admissibility: The court properly permitted, over objection, a written report of a professional person concerning the mental and physical condition of a patient to become a part of the record in a petition for extended detention of respondent because its sole purpose was to furnish reasonable grounds for initiation of the legal proceeding. In re Sonsteng, 175 M 307, 573 P2d 1149 (1977); In re Miller, 175 M 318, 573 P2d 1155 (1977).

2013 Amendment: Chapter 308 in (1) near beginning after "situation" inserted "as defined in 53-21-102" and after "others" inserted "or who appears to have a mental disorder and to be substantially unable to provide for the person's own basic needs of food, clothing, shelter, health, or safety"; in (2) in first sentence after "others" deleted "because of a mental disorder" and after "situation" inserted "as defined in 53-21-102". Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 116 in (4) in second sentence near beginning substituted "professional person" for "Montana state hospital" and near middle after "detention" substituted "and a bed is available, the county attorney" for "it". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 513 in (3) in second sentence after "hospital" inserted "or to a behavioral health inpatient facility, subject to 53-21-193 and subsection (4) of this section"; in (4) in two places in first sentence after "hospital" inserted references to a behavioral health inpatient facility and inserted second sentence requiring Montana state hospital to direct person to appropriate facility for emergency detention upon determination that behavioral health inpatient facility is appropriate facility; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 10, Ch. 513, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 490 in (1), after "appears to", substituted "have a mental disorder and to present an imminent danger of death or bodily harm to the person or to others" for "be seriously mentally ill and as a result of serious mental illness to be a danger to others or to himself"; in (2), in first sentence after "detained", substituted "is a danger to the person or to others because of a mental disorder" for "appears to be seriously mentally ill"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 40, Ch. 490, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1983 Amendment: After first sentence of (3) inserted remainder of (3) providing for emergency detention at the state hospital upon proper certification; and inserted (4) requiring that the state hospital be notified and state that a bed is available.

Case Notes

Administration of Medication During Emergency Detention Not Violative of Right to Be Free of Medication Prior to Initial Appearance: L.R. was held in emergency detention based on an inability to make reasonable and safe decisions for herself and was involuntarily medicated because of aggressive, intrusive, and volatile behavior on the day of the initial appearance on the state's petition for involuntary commitment. L.R. contended that the involuntary medication violated the right to refuse medication 24 hours before the initial appearance under 53-21-115. The state contended that under 53-21-129 the medication was properly administered because an emergency situation existed. The Supreme Court noted that an inconsistency existed between the statutes but concluded that the specific directive in 53-21-129 allowing for involuntary medication in emergency situations controlled the general statutory directive concerning a medication-free initial appearance in 53-21-115.Thus, even though L.R. was involuntarily medicated within 24 hours of the initial appearance, because an emergency situation existed and the medications were administered before the next business day, L.R.'s right to a medication-free hearing was not violated. In re Mental Health of L.R., 2010 MT 76, 356 Mont. 20, 231 P.3d 594

Immediate Notice Requirements Inapplicable When Person Detained on Emergency Basis: After being detained on an emergency basis, L.K. was advised of her due process rights the next day. On appeal, L.K. asserted that the provisions of 53-21-114 required that she be advised of her constitutional rights at the time of detainment, and that failure to do so violated due process. The Supreme Court disagreed. Emergency mental health commitments are treated differently from other mental health commitments, and the immediate notice of constitutional rights is not required when a person is detained in an emergency situation pursuant to 53-21-129. L.K. was advised of her constitutional rights in a reasonably timely manner, and due process was satisfied. In re Mental Health of L.K., 2008 MT 169, 343 M 366, 184 P3d 353 (2008), distinguishing In re Shennum, 210 M 442, 684 P2d 1073 (1984).

Sufficient Finding of Emergency Situation Justifying Involuntary Detainment: A Sheriff's report of about 25 incidents involving L.K.'s allegedly "extremely bizarre" behavior over a 3-day period, including at least two incidents related to threatened violence, justified the District Court's finding of an emergency situation warranting the involuntary commitment and detention at the state hospital for mental evaluation. In re Mental Health of L.K., 2008 MT 169, 343 M 366, 184 P3d 353 (2008).

No Error in Instruction Quoting Statute Verbatim: Joshua Lloyd suffered a seizure after being transferred to the Kalispell Regional Hospital's security room. His personal representative sued the hospital and others. During trial, the District Court instructed the jury on negligence per se by quoting mental health statutes verbatim to the jury. The Supreme Court said that giving jury instructions by quoting directly from the statutes may not be the best practice, but noted that the instructions proposed by opposing counsel were also direct quotations of mental health statutes. Given that situation, the Supreme Court held that there was no error in giving jury instructions in the form of direct quotations from the statutes. Buhr v. Flathead County, 268 M 223, 886 P2d 381, 51 St. Rep. 1258 (1994).

No Negligence Per Se by Mental Health Cooperative Evaluation at Variance With Statute — Jury Verdict Supported by Substantial Evidence: Joshua died after suffering a seizure while in the custody of the Sheriff in a soft cell. Buhr, his personal representative, sued the county, the Sheriff, and others. Testimony at trial showed that despite the implication in subsection (2) of this section that Joshua be examined by a professional person, he was instead examined by Russell, who was not a professional person. Testimony showed that Russell then consulted with Harris, who was a professional person. Based upon the consultation, Harris agreed that Joshua needed to be placed in an emergency mental health hold status. The Supreme Court noted that although conflicting evidence may have been presented as to whether this procedure violated the statute, the evidence was presented to the jury based upon an appropriate instruction to which there was no objection. The Supreme Court held that the jury's verdict finding no negligence was supported by substantial evidence. Buhr v. Flathead County, 268 M 223, 886 P2d 381, 51 St. Rep. 1258 (1994).

Medical Rights Not Absolute — Restrictions Proper When Based on Necessity for Treatment, Evaluation, and Care: G.J.P. claimed numerous violations of his procedural and constitutional rights regarding the provision of his medical care after being confined for his manic episodes, including claims that: (1) a medical professional lacked knowledge of the requisite facts to make a request for commitment; (2) a mental evaluation was improperly conducted; (3) he was improperly secluded in isolation and restrained; (4) he was denied medical care for broken ribs; (5) he was denied the right of telephone communications; and (6) he was administered medication within 24 hours before his initial hearing on a motion for commitment, despite his objections. The Supreme Court recognized the rights of patients to receive proper medical care but noted that none of the rights are absolute. G.J.P. did not demonstrate any restrictions on his rights other than those necessary for his treatment, evaluation, and care or establish that reversal of his commitment would be a proper remedy for a denial or restriction of his rights. In re G.J.P., 266 M 370, 880 P2d 1311, 51 St. Rep. 847 (1994).

detainment, made at his initial appearance before the court, should have been granted. It was not error for the court to allow continued confinement based on probable cause established by documents attached to the petition for involuntary commitment and on G.J.P.'s own testimony at the initial hearing. The judgments of the County Attorney and the District Court are built-in checks upon the discretion of a professional person to restrain a person for more than 1 day. In re G.J.P., 266 M 370, 880 P2d 1311, 51 St. Rep. 847 (1994).

Probable Cause Found for Taking Into Custody — Peace Officers Immune From Liability: Maag had suffered for several weeks from the effects of mixing toxic chemicals, including poor logic, slurred speech, and lack of coordination. At the request of his family, relatives, and friends, he was taken into custody by peace officers and brought to a hospital for observation at the request of a physician. After his release by the hospital the following day, Maag sued the peace officers in federal court, claiming violation of his fourth amendment rights. Defendants' motion for summary judgment was denied by the District Court. The court of appeals held that the standard for deciding whether Maag's constitutional rights had been violated was whether there was probable cause for the defendants to take him into custody. The court held that the officers had clear authority under this section and under the facts, including both the requests to arrest Maag and the officers' own observations of his conduct. The court found the defendants immune and awarded them attorney fees. Maag v. Wessler, 944 F2d 654 (9th Cir. 1991).

Adequate Medical Care Not Basis for Disregarding Due Process: The medical center, in which the respondent was placed by the officers who picked her up, did not follow proper procedure, and the respondent was held without authority for 5 days before her competency hearing. The Supreme Court held that providing adequate medical care is not a basis for disregarding the due process and statutory rights of a person charged with being seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment). The court went on to admonish the medical center, the County Attorney's office, and the county family services department for their failure to comply with the due process rights of the respondent. Mental Health of E.P., 241 M 316, 787 P2d 322, 47 St. Rep. 297 (1990).

Statutory Requirements Not Adhered to by Medical Center: A woman was brought by police to the medical center because the officers believed that she was seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment). Although the center extended good medical coverage, it held the woman for 5 days rather than 1 before petitioning the District Court to commit her. The lower court found that the evidence demonstrated that the respondent was totally unable to take care of herself. The Supreme Court stated that after reviewing the record, it found that there was overwhelming evidence to support the lower court's finding. The Supreme Court stated that although the case was moot in that the woman had been subsequently released, the medical center had not met the statutory guidelines. The court cautioned that proper procedures should be established to protect the due process rights of the mentally ill. Mental Health of E.P., 241 M 316, 787 P2d 322, 47 St. Rep. 297 (1990).

Suicidal Threats Constituting Emergency Situation: Threats to kill oneself as well as others, angry and abusive conduct toward others, a state of depression lasting a period of a week, and evidence of a previous suicide attempt 2 months earlier clearly indicated an emergency situation warranting detention under this section. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Detention Prior to Court Finding of Serious Mental Illness — Determination by Professional Person Rather Than Peace Officer: Appellant, M.C., argued that under 53-21-129, the peace officer makes the initial decision on whether an emergency situation exists and that in this case the officer did not make that decision. M.C. also contended that the evidence was insufficient to hold him on an emergency basis. The Supreme Court held that 53-21-129 merely permits the officer to take a person into custody for an evaluation. It does not give the officer authority to decide whether the person should be placed in emergency detention; rather, the professional person determines whether the person is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment) and should be placed in emergency detention. Once that determination is made, it constitutes sufficient evidence that the person may be detained. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Commitment Procedural Safeguards Ignored: The State failed to follow the commitment procedural safeguards in handling Shennum's commitment. The record does not evidence the existence of an emergency situation sufficient to invoke 53-21-129. Shennum was not advised of his constitutional rights before a medical examination incorrectly obtained under a purported emergency situation. Absent an emergency, it was the duty of the County Attorney to proceed in accordance with 53-21-121 through 53-21-126 in order to commit Shennum as a seriously mentally ill person. Several of the procedural protections contained in those sections were ignored. Therefore, the initial commitment was reversed with guidelines for the State to proceed properly in further commitment proceedings. In re Shennum, 210 M 442, 684 P2d 1073, 41 St. Rep. 1148 (1984), distinguished in In re G.J.P., 266 M 370, 880 P2d 1311, 51 St. Rep. 847 (1994), because G.J.P. was detained at the request of a professional person and because at the time of appeal, G.J.P. was no longer detained as the result of the court proceeding.

Reversal of Conviction as Creating Emergency Situation: The Supreme Court reversed a deliberate homicide conviction and ordered a new trial. The court noted that if the State decides that further prosecution is not possible, then an "emergency situation" would exist under 53-21-129 and in such event ordered the State to detain the defendant and to conduct an emergency evaluation. St. v. Allies, 186 M 99, 606 P2d 1043 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

County Liability for Costs of Precommitment Services: Subject to the limitations in 53-21-132(2), the county of residence is financially responsible for costs incurred in connection with the detention and precommitment custody of persons taken into protective custody pursuant to 53-21-124 or this section. 46 A.G. Op. 18 (1996).

Detainment in Emergency Situation During Business Hours: Nothing in this section indicates that a person may not be detained during business hours. In an emergency situation, a person may be detained at any time and treated until the next regular business day, at which time he must be released or proceedings must be initiated pursuant to 53-21-121. 43 A.G. Op. 5 (1989).

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 247 inserted (2) authorizing person in custody to be transferred to mental health facility and providing procedures relating to transfer; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 5, 1999.

Case Notes

Admissibility of Evidence at Hearing on Transfer of Patient for Treatment: Between an initial commitment hearing and a hearing on the question of transferring treatment, appellant filed two motions in limine, which the District Court denied. The first motion requested that the state be precluded from eliciting testimony at the transfer hearing based on an evaluation made after the commitment hearing. On the second motion, he contended that the order of commitment was final as to all events litigated at the initial hearing and that none of the earlier events should have been referred to at the transfer hearing. He argued that 53-21-101, et seq., provided no authority for using evaluations made after a final commitment hearing in a later transfer hearing. Both 53-21-130 and 53-21-182 refer to transfers to other facilities for treatment; however, neither statute restricts what evidence may be admissible at a transfer hearing. The Supreme Court found no error in the denial of the motions, holding that any evidence admissible at a final commitment hearing which is relevant to the transfer should be admissible at the transfer hearing, including the opinions of professional persons and evidence of overt acts, as described in 53-21-126. In re M.C., 220 M 437, 716 P2d 203, 43 St. Rep. 508 (1986).

Constitutionality: In upholding the constitutionality of this section, the Supreme Court applied the test set forth by the U.S. Supreme Court in Vitek v. Jones, 445 US 480, 63 L Ed 2d 552, 100 S Ct 1254 (1980), and found that the interests of the state outweigh the interests of the individual transferred pursuant to this section as long as the procedural safeguards mandated by the section are followed. In re the Petition of M.C., 211 M 105, 683 P2d 956, 41 St. Rep. 1242 (1984).

Issuance of Writ of Habeas Corpus to Juvenile Transferred From Correctional Institution to Mental Health Facility: The Supreme Court upheld issuance of a Writ of Habeas Corpus when a juvenile was transferred under this section from a juvenile correctional institution to a mental health facility and the record did not indicate that petitioner's transfer was caused by an emergency or that petitioner was afforded any due process protection upon expiration of the 10-day period specified in this section. In re the Petition of M.C., 211 M 105, 683 P2d 956, 41 St. Rep. 1242 (1984).

Right to Effective Assistance of Counsel for Person Subject to Involuntary Commitment Because of Mental Disorder — Strickland Test for Ineffective Assistance Inappropriate in Involuntary Commitment Proceedings: The right to counsel afforded by state law regarding the treatment of the seriously mentally ill provides a person who is subject to an involuntary commitment proceeding the right to effective assistance of counsel, which in turn provides that person the right to raise the allegation of ineffective assistance of counsel when challenging a commitment order. The test for ineffective assistance of counsel set out in Strickland v. Wash., 466 US 668 (1984), is inappropriate in involuntary commitment proceedings. However, the Strickland test simply does not go far enough to protect the liberty interests of persons involved in involuntary commitment proceedings who may or may not have broken any law but who, upon the expiration of a 90-day commitment, must indefinitely bear the badge of inferiority of a once involuntarily committed person with a proved mental disorder. Instead, upon a substantial showing of evidence to the issuing District Court or to the Supreme Court pursuant to this section that counsel did not effectively represent the person's interests, an order of involuntary commitment should be vacated. The due process afforded individuals must serve to protect the fundamental liberty interests of dignity and integrity, and it is not only counsel, "but also courts, that are charged with the duty of safeguarding the due process rights of individuals involved at every stage of the proceedings". The Supreme Court identified five critical areas of representation that generally define the scope of effective counsel in involuntary commitment proceedings: (1) appointment of competent counsel; (2) the initial investigation; (3) the client interview; (4) the right to remain silent; and (5) counsel as an advocate and adversary. The statutory and constitutional standards must be rigorously adhered to in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of civil commitment proceedings, and it is imperative that the constitutional and legislated rights be formally and fairly balanced with the state's ultimate power to protect both the individual and the public from actual or perceived harm. In re K.G.F., 2001 MT 140, 306 M 1, 29 P3d 485 (2001), following Conservatorship of Roulet, 590 P2d 1 (Calif. 1979), and distinguishing In re Carmody, 653 NE 2d 977 (Ill. App. Ct. 1995).

No State Duty to Appeal Recommitment Order: In a recommitment hearing, the judge determined the defendant to be a danger to himself but issued an order, not appealed by the state, under which the defendant was released from the Montana State Hospital and conditionally released into the community. After defendant subsequently committed murder, the victim's parents filed suit, alleging that the state was negligent in failing to appeal the judge's release order. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's dismissal, holding that under this section, the state had no mandatory duty to appeal the release order. King v. St., 259 M 393, 856 P2d 954, 50 St. Rep. 848 (1993).

Standard of Review of Involuntary Commitment — Clearly Erroneous Findings Required — Test: A District Court must find by clear and convincing evidence that an individual is seriously mentally ill (see 1997 amendment to 53-21-102) prior to ordering the involuntary commitment of that individual. On appeal, the Supreme Court will not disturb the finding unless it is clearly erroneous. The three-part test for whether a finding is clearly erroneous, as set out in Interstate Prod. Credit Ass'n v. DeSaye, 250 M 320, 820 P2d 1285, 48 St. Rep. 986 (1991), is: (1) the court will review the record to see if the finding is supported by substantial evidence; (2) if the finding is supported by substantial evidence, the court will determine whether the trial court has misapprehended the effect of the evidence; and (3) if substantial evidence exists and the effect of the evidence has not been misapprehended, the Supreme Court may still find clear error if a review of the record leaves the court with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed. In re Mental Health of L.C.B., 253 M 1, 830 P2d 1299, 49 St. Rep. 290 (1992).

Commitment of Ward — Due Process Rights — Notice, Hearing, and Counsel: District Court order committing ward to Montana State Hospital for a 72-hour evaluation upon a request made by the ward's guardian was reversed where ward was not given notice of the impending commitment, an attorney, or a hearing prior to the commitment. The ward's statutory and constitutional due process rights were violated. Two days after the first order the County Attorney, at guardian's request, filed a petition for a 90-day commitment. The guardian consented and waived ward's rights to notice, counsel, and hearing prior to commitment. The petition was granted, which also violated ward's statutory and constitutional rights to due process. He had the right to notice, hearing, and counsel, and only the person to be committed, or if he is unable, his attorney and guardian acting in concert, may waive those rights. The ward had no attorney at the time of the guardian's waiver. In re Simons, 215 M 463, 698 P2d 850, 42 St. Rep. 544 (1985).

Evidence Insufficient for Involuntary Commitment: Testimony at trial did not clearly and convincingly establish that respondent, due to his mental condition, was unable to protect his life or health at the time of the trial. Therefore, the evidence that respondent was "seriously mentally ill" within the meaning of 53-21-102 (see 1997 amendment) was insufficient as a matter of law, and the District Court commitment order was vacated. In re R.T., 204 M 493, 665 P2d 789, 40 St. Rep. 1025 (1983).

Clear Error in Finding That Behavior Posing Risk of Harm Precluded Community Placement — Involuntary Recommitment Reversed: The District Court held that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and that G.M.'s behavior could not be safely and effectively rehabilitated in community-based services because of behavior that posed an imminent risk of serious harm to G.M. or others. The court then ordered that G.M. be involuntarily recommitted to the Montana Developmental Center for no more than 1 year. G.M. appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that all evidence was properly submitted and that expert testimony was properly admitted. However, G.M.'s expert's testimony and the actual incident reports presented by the state revealed that the reports did not give an accurate picture of G.M.'s condition, in that during most of the reported incidents, G.M. was not the aggressor. In fact, the reports affirmed G.M.'s expert's opinion that it was the group living environment that contributed significantly to G.M.'s behavioral difficulties and that placing G.M. in a community setting with fewer people would ameliorate G.M.'s aggressive tendencies. The state presented no evidence to contradict the expert's opinion that the institutional setting was probably responsible for the behaviors that kept G.M. in the institution and that individuals with worse aggressive tendencies were successfully living in community settings or to explain why G.M.'s actions would make placement in a community setting unsafe. Additionally, G.M.'s aunt's testimony regarding her personal observations of G.M.'s demeanor and self-control when not in an institutional setting confirmed the expert's opinion and tended to prove that G.M. did not pose a risk of harm and could be safely habilitated in the community. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the District Court incorrectly concluded that G.M. was seriously developmentally disabled and reversed with instructions to vacate the recommitment order. Commitment Hearing Via Videoconference Without Individual's Presence Improper Absent Waiver of Right to Be Present: The District Court conducted a videoconference commitment hearing to determine whether L.K. should be involuntarily committed to the state hospital for a mental disorder. The court concluded that L.K. should be committed for 90 days, and L.K. appealed on grounds that use of a videoconference was improper and that because the hearing was conducted outside L.K.'s presence after she voluntarily left the conference, her statutory right to be present at the hearing was violated. The Supreme Court first concluded that the District Court was not precluded from holding the hearing via videoconference, as allowed under 53-21-140, because L.K. made no objection. However, even though L.K. voluntarily left the videoconference and had the right to return and participate at any time before the hearing concluded, there was nothing in the record to indicate that L.K. waived the right to be physically present at the hearing under the criteria in 53-21-119. Absent compliance with the waiver requirements, the District Court could not conduct the hearing in L.K.'s absence so the commitment order was reversed. Competency in Criminal Matter Not Determinative in Civil Matter: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) filed a petition in District Court alleging that J. H. was a youth in need of care. The boy, his mother, and a social worker all testified that the father sexually abused the boy. The youth was found to be an abused and neglected child. The father claimed that since he was declared unfit to proceed in a collateral criminal action he was also unfit to proceed in the civil action. The Supreme Court found nothing in the record to indicate the father was declared unfit to proceed in anything except the criminal action. He had the burden of proving his incompetence. With no affirmative showing of incompetence to proceed in the civil action, the court presumed the father competent. In re J.H., 196 M 482, 640 P2d 445, 39 St. Rep. 267 (1982).

Medical Rights Not Absolute — Restrictions Proper When Based on Necessity for Treatment, Evaluation, and Care: G.J.P. claimed numerous violations of his procedural and constitutional rights regarding the provision of his medical care after being confined for his manic episodes, including claims that: (1) a medical professional lacked knowledge of the requisite facts to make a request for commitment; (2) a mental evaluation was improperly conducted; (3) he was improperly secluded in isolation and restrained; (4) he was denied medical care for broken ribs; (5) he was denied the right of telephone communications; and (6) he was administered medication within 24 hours before his initial hearing on a motion for commitment, despite his objections. The Supreme Court recognized the rights of patients to receive proper medical care but noted that none of the rights are absolute. G.J.P. did not demonstrate any restrictions on his rights other than those necessary for his treatment, evaluation, and care or establish that reversal of his commitment would be a proper remedy for a denial or restriction of his rights. Case Notes

Statute Inapplicable to Persons Detained Under Emergency Provisions: Joshua Lloyd suffered a seizure after being transferred to the Kalispell Regional Hospital's security room for purposes of emergency detention. His personal representative sued the hospital and others. During trial, the District Court instructed the jury on negligence per se by refusing to give a jury instruction assuming applicability of this section to Joshua's detention. Citing Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538 (1986), the Supreme Court held that the intent of the statute is to protect patients committed by the court for treatment. Joshua was not committed for treatment but was placed in a soft cell pursuant to 53-21-129 for emergency detention. Because the legal duties under this section were not applicable, the District Court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury on those duties. Buhr v. Flathead County, 268 M 223, 886 P2d 381, 51 St. Rep. 1258 (1994).

Inapplicability to Emergency Detention Statutes: This section is not intended to afford protections to people held under the emergency detention statutes. Rather, it is intended to protect patients committed by the court for treatment for any period of time. In a case where a person was detained prior to a court determination of serious mental illness, the statutory restrictions of this section were inapplicable. Reiser v. Prunty, 224 M 1, 727 P2d 538, 43 St. Rep. 1967 (1986).

Case Notes

Admissibility of Evidence at Hearing on Transfer of Patient for Treatment: Between an initial commitment hearing and a hearing on the question of transferring treatment, appellant filed two motions in limine, which the District Court denied. The first motion requested that the state be precluded from eliciting testimony at the transfer hearing based on an evaluation made after the commitment hearing. On the second motion, he contended that the order of commitment was final as to all events litigated at the initial hearing and that none of the earlier events should have been referred to at the transfer hearing. He argued that 53-21-101, et seq., provided no authority for using evaluations made after a final commitment hearing in a later transfer hearing. Both 53-21-130 and 53-21-182 refer to transfers to other facilities for treatment; however, neither statute restricts what evidence may be admissible at a transfer hearing. The Supreme Court found no error in the denial of the motions, holding that any evidence admissible at a final commitment hearing which is relevant to the transfer should be admissible at the transfer hearing, including the opinions of professional persons and evidence of overt acts, as described in 53-21-126. The professional person shall mail or deliver notice to the person detained, his attorney, if any, his guardian or conservator, if any, his next of kin, if known, and the friend of respondent appointed by the court. Statement of Intent: In regard to the rulemaking authority under 53-21-402 and admissions to the Center under 53-21-411, the statement of intent attached to SB 209 (Ch. 231, L. 1983), which enacted the second subsection of 53-21-411 relating to admissions, provided in part:

"Criteria that would be considered under the rulemaking authority include:

(a) consideration of person's age,

(b) consideration of person's mental and physical status, specifically as it relates to mild psychiatric impairments, senility, and other organic symptoms,

(c) consideration of ability of Center for the Aged [now Montana Mental Health Nursing Care Center] to meet with person's needs,

(d) consideration of person's sex as relates to availability of appropriate living space,

(e) consideration of person's ability to ambulate without special devices or physical assistance,

(f) voluntary admissions.

Specifically this rulemaking authority should give the Department the ability to adopt rules indicating:

(a) the type of medical and mental illnesses involved;

(b) the evaluation and diagnosis process of mental health professionals and physicians;

(c) standards for determining the programs that will be provided for residents at the Center for the Aged [now Montana Mental Health Nursing Care Center];

(d) specific criteria relative to transfers necessary to other facilities and discharge criteria, if any, from the institution, if needed.

It is the intention that these rules make it very clear that acute psychiatric problems are not to be used for admission to the Center for the Aged [now Montana Mental Health Nursing Care Center]."

Operation of State Hospital a Governmental Rather Than Proprietary Function: Because the establishment of a state institution for the insane was constitutionally mandated under the 1889 Montana Constitution and was not discretionary, operation of the Montana State Hospital as a nonprofit venture is a governmental rather than proprietary function that does not preempt the defense of sovereign immunity for actions prior to 1973. WHEREAS, those Montanans completing suicides include children, adolescents, adults, and the elderly and residents of urban, rural, and frontier areas; and

WHEREAS, the vast majority of individuals that complete suicide suffer from a diagnosed or undiagnosed mental illness that prevents them from making a "rational" choice to end their life; and

WHEREAS, Montana's high rate of suicide is attributable to the complex interaction of many factors, including but not limited to lack of access to both crisis mental health services and noncrisis mental health care, including psychosocial interventions, effective supports and medication, and the barriers that often prevent youth and adults from seeking treatment because of stigma, myths, and misunderstandings about mental illnesses; and

WHEREAS, past statewide efforts to reduce suicide have lacked sufficient cohesiveness and resources to be effective."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 479, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 26, requesting an interim legislative study to examine diversion of mentally ill adults from the justice system, and House Joint Resolution No. 50, requesting a study to examine county precommitment costs related to involuntary commitment proceedings; and

WHEREAS, these studies were assigned to the Law and Justice Interim Committee; and

WHEREAS, after 14 months of testimony and examination of data and information from all stakeholders, the Law and Justice Interim Committee identified crisis intervention and jail diversion to be the most critical need and the most effective way to divert mentally ill individuals from the criminal justice system and recommends this bill as part of a package of bills to address this need; and

WHEREAS, the lack of local crisis intervention and jail diversion alternatives means counties must rely on the Montana State Hospital for emergency and court-ordered detention and evaluation, which increases county costs, strains the Montana State Hospital, and diverts resources from community-based services; and

WHEREAS, sections 53-21-138 and 53-21-139 [renumbered 53-21-1201 and 53-21-1202], MCA, originally enacted by the 1991 Legislature, provide a solid statutory framework for diversion of mentally ill adults from the justice system but do not provide state funding; and

WHEREAS, state matching funds granted to counties based on certain criteria, including the commitment of county and other local funds, is an appropriate way to share costs and provide incentives for local resources to be spent on community-based treatment capacity rather than on jail capacity or on transportation to and capacity in the Montana State Hospital; and

WHEREAS, crisis intervention team training and collaboration between local law enforcement officers, mental health professionals, and private corporations can offer creative solutions that should be encouraged and sustained; and

WHEREAS, counties should be encouraged to participate in a county self-insurance pool to help pay for unpredictable and sometimes financially catastrophic precommitment costs."

Report Required: Section 2, Ch. 479, L. 2009, provided: "(1) Implementation of the grant program established in [section 1] [53-21-1203] may be conducted in phases. However, it is the legislature's intent that the grant program be fully implemented by no later than September 1, 2009.

(2) Upon request, the department shall report to the law and justice interim committee established in 5-5-226 on the implementation status of [section 1] [53-21-1203]."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 480, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 26, requesting an interim legislative study to examine diversion of mentally ill adults from the justice system, and House Joint Resolution No. 50, requesting an interim legislative study to examine county precommitment costs related to involuntary commitment proceedings; and

WHEREAS, these studies were assigned to the Law and Justice Interim Committee; and

WHEREAS, this bill is one in a package of bills recommended by the Law and Justice Interim Committee to address diversion of mentally ill adults from the justice system to appropriate treatment; and

WHEREAS, the Law and Justice Interim Committee found that one of the biggest challenges to diverting mentally ill individuals from the justice system is a lack of community-based mental health treatment beds; and

WHEREAS, 63% of admissions to the Montana State Hospital, whose daily census routinely exceeds its licensed capacity of 189, are for emergency and court-ordered detention and evaluation; and

WHEREAS, 38% of emergency and court-ordered admissions to the Montana State Hospital do not result in commitments; and

WHEREAS, it is preferable for these psychiatric services to be provided locally and without fiscal pressure driving treatment decisions or decisions about whether to file an involuntary commitment petition; and

WHEREAS, the costs for local hospitals to provide psychiatric treatment services is very high and counties help pay some of these costs only after an involuntary commitment petition has been filed and only in an amount that would have been paid by a public assistance program; and

WHEREAS, these high unrecoverable costs can deter hospitals from providing community-based psychiatric treatment beds; and

WHEREAS, current involuntary commitment laws and funding mechanisms create tensions between mental health professionals concerned about the medical necessity for treatment, hospitals concerned that county funding is available only after an involuntary commitment petition is filed, county attorneys concerned that medical necessity is not necessarily legal sufficiency for an involuntary commitment petition, and county commissioners concerned about county costs after a commitment petition is filed; and

WHEREAS, some mental health facilities may be able to provide inpatient psychiatric services at lower cost by providing services in a nonhospital mental health facility or through a telepsychiatry linkage with a psychiatric unit at a community hospital or with the Montana State Hospital; and

WHEREAS, by contracting with private providers for dedicated local or regional psychiatric treatment beds at rates that would help subsidize county funding and reduce the risks to private providers, the state can become a partner in fostering creative local solutions that reduce emergency admissions to the Montana State Hospital."

CHAPTER 24
ALCOHOLISM AND DRUG DEPENDENCE

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 37, chapter 27, ARM Chemical dependency programs.

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Authority to Provide Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment Services: The city of Billings and Yellowstone County proposed to purchase and renovate a building for use by a nonprofit corporation providing treatment for alcohol and drug-related problems. The city proposed to issue industrial revenue bonds (IRB) to fund a portion of the project, and the county sought a grant from the Montana Coal Board. Under the proposal, title to the building would vest in the nonprofit corporation once the IRB's have been retired. The questions presented were whether: (1) the building in question is a "governmental facility"; (2) a city or county has the power to expend funds for a building the title to which will eventually vest in a private corporation; and (3) contracting with a private corporation is a legitimate means of providing a governmental service. In the opinion of the Attorney General, a local government unit with self-government powers and counties with general government powers are authorized to provide alcohol and drug abuse treatment services under Title 53, ch. 24. Local governments may contract with nonprofit corporations for the provision of such services. A program of alcohol and drug abuse treatment services provided by contract with a private nonprofit corporation is a "governmental service or facility" under 90-6-205 for the purpose of determining eligibility for coal impact assistance. 39 A.G. Op. 31 (1981).

Case Notes

Death in Jail From Alcohol Withdrawal — No Negligence Per Se by County — Membership in Protected Class Required: Solberg was involved in a one-vehicle accident. He was taken to jail and charged with driving while intoxicated and driving without a valid driver's license. He pleaded guilty to both offenses on the following day, was unable to pay the fine imposed, and was ordered to serve time in jail. Two days later Solberg was found dead in his cell from alcohol-related withdrawal symptoms. Solberg's personal representative brought a wrongful death action against Yellowstone County. At the trial, the District Court refused to give an instruction finding defendant negligent as a matter of law. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that 53-24-303, as interpreted in Azure v. Billings, 182 M 234, 596 P2d 460 (1979), was not applicable, as Solberg was not a member of the class protected by the statute, the publicly intoxicated. Solberg was charged with two criminal offenses to which he pleaded guilty. Whether defendant breached the common-law duty owed by a jailer to a prisoner was a question for the jury. Solberg v. Yellowstone County, 203 M 79, 659 P2d 290, 40 St. Rep. 308 (1983).

Attorney General's Opinions

Ordinances Making Intoxication a Crime Invalid: City ordinances punishing public intoxication whether as an element of an offense or as an offense in itself are in contravention of state statutes. Case Notes

No Repeal by Implication: Section 53-24-106 did not repeal 61-8-508 by implication. The two statutes are not irreconcilable with each other. The former provides that intoxication in public is not a crime while the latter makes walking along a highway in such a condition a criminal offense. Kuchan v. The bill will also allow the department to certify course instructors and inspect these courses to ensure compliance with standards.

These courses are presently being provided by state-approved chemical dependency treatment programs, but without consistent standards or approval processes. The rules should address the following:

(4) minimum criteria for course curriculum content;

(5) minimum required hours and length of participation to complete the courses;

1991 Amendment: In (4), at end of first sentence, inserted "and the use of plans by the department in determining the needs of the county for the treatment, rehabilitation, and prevention of chemical dependency".

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 393, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 1] [53-24-208] requires the department of institutions [now department of public health and human services] to adopt standards for approval of chemical dependency treatment programs and because [section 2] [53-24-211] grants the department the authority to adopt rules specifying the use to be made of countywide plans for the treatment, rehabilitation, and prevention of chemical dependency in the department's determination of the needs of the counties. It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules addressing the content, organization, management, and personnel requirements of treatment programs and that the rules governing the use of the countywide plans discourage duplication of program services."

1983 Amendments: Chapter 365 made the following changes: in (1), at beginning changed "By January 1 of each year," to "Every 4 years" and inserted last sentence requiring submission of an annual plan that includes revenue allocation; in (2) substituted "private and public chemical dependency programs" for "nonprofit and local government programs"; in (3), in first sentence, inserted "and annual updates" and in second sentence inserted "or update" in two places; deleted former (4) that read: "(a) After January 1 of each year, no money may be distributed to a county by the department for the treatment, rehabilitation, and prevention of alcoholism if the county has not submitted a plan as required by subsection (1).

(b) After June 30 of each year, no money may be distributed to a county by the department for the treatment, rehabilitation, and prevention of alcoholism if a county plan has not been approved by the department."; and in (4), in first sentence inserted "submission dates, updates," and inserted last sentence prohibiting revenue distribution absent county compliance with Department rules.

Chapter 406, in (1) and (2), changed "alcoholism" to "chemical dependency".

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 312 (Ch. 365, L. 1983), first adopted by the House Human Services Committee, read: "The Department of Institutions [now Department of Public Health and Human Services] is requesting legislation that would allow the state and counties to develop a comprehensive long-term plan rather than the annual plans now required under 53-24-204 and 53-24-211.

Under section 53-24-211, the Department has existing rulemaking authority regarding the submission, approval, and disapproval of plans. The Department is requesting statute authority that would allow long-term state and county comprehensive plans. The only new rules the Department will adopt under this bill will be dates for submission and updating county plans.

These existing rules that the Legislature has allowed are:

(a) submission dates for the county alcohol and drug plan, and

(b) the approval date by the department or notice of disapproval."

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 844 (Ch. 711, L. 1979) provided in part: "Section 13 [enacted as Section 9 and codified as 53-24-211] requires each county to submit a countywide plan to the department for the treatment, rehabilitation, and prevention of alcoholism and gives the department the authority to approve or disapprove of each plan.

It is intended that the rules adopted by the department with regard to the plans will:

(1) provide the procedure for the submission of the plan including the general format and the type of information needed by the department to evaluate the plan; and

(2) outline the criteria that the department will use in approving or disapproving a plan."

1981 Amendment: In (1) changed "January 1, 1980" to "January 1 of each year"; and in (4) changed "December 31, 1979" to "January 1 of each year" in (a) and changed "June 30, 1980" to "June 30 of each year" in (b).

Restrictions on Authority of County Attorney Regarding Involuntary Commitment of Alcoholic: A County Attorney does not have authority to file a petition for the involuntary commitment of an alcoholic pursuant to this section, nor may a County Attorney represent a spouse, guardian, relative, certifying physician, or the chief of an approved public treatment facility in a proceeding for the involuntary commitment of an alcoholic. 43 A.G. 2005 Amendment: Chapter 442 in (1) near end after "health" inserted "care" and at end deleted "if the person consents to an offer for help"; in (2) deleted "A person who appears to be incapacitated by alcohol must be taken into protective custody by the police and must be taken to an emergency medical service customarily used for incapacitated persons. The police, in detaining the person, are taking the person into protective custody and shall make every reasonable effort to protect the person's health and safety. In taking the person into protective custody, the detaining officer may take reasonable steps for the officer's own protection. An entry or other record may not be made to indicate that the person taken into custody under this section has been arrested or charged with a crime" and inserted sentence relating to peace officer liability; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 165 in (1), at beginning, deleted sentence providing that an intoxicated person could voluntarily receive emergency treatment at a public facility and deleted provision for taking the person to a public treatment facility; in (2) deleted references to taking the person to a public treatment facility; deleted (3) through (6) relating to examination at, admission to, and length of stay at a public facility, being committed to the facility under 53-24-304 after a 48-hour stay, taking a person to the person's home or to other shelter, and notification to the person's family upon admission to a public facility; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (6) substituted "may be notified if the patient consents to such notification" for "shall be notified as promptly as possible. If an adult patient who is not incapacitated requests that there be no notification, his request shall be respected".

Case Notes

DUI Stop — "Seizure" of Vehicle — Summary Judgment for Defendant Improper: An officer stopped a car driven by Trina Nelson. Trina and Stephen both admitted that they had been drinking. The officer determined that there was no probable cause to arrest Trina for DUI and told her to park the car. Trina attempted to walk home and was hit and killed by a drunk driver. Stephen sued the county, alleging negligence and violation of 42 U.S.C. 1983. The District Court granted the county's motion for summary judgment. Stephen filed a motion for reconsideration based on a later-decided case that adopted a "state-created danger" theory supporting a section 1983 action. The District Court denied the motion. Stephen appealed, and the county moved to dismiss on the basis that the appeal was not timely filed. The Supreme Court denied the county's motion to dismiss and established criteria for equating a motion for reconsideration to a motion to alter or amend. Nelson v. Driscoll, 285 M 355, 948 P2d 256, 54 St. Rep. 1190 (1997).

Impaired Driver Not Entitled to Treatment Instead of Punishment: The defendant, who has an extensive record of driving under the influence of alcohol, was convicted on three counts of driving under the influence (DUI) and sentenced to serve 10 months in the county jail. The defendant contends that 53-24-303 requires she be given treatment for alcoholism rather than criminal punishment. However, that section provides for treatment of persons incapacitated by alcohol. It is not intended to protect those who have committed criminal acts, who are distinguishable from persons whose only fault is an affinity for alcohol. While treatment of alcoholism is desirable, it is not required instead of criminal punishment for a person convicted of DUI. St. v. Bruns, 213 M 372, 691 P2d 817, 41 St. Rep. 2178 (1984).

Death in Jail From Alcohol Withdrawal — No Negligence Per Se by County — Membership in Protected Class Required: Solberg was involved in a one-vehicle accident. He was taken to jail and charged with driving while intoxicated and driving without a valid driver's license. He pleaded guilty to both offenses on the following day, was unable to pay the fine imposed, and was ordered to serve time in jail. Two days later Solberg was found dead in his cell from alcohol-related withdrawal symptoms. Solberg's personal representative brought a wrongful death action against Yellowstone County. At the trial, the District Court refused to give an instruction finding defendant negligent as a matter of law. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that 53-24-303, as interpreted in Azure v. Billings, 182 M 234, 596 P2d 460 (1979), was not applicable, as Solberg was not a member of the class protected by the statute, the publicly intoxicated. Solberg was charged with two criminal offenses to which he pleaded guilty. Whether defendant breached the common-law duty owed by a jailer to a prisoner was a question for the jury. Solberg v. Yellowstone County, 203 M 79, 659 P2d 290, 40 St. Rep. 308 (1983).

Negligence Per Se: The violation of a statute enacted for the protection of the public is negligence per se. For this rule to apply, the plaintiff must be a member of the class in whose favor a duty was imposed by the statute, and the defendant must be a member of the class against whom a duty is imposed. Both requirements were fulfilled in this case. The police were required to take incapacitated persons to an emergency medical facility where such facility existed; failure to do so was a contributing proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. Azure v. Billings, 182 M 234, 596 P2d 460, 36 St. Rep. 968 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

Treatment of Person Under Protective Custody — Examination by Physician: An approved public treatment facility must have a licensed physician examine a person who appears to be incapacitated by alcohol when that person has been taken into protective custody and is brought to the facility by the police. The approved public treatment facility is not thereafter required to treat the person who is determined to be incapacitated, pursuant to subsection (4) (now deleted) of this section, but may admit and treat the person for up to 48 hours. 42 A.G. Case Notes

Inspection of Medical and Youth Court Records Denied — No Prejudice: The defendant, convicted of sexual intercourse without consent, contended that the District Court's refusal to furnish him the minor victim's hospital and Youth Court records for use on cross-examination prejudiced his right to "be confronted with the witnesses against him" under the sixth amendment to the U.S. Constitution (similar to Art. II, sec. 24, Mont. Const.). The Supreme Court held that 50-16-314 (repealed, 1987) and 53-24-306 exempt confidential health care information from compulsory legal process. In St. v. Camitsch, 192 M 124, 626 P2d 1250, 38 St. Rep. 563 (1981), the Supreme Court "confine[d] the permissible use of . . . juvenile records to demonstrating, by cross-examination, a witness' bias, prejudice, or motive". The defendant in this case failed to show how use of the records could have demonstrated this or how he could have built a defense based on their use. He had adequate opportunity to cross-examine the victim in an effort to damage her credibility. The Supreme Court ruled that the confrontation clause does not require that a criminal defendant be allowed to impeach the credibility of a victim by compromising the confidentiality of medical treatment or Youth Court records; therefore, the defendant's sixth amendment right was not infringed. St. v. Mendenhall, 219 M 328, 721 P2d 1255, 42 St. Rep. 2060 (1985).

Alcohol Abuse Program — Confidential Information — Use in Drunk Driving Prosecution or Arrest: Concerned that Magnuson was intoxicated, Kee attempted to keep him from driving away from the Kee ranch and, when the attempt failed, called the local Alcoholics Anonymous and talked of her fears to House, not knowing that Magnuson was in counseling with House under a federally funded program. Federal law provides that patients' records are confidential and that information received while performing any alcohol abuse prevention function cannot be used to initiate or substantiate any criminal prosecution. House called an undersheriff and told him Magnuson was intoxicated, was driving a Ford Bronco, that Tracy's Bar was his usual hangout, and that the undersheriff should watch out for Magnuson. While driving around, the undersheriff saw Magnuson driving erratically. When stopped, Magnuson smelled of alcohol, appeared drunk, and failed onsite sobriety tests. The information House gave the undersheriff was not tainted with the federal prohibition, and dismissal of a DUI charge on the grounds of taint would be reversed. House was not performing an alcohol abuse prevention function when he received the information from Kee, and thus the information he gave the undersheriff was not federally prohibited confidential records information. In addition, the information the undersheriff received from House was not used to initiate or substantiate any charge; the undersheriff's own observations were. St. v. Magnuson, 210 M 401, 682 P2d 1365, 41 St. Rep. 1121 (1984).

Probationer Not Entitled to Good Time Credit for Time Served on Original Sentence: Williams' suspended sentence for felony assault was revoked after Williams violated the terms of the suspension. Williams requested that he be credited for good time that he served on the suspended sentence. The District Court concluded that Williams was a probationer, not a parolee, and declined to grant good time credit. Williams appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Williams' original sentence did not provide that Williams be treated as a parolee, so as a probationer, Williams was not entitled to credit for good time under McDermott v. Dept. of Corrections, 2001 MT 134, 305 M 462, 29 P3d 992 (2001). St. v. Williams, 2003 MT 136, 316 M 140, 69 P3d 222 (2003).

Prison Behavior Modification Plans Violative of Excessive Sanction Protection and Equal Protection — State Directed to Revise Incarceration Procedures: Walker, an inmate with diagnosed mental illness, alleged that conditions at the state prison violated constitutional sanctions against excessive punishment and equal protection guarantees because of his mental condition. Although Walker had been released from the state prison when his petition for postconviction relief was considered by the Supreme Court, the case was not moot, as the state contended, because the prison programs remained in place. The court went on to consider whether behavior modification programs used at the prison unconstitutionally exacerbated inmates' mental health conditions and concluded that they do. The plain meaning of the dignity clause in Art. II, sec. 4, Mont. Const., commands that the intrinsic worth and basic humanity of persons may not be violated, and if the particular conditions of confinement cause serious mental illness to be greatly exacerbated or deprive inmates of their sanity, those conditions then cross into the realm of psychological torture. Thus, prison behavior modification programs and living conditions in maximum security constitute an affront to the inviolable right to human dignity and constitute cruel and unusual punishment when they exacerbate an inmate's mental health condition. The prison was directed to conform the operations of its administrative segregation units to the requirements of this opinion. Walker v. St., 2003 MT 134, 316 M 103, 68 P3d 872 (2003). See also Campbell v. Mahoney, 2001 MT 146, 306 M 45, 29 P3d 1034 (2001).

Waiver of Right to Earn Good Time Credits in Boot Camp Program — Incarceration for Full Term Not Considered Cruel and Unusual Punishment: After being sentenced to 5 years in prison for negligent homicide, Campbell applied for admission to the boot camp program. As part of the application process, Campbell was required to read and sign a detailed, clearly written explanation of program goals, objectives, rules, and criteria, which included an acknowledgment that Campbell would be ineligible for good time credits while in the program. Pursuant to its administrative authority, the Department of Corrections had determined that good time credits would conflict with the program's emphasis on positive achievement, earned rewards, and the possibility of sentence reductions for successful program completion. Campbell was accepted in the program and spent nearly 3 months in boot camp, but did not complete the program because of a series of infractions. As a consequence, Campbell did not earn either a sentence reduction or the good time credits that might have been earned in prison. Campbell then filed a writ of habeas corpus, contending that he had a right to good time credits and that the Department's refusal to award the credits deprived him of liberty without due process and resulted in his being held beyond the lawful term of his sentence, which constituted cruel and unusual punishment. The Supreme Court noted that under Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009 (1997), Campbell had a protected liberty interest in the opportunity to earn good times credits at boot camp. However, Campbell voluntarily chose to relinquish his interest in good time credits in order to gain the benefits of boot camp. Thus, the state did not deprive Campbell of anything, and his due process claim failed. The Supreme Court went on to examine the distinction between nonwaivable public rights and waivable private rights, as contemplated in 1-3-204, holding that there were no grounds to conclude that Campbell could not voluntarily waive his interest in good time credits. Allowing an inmate to waive good time credits does not defeat any protectionist purpose of the good time allowance statute, particularly when the inmate chooses to relinquish the benefits of one legislatively created program for another. Finally, Campbell's cruel and unusual punishment argument was predicated on the belief that he was entitled to good time credits, but by choosing to forego the opportunity to earn good time at boot camp, Campbell actually received all the good time credit to which he was entitled and could not complain that incarceration for the full term of his lawfully imposed sentence was cruel and unusual. No Liberty Interest in Good Time Credits for Probationers — Credit for Time Served on Probation Properly Denied: McDermott pleaded guilty in early 1995 to issuing a bad check, felony common scheme, and received a 6-year deferred sentence and was placed on probation. After nearly 4 years on probation, McDermott had failed to comply with the conditions of probation, so the District Court revoked the deferred sentence and sentenced McDermott to 5 years at the state prison, specifying that no credit was allowed for time served while on probation or for good time. McDermott contended that he was improperly denied good time credit while on probation and that 53-30-105 (repealed 1995) violated equal protection guarantees because it granted good time credit for parolees but not probationers. The Supreme Court disagreed. Although it was held in Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009 (1997), that 53-30-105 created a liberty interest in good time credit for inmates, the court concluded that a similar liberty interest is not created for probationers. Because probationers are not statutorily entitled to good time credits and because the terms of probation are part of the sentence, the state's decision not to award good time credits during probation did not create an atypical and significant hardship or inevitably affect the duration of McDermott's sentence. McDermott had no protected liberty interest and was denied no process to which he was constitutionally entitled. Further, McDermott's argument that 53-30-105 violated equal protection by treating probationers differently than parolees also failed. Applying the rational basis test, the court concluded that the state has a legitimate interest in the disparate treatment of parolees and probationers regarding eligibility for sentence-reducing credits, including jurisdictional differences as well as penological interests. McDermott was properly credited with good time for the time that he was incarcerated and was properly denied credit for time spent on probation against his subsequent sentence. Thus, McDermott showed no constitutional basis for the claim that he was being illegally restrained, so his petitions for writs of habeas corpus and mandate were denied. McDermott v. Dept. of Corrections, 2001 MT 134, 305 M 462, 29 P3d 992 (2001). See also St. v. Bruns, 213 M 372, 691 P2d 817 (1984), and St. v. Nelson, 275 M 86, 910 P2d 247 (1996).

Defendant Incarcerated Prior to Sentencing Entitled to Ten Days a Month of Good Time Credit: Sebastian argued that the policy of awarding 10 days of good time allowance a month for presentence incarceration served under 53-30-105 (now repealed) constituted a wealth-based classification, in violation of MacPheat v. Mahoney, 2000 MT 62, 299 M 46, 997 P2d 753 (2000). The Supreme Court noted that it had previously addressed the good time issue in Corcoran v. Mahoney, No. 00-346 (July 2000), an unpublished opinion holding that because security levels in county jails are consistent with close custody security classifications at the state prison, defendants who are incarcerated prior to sentencing are entitled to 10 days a month of good time credit under the former good time statute. The court found the policy determination that pretrial detainees are entitled to no more than 10 days of good time credit to be reasonable and declined to apply the classification system in MacPheat to pretrial detainees. Sebastian v. Mahoney, 2001 MT 88, 305 M 158, 25 P3d 163 (2001).

Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus Not Necessarily Mooted by Release of Petitioner From Physical Custody: Sebastian argued that he was entitled to a writ of habeas corpus because he was being unlawfully imprisoned under the Department of Corrections good time policy. The state contended that the legality of Sebastian's imprisonment was moot because he had been released from incarceration. Sebastian argued that even though he was released from prison, he was still suffering under an unlawful restraint on his liberty because the discharge date of the 10-year suspended sentence that he was serving depended on good time credit to which he was entitled. The Supreme Court noted that release from custody may moot some habeas corpus petitions because the relief requested, i.e., release from unlawful imprisonment, can no longer be granted. However, release from physical custody does not necessarily moot the petition when the court can still grant effective relief. In this case, the completion date of Sebastian's suspended sentence depended on the discharge date of his term of confinement and was thus based on the jail good time credit to which he was entitled. If the good time policy was in fact unlawful and its application to Sebastian's prison term led to an erroneous discharge date, the completion date of the suspended sentence would also be incorrect. Thus, despite the fact that Sebastian was no longer imprisoned, it was still within the power of the court to grant relief to prevent the possible unlawful restraint on Sebastian's liberty, so the petition was not moot, and the court went on to address the merits of the petition. Sebastian v. Mahoney, 2001 MT 88, 305 M 158, 25 P3d 163 (2001).

Parole Period Not to Be Reduced by Good Time Credit — Good Time Allowance Properly Limited: The sentencing court restricted Wilson's right to earn any good time against a 30-year term during which Wilson was ordered ineligible for parole. Wilson maintained that 46-18-202 contained no language that would allow the District Court to restrict a defendant's right to earn a good time allowance. Good time allowances were authorized by 53-30-105 (now repealed) and operated as a credit on a prisoner's sentence. Upon review of the sentencing order, the Supreme Court concluded that Wilson was not limited in earning good time against the sentence, but rather that the 30-year period of ineligibility for parole was not to be reduced by any good time credits that Wilson received toward the total sentence. The restriction was within the sentencing court's authority, and the sentence was affirmed. St. v. Wilson, 1999 MT 52, 293 M 429, 976 P2d 962, 56 St. Rep. 220 (1999).

Prison Disciplinary Proceedings as Remedial — No Impediment to Criminal Proceedings Involving Same Conduct: The prohibition against double jeopardy does not bar criminal prosecution for conduct that has been the subject of prior remedial administrative prison disciplinary proceedings, such as the forfeiture of good time for escape. Even if administrative sanctions are considered punishment, they are integral parts of and distinct from an inmate's single punishment of incarceration for the prior conviction. The withholding of the contingent reward of good time is not considered punishment for double jeopardy purposes because the withholding is a consequence of the underlying prior conviction that resulted in the incarceration and not a result of the rule violation or escape attempt that led to the disciplinary action itself. St. v. Nelson, 275 M 86, 910 P2d 247, 53 St. Rep. 50 (1996). See also U.S. v. Halper, 490 US 435, 104 L Ed 2d 487, 109 S Ct 1892 (1989), and U.S. v. Soto-Olivas, 44 F3d 788 (9th Cir. 1995).

Department Discretion in Establishing Rules on "Good Time" Credits — University Extension Coursework Properly Credited — Liberty Interest and Equal Protection Considered: The Department of Corrections and Human Services (now Department of Corrections) has virtually unfettered discretion under 53-30-105 (now repealed) in establishing rules that govern "good time" credits for prisoners. Nothing in the prison educational policies conflicts with 53-30-105 (now repealed); therefore, a policy granting credit for a prisoner's participation in an extension program from approved colleges or universities but not for correspondence courses does not create a liberty interest in "good time" credits. Further, in line with the Department's legitimate interest in promoting inmate education while preserving efficient administration of the prison, the Department's careful assessment that denial of "good time" credit for correspondence courses, when applied equally to all inmates, is not violative of equal protection or an unconstitutional restraint of freedom. Remington v. Dept. of Corrections and Human Services, 255 M 480, 844 P2d 50, 49 St. Rep. 1084 (1992), overruled, as to the use of the test of whether the state had created an interest of "real substance" and replaced that test with the test of whether a state had gone beyond issuing procedural guidelines and used "language of an unmistakably mandatory character", in Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009, 54 St. Rep. 200 (1997).

State Immune From Suit for Illegal Imprisonment When Imprisonment Later Declared Contrary to Statute: In 1979, petitioner was convicted of issuing a bad check. Her sentence was deferred, and she was placed on probation for 3 years. In 1982, petitioner's deferral was revoked because she was convicted of another crime. As a result of the revocation, she was sentenced to serve 5 years in prison. Later in 1982, the Supreme Court, relying on its interpretation of 53-30-105 (now repealed) (as it read prior to its amendment in 1981) in Crist v. Segna, 191 M 210, 622 P2d 1028, 38 St. Rep. 150 (1981), ordered petitioner's release because at the time of her imprisonment she had accumulated sufficient good time credit on probation that her deferred sentence would have been fully served. Petitioner then sued for damages for illegal imprisonment. The Supreme Court held that the State was immune from suit under 2-9-112 because the sentence imposed on petitioner for her violation of probation was a judicial act. Knutson v. St., 211 M 126, 683 P2d 488, 41 St. Rep. 1258 (1984).

Prison's Custody Classification as Alleged Violation of Plea Bargaining Agreement — Withdrawal of Plea Denied: Under a plea bargain agreement, defendant was sentenced to 10 years as a nondangerous offender without parole. Upon entering prison, he was held in close custody for 24 months under prison rules calling for dangerous offenders and those sentenced without parole to serve 24 months in close custody prior to being considered for transfer to lower, more amenable custody levels. The prosecution, defense counsel, defendant, and judge were all unaware of those rules. Defendant was not entitled to withdraw his plea on the ground he was kept in close custody for 24 months in violation of his plea agreement. There was no violation of the agreement, nor was he entitled to the additional good time credits he would have received had he not been held so long in close custody. Prison officials take many factors into account in making custody reclassifications, and there was no guarantee he would have been held in close custody only for the time he claimed he should have been upon entry to the prison. St. v. Mesler, 210 M 92, 682 P2d 714, 41 St. Rep. 939 (1984).

Good Time Earned While Serving One Sentence Not Applicable to Later Sentence: In 1970, petitioner was convicted of burglary and sentenced to 10 years in the Montana State Prison. He was released on parole in 1971. In 1976, he was returned to the Montana State Prison after being convicted on another burglary charge. Subsequently his parole was revoked. During the time petitioner was on parole, good time could be earned under 53-30-105 (now repealed) by a parolee. Under a 1981 amendment to 53-30-105 (now repealed) (prior to amendment again in 1991), this was no longer possible. In 1982, petitioner filed a petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus, claiming that the good time he earned while on parole should be applied to reduce the discharge date of his second sentence, as the second sentence had been merged (under 46-23-217, prior to amendment) with the first sentence. The Supreme Court ruled that the sentences ran concurrently but were not merged and that therefore any good time petitioner earned while on parole on his first sentence may be applied only to the first sentence. Bagley v. Risley, 207 M 121, 672 P2d 1126, 40 St. Rep. 1937 (1983).

Discretion Allowable in Granting Good Time to Parolees: Where the petitioners sought Writs of Habeas Corpus to release them from prison on the basis of good time earned while on parole, the trial court correctly held that the prison officials could not deprive the petitioners of statutory good time earned. The law allows prison officials discretion to determine, in accordance with rules adopted by those officials, the eligibility of a prisoner for good time but does not grant unfettered discretion to deny good time absent noncompliance with the rules. As there was an attempt by the warden to cause a forfeiture of good time for noncompliance with the rules, the respondents were entitled to release. Crist v. Segna, 191 M 210, 622 P2d 1028, 38 St. Rep. 150 (1981); followed in Bagley v. Risley, 207 M 121, 672 P2d 1126, 40 St. Rep. 1937 (1983), where petitioner was on parole prior to the 1981 amendments.

Good Time Held Applicable to Parolees: Where the petitioners sought Writs of Habeas Corpus to release them from prison on the basis of good time earned while on parole, the trial court correctly held that parolees could be credited with good time under 53-30-105 (now repealed) while on parole. (Annotator's note: 1981 amendments prohibited good time while on probation or parole, but 1991 amendment restored good time while on parole.) Following rules of statutory construction, the court concluded that it was the intention of the Legislature to grant parolees good time for time served on parole and that the language of 53-30-105 (now repealed) did not act as a saving clause to apply that section only to inmates convicted prior to April 1, 1955. Crist v. Segna, 191 M 210, 622 P2d 1028, 38 St. Rep. 150 (1981).

Rulemaking Authority as to Good Time — Limitation: The Supreme Court denied petitioner's request, under a Writ of Habeas Corpus petition, to be credited for good time for participation in an education program although confined in maximum security. The computations of the state officials were found accurate. It was within their jurisdiction to impose rules under 53-30-105 (now repealed), which rules properly avoid good time awards in excess of the statutory provisions. Seadin v. Crist, 187 M 112, 608 P2d 1094, 37 St. Rep. 953 (1980).

Prison Disciplinary Hearings: Since under 53-30-105 (now repealed) the imposition of a penalty may result in a loss of good time with its effect upon ultimate release, the accused is entitled to some measure, though not the full panoply, of due process safeguards. Witnesses whose testimony would be repetitive or irrelevant need not be called. However, whenever crucial evidence is presented in the form of a hearsay report by an officer and there are no overriding considerations, fairness requires the determination of how the hearsay was obtained, especially the suggestiveness of photographic identification employed. Therefore, in this case it was an abuse of discretion not to call the officer. The court noted that it is not necessary to provide a written reason for not calling a witness. Brown v. Crist, 492 F. Supp. 965, 36 St. Rep. 1423 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Forfeiture of Good Time Allowance: Contention by petitioner for Writ of Habeas Corpus that Board of Pardons (now Board of Pardons and Parole) did not have authority to revoke earned good time after violation of parole by petitioner under 53-30-105 (now repealed) was without merit since petitioner was sentenced prior to 1955 and section 80-741, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), in effect at that time, allowed such revocation of earned good time. Petition of McIlhargey, 154 M 510, 463 P2d 476 (1970).

Discretion of Parole Board: Where petitioner violated his parole, it was completely within discretion of parole board (now Board of Pardons and Parole) to withdraw his "good time" as provided in 53-30-105 (now repealed). Petition of Spurlock, 153 M 475, 458 P2d 80 (1969).

Ex Post Facto Application: Prisoner was not additionally confined by virtue of an ex post facto law under section 80-740, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), dealing with privilege of earning good time, not to exceed 10 days a month, conditioned upon being employed in the state prison and maintaining good conduct in the prison, as amended in 1955, where such amendment in no way affected the provisions of that section insofar as the prisoner was concerned from the way it read in 1951 at the time that he entered the state prison. In re Frost's Petition, 146 M 18, 403 P2d 612 (1965).

Reduction of Sentence: Prisoner was given the benefit of provisions of section 80-739, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1955), where check of computation of statutory allowances and good time earned from state prison records disclosed that prisoner was entitled to 23 years and 9 months statutory allowances towards reduction of his sentence and that this allowance was credited to him on his entry to the prison. His sentence as fixed by the District Court would expire on October 11, 2001; applying the provisions of section 80-739, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1955), the sentence was computed to expire January 10, 1978, as carried on prison records. In re Frost's Petition, 146 M 18, 403 P2d 612 (1965).

Forfeiture of Good Time:

An inmate's lost good time, once forfeited, cannot be restored. In re Kane's Petition, 145 M 516, 402 P2d 403 (1965).

The Board of Prison Commissioners (now Board of Pardons and Parole) is vested with discretionary power as to the allowance or forfeiture of good time and may make such rules as are reasonable in connection therewith. In re Owens' Petition, 139 M 637, 365 P2d 935 (1961); In re Pelke's Petition, 139 M 354, 365 P2d 932 (1961).

A convict, by escaping, forfeits all his good time. State ex rel. Herman v. Powell, 139 M 583, 367 P2d 553 (1961).

Second Conviction: Relator was convicted of crime of burglary in the first degree. After serving 1 year and 6 days, he was released from prison pending his appeal. The conviction was reversed upon such appeal, and a new trial ordered. Upon the new trial he was again convicted and sentenced for the same period as the first, 10 years. During his second incarceration he was not entitled to credit against the second sentence for time served under the first sentence. State ex rel. Nelson v. Ellsworth, 141 M 78, 375 P2d 316 (1962).

Transition: Under the "new parole laws" (Title 46, ch. 23, parts 1 and 2), a prisoner retains the right to earn good time under the old good time statutes and he is subject to forfeiture of this good time. In re Pelke's Petition, 139 M 628, 365 P2d 936 (1961); Hill v. St. 139 M 407, 365 P2d 44, 95 ALR 2d 1261 (1961).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 651, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 28, of the Montana Constitution states that laws for the punishment of crime should be founded on the principles of prevention and reformation; and

WHEREAS, the current Women's Correction Center [now Montana Women's Prison] was created in 1982 as a temporary facility; and

WHEREAS, the current Women's Correction Center [now Montana Women's Prison] is a totally inadequate correctional facility consisting of a vacant nurses' dormitory at Warm Springs State Hospital, which provides inadequate security; inadequate medical, vocational, and other educational and rehabilitative services; and inadequate space for the state's rising population of female inmates; and

WHEREAS, population projections by the Department of Institutions [now Department of Corrections] estimate 124 female inmates will be incarcerated in a state facility, including prerelease and community-based facilities, by the year 1995; and

WHEREAS, Chapter 518, Laws of 1989, required the Department of Institutions [now Department of Corrections], in cooperation with the Governor's Criminal Justice and Corrections Advisory Council, to develop a comprehensive plan for housing female inmates and required submission of the plan to the 52nd Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Institutions [now Department of Corrections] has begun a request for proposal process by which it is soliciting proposals from various Montana communities to construct a women's correctional center; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature believes that decisions concerning the site selection process and the financing and construction of the center must be made with the interests of crime prevention and reformation of female inmates as the state's highest priority and are matters of statewide concern and appropriate for legislative action."

Selection Process for Women's Correctional Facility: Sections 1 through 7, Ch. 651, L. 1991, provided: "Section 1. Legislative findings. The legislature finds that the incarceration and management of female felony offenders is a matter of state responsibility and that the location and design of a women's correctional center providing for these services determines [determine] the proper management of those offenders, so that it is necessary to provide proper guidelines for the location and construction of the women's correctional center.

(3) The department may accept in full or partial compliance with the requirements of subsection (2) information provided to the department pursuant to any similar request for proposals process if that information otherwise satisfies the requirements of subsection (2) and was received by the department no later than January 30, 1991. If the criteria included in the department's original request for proposals for which responses were submitted by January 30, 1991, do not include all the criteria required in subsection (2), the department shall request the additional information from the respondents.

Section 4. Site selection committee. (1) Proposals submitted in response to the request for proposals required by [section 3] must be evaluated by a site selection committee. The committee consists of the following persons, whose selection must provide for gender balance on the committee:

(a) one representative of the architecture and engineering division of the department of administration, appointed by the director of the department of administration, to serve in an advisory capacity only;

(b) three representatives of the public, appointed by the governor, none of whom may be a resident of a local governmental unit submitting a proposal;

(c) the corrections division administrator and the warden of the women's correctional center [now Montana women's prison], representing the department of institutions [now department of corrections];

(d) two members of the house of representatives, neither of whom may be a resident of a local governmental unit submitting a proposal, appointed by the speaker of the house;

(e) two members of the senate, neither of whom may be a resident of a local governmental unit submitting a proposal, appointed by the president of the senate;

(f) one representative of established and recognized organizations whose primary mission is specific to women's needs, appointed by the governor; and

(g) one representative of the criminal justice and corrections advisory council, appointed by the governor.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by [sections 1 through 7], the site selection committee shall [must] be compensated, reimbursed, and otherwise governed by the provisions of 2-15-122 regarding advisory councils.

(3) The committee shall meet as often as necessary to perform the duties assigned by [sections 1 through 7]. The committee shall consider, evaluate, and select the location for the women's correctional center according to the procedure and criteria in [section 5].

(4) The committee is attached for administrative purposes only to the department, which shall provide such staff, budgetary, administrative, and clerical services to the committee as the committee or its chairperson requests.

(5) The committee terminates on the date of the announcement of the winning proposal by the director of the department in accordance with [section 7(3)].

Section 5. Site selection procedure and criteria. (1) The site selection committee may not consider a proposal unless the proposal:

(a) is submitted within the time required by the request for proposal[s]; and

(b) contains the construction site information, service availability information, program information, and additional criteria required by [section 3(2)].

(2) The committee shall determine a maximum numeric value for each of the criteria required in [section 3]. Criteria that the committee determines to be of more relative importance must be awarded a greater maximum value. The committee shall rate each proposal considered by it by using a weighted scale process that assigns a numeric score for each criteria and then totals the score for each proposal. The score for each criteria and proposal must be determined by the extent to which each criteria is satisfied, based upon a documented demonstration of:

(a) the proximity, availability, and number of resources satisfying the criteria;

(b) the strength and quality of the resources satisfying the criteria; and

(c) the strength of the community's willingness and ability to provide resources satisfying the criteria.

Section 6. Site visitation and hearings required. The site selection committee shall determine the four proposals with the highest numeric scores. The committee shall eliminate the other proposals from further consideration. As soon as possible after elimination of the other sites, the committee shall conduct on-site reviews of the four remaining candidate sites by conducting both an on-site tour of each of the four candidate sites and holding a public hearing on the subject of the center in the community where each proposed site is located. The purpose of the tour and hearing is to receive information concerning the extent to which each candidate site satisfies the criteria in [section 3] and [section 7(2)]. The hearings must be conducted under procedures determined by the committee, and the committee shall give notice of each hearing by advertisement in a newspaper of general circulation in the county of each candidate site.

Section 7. Site selection. (1) After completing the onsite reviews required by [section 6], the committee shall again score each of the four candidate sites by applying the criteria and scoring method provided in [section 5].

(2) If two or more proposals receive the same total score, the committee shall determine the leading proposal by assigning maximum point values for and scoring those proposals on the following criteria for the community in which the center would be located:

(a) strength of community volunteer resources;

(b) ability of the community's postsecondary educational programs to provide appropriate interns for the facility [center];

(c) the receptiveness of the public school district or districts to enrolling the children of center inmates in their schools; and

(d) the ethnic and cultural diversity of the community.

(3) The center must be located at the site proposed by the local governmental unit whose proposal receives the highest numeric score using the procedure provided in this section. Upon selection of the winning proposal by the committee, the committee will inform the director of the department of its selection. The director shall review the selection process to ensure that the committee has not made an error in process or in fact. If the director determines that an error has been made, he shall remand the recommendation to the committee for further evaluation. The director shall make a public announcement of the committee's selection upon determining that no errors have been made. The committee shall submit its selection to the director of the department no later than 150 days after [the effective date of this act] [effective April 26, 1991]."

Effective Date: Section 12, Ch. 651, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved April 26, 1991.

Termination: Section 13, Ch. 651, L. 1991, provided: "[Sections 1 through 7] terminate 150 days after passage and approval." Approved April 26, 1991.

Case Notes

No Constitutional Liberty Interest in Being Housed Exclusively at State Prison: Following a conviction for deliberate homicide and use of a firearm, Wright was sentenced in 1996 to the state prison in Deer Lodge for 75 years, where he was originally placed. Over the years, Wright was placed at various other institutions, including out-of-state and in-state regional detention and private correctional centers. Wright filed a writ of prohibition to prevent the state from housing him anywhere but the state prison in Deer Lodge, pursuant to the terms of the written judgment. Under the law in effect at the time of Wright's sentencing, the Deer Lodge prison was the only adult male correctional facility in Montana, but the statutory definition has since been expanded to include other facilities. Wright contended that application of the amended definition to his sentence was unconstitutionally ex post facto, in violation of his liberty interests. The Supreme Court disagreed. Pursuant to Meachum v. Fano, 427 US 215 (1975), Wright's conviction sufficiently extinguished Wright's liberty interest to empower the state to confine him in any of its prisons, and under Olim v. Wakinekona, 461 US 238 (1983), Wright also had no justifiable expectation that he would be imprisoned in any particular state. Further, in order for the state to create a liberty interest, under McDermott v. Dept. of Corrections, 2001 MT 134, 305 M 462, 29 P3d 992 (2001), it must first enact a law that establishes a right of real substance, and then even those statutorily defined interests are restricted to freedom from atypical and significant hardships in relation to the ordinary incidents of prison life or restraints that inevitably affect the duration of the prisoner's confinement. The Supreme Court held that even if the 1995 definition of state prison did confer a right of real substance, being transferred from one prison to another, even out of state, did not meet the McDermott test for hardship or duration of confinement. Thus, Wright had neither a federal nor a state constitutional liberty interest in being housed exclusively at the state prison in Deer Lodge, and the state has authority to transfer Wright from that facility. Wright v. Mahoney, 2003 MT 141, 316 M 173, 71 P3d 1195 (2003).

Prisoner Rehabilitation Not State Obligation: The plaintiffs sued the state for damages, alleging that the state was negligent in releasing a nonrehabilitated prisoner who killed their child. The Supreme Court held that the state is not a guarantor of its rehabilitation facilities and that the court would not impose that obligation on the state. VanLuchene v. St., 244 M 397, 797 P2d 932, 47 St. Rep. 1609 (1990), followed in King v. St., 259 M 393, 856 P2d 954, 50 St. Rep. 848 (1993).

Case Notes

Employment Rights Inapplicable to State Prison Inmates: Plaintiffs maintained that while they were male inmates at the state prison, they were employed in various capacities and paid wages substantially less than were paid female inmates for essentially the same jobs. They requested damages, claiming that as male prisoners they were economically discriminated against in favor of female prisoners. They also asked the District Court to describe conditions of work that would alleviate this sexual discrimination in the state prison system. However, the legislature specifically prohibited plaintiffs from receiving the relief they sought by providing that one of the penalties for being a prison inmate is that a prisoner does not have employment rights while serving a sentence in the state prison. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding the plaintiffs were precluded from recovering under both the sex discrimination statutes and the Fair Labor Standards Act. Quigg v. Prior Ruling That Prison Escapee's Property Was Not Abandoned Not Dispositive of Later Claim That Property Was Converted: A prison escapee who was captured and returned to prison sued the prison and five prison officials for destroying the personal property that he left behind at the prison when he escaped. In a prior decision in this case, the Supreme Court ruled that there was a presumption of intent to abandon the property based on the escapee's acts, that the presumption was rebuttable, and that the escapee rebutted it, and thus his complaint was wrongly dismissed for failure to state a claim. The escapee then claimed on remand that the prison wrongfully converted his property, and defendants were granted summary judgment. The prison had a written policy that personal property left behind by an escapee was considered contraband and would be confiscated and sold or destroyed. The prior Supreme Court ruling turned on the issue of abandonment and did not control the ruling on the summary judgment motions, which turned on the issue of conversion. Defendants were entitled to raise the prison policy as a defense. It was not error to grant defendants summary judgment. Hawkins v. Mont. State Prison, 2004 MT 289, 323 M 326, 102 P3d 2 (2004).

Case Notes

Employment Rights Inapplicable to State Prison Inmates: Plaintiffs maintained that while they were male inmates at the state prison, they were employed in various capacities and paid wages substantially less than were paid female inmates for essentially the same jobs. They requested damages, claiming that as male prisoners they were economically discriminated against in favor of female prisoners. They also asked the District Court to describe conditions of work that would alleviate this sexual discrimination in the state prison system. However, the legislature specifically prohibited plaintiffs from receiving the relief they sought by providing that one of the penalties for being a prison inmate is that a prisoner does not have employment rights while serving a sentence in the state prison. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding the plaintiffs were precluded from recovering under both the sex discrimination statutes and the Fair Labor Standards Act. Quigg v. Part 3
Community Corrections Act

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 554, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 28, of the Montana Constitution requires that laws for the punishment of crime must be founded on the principles of prevention and reformation; and

WHEREAS, it is the state's policy that persons convicted of crime should be treated in accordance with their individual characteristics, circumstances, needs, and potentialities; and

WHEREAS, the existing state corrections system offers few alternatives to imprisonment for offenders who have been convicted of a nonviolent felony offense; and

WHEREAS, community corrections programs provide an alternative to imprisonment that is of value both to society and to the individual because such programs provide offenders opportunities to overcome alcohol and drug problems, to obtain employment or become involved in an educational or vocational program, to learn life skills, or to be engaged in other activities that will reduce the recidivism of offenders and enable them to be productive members of society; and

WHEREAS, community corrections programs are desirable because such programs cost substantially less compared to the costs of imprisonment in the Montana State Prison.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to enact legislation to establish community corrections facilities and programs for the placement and treatment of nonviolent felony offenders."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 554, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 10] [53-30-322] grants the department of institutions authority to adopt rules necessary to carry out the provisions of [sections 1 through 15] [this part].

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt regulations and standards for the operation of community corrections facilities and programs. In adopting rules, the department shall comply with the requirements established under [section 10] [53-30-322]. In addition, the department should consider the goals of [sections 1 through 15] [this part], which are:

(1) to reduce reliance upon the Montana state prison for detention of low-risk, nonviolent felony offenders;

(2) to increase services to offenders to help them become productive members of society;

(3) to require offenders to pay restitution to crime victims;

(4) to impose upon offenders responsibility for payment of a portion of the costs of their room and board at community corrections facilities or programs;

(5) to decentralize authority for corrections programs from state government to local or tribal governments;

(6) to stimulate local or tribal participation in the establishment of community corrections facilities and programs;

(7) to reduce the long-term costs of state corrections; and

(8) to reduce court commitments to the state prison, thereby reducing the long-term capital construction costs for the Montana state prison and other corrections facilities.

To ensure the success of the community corrections program, the department, when contracting for services, should consider a potential service provider's knowledge, background, and special expertise in the area of postconviction diversion community corrections programs.

Prior to adopting rules, the department should examine community corrections programs established in other states, especially in the states of Colorado, Iowa, Minnesota, Oregon, and Wyoming. In addition, the comments of potential service providers should be encouraged during the rulemaking process."

Report to Legislature: Section 14, Ch. 554, L. 1991, provided: "No later than January 30, 1993, the department shall submit to the legislature a report describing:

(1) the number of community corrections facilities and programs that have been established;

(2) the number and type of court-referred offenders assigned to community corrections facilities and programs;

(3) the number and type of department-referred offenders assigned to community based prerelease centers;

(4) the extent to which offenders have received and benefited from educational or job training programs related to rehabilitation;

(5) the rate of reconviction of community corrections program participants as compared to the reconviction rate for similar offenders sentenced to the state penitentiary;

(6) the amount of taxes, restitution, and room and board fees paid by offenders assigned to community corrections facilities and programs; and

(7) the number of court-referred offenders who, in the absence of community corrections facilities and programs, would have been sentenced to the custody of the department."

Case Notes

Entry of Intensive Supervision Program Officer Into Probationer's Home Without Consent Unlawful — Information Gathered Via Search Admissible as Independent Source or Inevitable Discovery Exceptions to Fruit of Poisonous Tree Doctrine: As a condition of suspended sentencing, Therriault was placed in the intensive supervision program (ISP). Near the end of the program, Therriault's supervising officer, McCarty, arrived at Therriault's residence for a routine check. Although Therriault was not there, McCarty entered the residence and found, in plain view, what he thought might be a note for him from Therriault, but which turned out to be a high school registration form for a female student. McCarty then went to Therriault's sister's home next door. Therriault's sister informed McCarty that she had seen a girl at Therriault's home during the prior 2 weeks and inquired about the lawful age of consent. McCarty then reentered Therriault's home and reviewed the form, discovering that the applicant was 14 years old. McCarty left a note for Therriault to contact him and left the residence but returned later that night to discover a 14-year-old girl in Therriault's basement. Upon petition to revoke his probation, Therriault alleged that the discovery directly resulted from an illegal search and seizure and moved to suppress all evidence under the fruit of the poisonous tree doctrine. The District Court denied the motion, revoked Therriault's suspended sentence, and sentenced him to prison for the remainder of the term. Therriault appealed. The state contended that as a participant in ISP, Therriault enjoyed little or no expectation of privacy and that McCarty's conduct did not constitute a search. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding that ISP is merely a rigid condition imposed on certain probationers and that it is the sentencing tribunal, not the ISP officer, that establishes the conditions for any search of the probationer's person or property and that any ISP rules, terms or conditions, or means of supervision that conflict with a court-ordered condition of probation will be superseded by the court's conditions. The state misconstrued Therriault's expectation of privacy under ISP because the court's probationary condition stated that Therriault would submit his residence "to search at any time by lawful authorities upon reasonable request of his Probation Officer", so Therriault could expect that an intrusion into the privacy of his home would not occur unless McCarty had reasonable cause and first posed a reasonable request. Accordingly, McCarty's conduct constituted an illegal search and evidence obtained through the unlawful conduct would not generally be admissible under the fruit of the poisonous tree doctrine. However, under St. v. New, 276 M 529, 917 P2d 919 (1996), such derivative evidence is admissible if it is: (1) attenuated from the constitutional violation so as to remove its primary taint; (2) obtained from an independent source; or (3) determined to be evidence that would have been inevitably discovered apart from the constitutional violation. In this case, the second exception applied. McCarty received independent incriminating evidence from Therriault's sister; thus, it was not the tainted evidence of the girl's name or age or the fact that she was transferring to a different school that led to her discovery, but rather the independent information that a girl of questionable age had been residing with Therriault. This irrefutable evidence, ascertained through a source sufficiently independent of McCarty's unlawful conduct, warranted exclusion from the fruit of the poisonous tree doctrine. The District Court's revocation of Therriault's suspended sentence was affirmed. St. v. Therriault, 2000 MT 286, 302 M 189, 14 P3d 444, 57 St. Rep. 1185 (2000).

Escape From Prerelease Center — Felony Escape: Chandler argued that he could not be charged with felony escape for leaving a prerelease center because he was not subject to official detention while at the center. The Supreme Court ruled that a prerelease center is a community corrections facility or program as listed in the felony escape statute and therefore escape from the center violated the plain language of the law and was punishable as a felony. Case Notes

Boot Camp Confessions — No Classic Penalty Situation Compelling Self-Incriminating Statements: Woods volunteered for boot camp. A qualification for successful completion of the camp was full disclosure of past crimes in order to receive a sentence reduction. Unsuccessful completion of boot camp required a return to prison. In an anger management class at boot camp and later to several other persons, Woods made self-incriminating statements regarding a prior double homicide, and Woods was subsequently arrested based on the statements. Woods asserted that he received ineffective assistance of counsel because his attorney failed to raise the classic penalty situation to explain that use of his statements were violative of his right against self-incrimination. The Supreme Court noted that the classic penalty situation did not apply because Woods volunteered for boot camp and volunteered the statements. However, the statements were uncoerced, so the information upon which the state relied for its homicide investigation was not compelled by any threat of penalty from the state, and because no classic penalty situation existed, Woods could not argue ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to argue that it did. Woods did not invoke self-incrimination protection at boot camp, and the privilege against self-incrimination could not be considered self-executing. Thus, Woods's petition for postconviction relief was properly denied. St. v. Woods, 2005 MT 186, 328 M 54, 117 P3d 152 (2005), following St. v. Fuller, 276 M 155, 915 P2d 809 (1996), and distinguishing Robbins v. St., 2002 MT 116, 310 M 10, 50 P3d 134 (2002).

District Court Error in Sentence Providing for No Parole and Setting Out Conditions for Parole: The District Court sentenced Gilbert to serve 5 years without the possibility of parole because of his extensive criminal history. The District Court also stipulated that upon complying with certain conditions Gilbert could be eligible for parole. The Supreme Court held that absent statutory authority, the District Court could not retain jurisdiction to alter Gilbert's sentence.

The Supreme Court also held that it would not attempt to determine the District Court's intent with respect to the contradictory sentence provisions and remanded the case for the District Court to clarify its sentence. Gilbert v. St., 2002 MT 258, 312 M 189, 59 P3d 24 (2002).

Waiver of Right to Earn Good Time Credits in Boot Camp Program — Incarceration for Full Term Not Considered Cruel and Unusual Punishment: After being sentenced to 5 years in prison for negligent homicide, Campbell applied for admission to the boot camp program. As part of the application process, Campbell was required to read and sign a detailed, clearly written explanation of program goals, objectives, rules, and criteria, which included an acknowledgment that Campbell would be ineligible for good time credits while in the program. Pursuant to its administrative authority, the Department of Corrections had determined that good time credits would conflict with the program's emphasis on positive achievement, earned rewards, and the possibility of sentence reductions for successful program completion. Campbell was accepted in the program and spent nearly 3 months in boot camp, but did not complete the program because of a series of infractions. As a consequence, Campbell did not earn either a sentence reduction or the good time credits that might have been earned in prison. Campbell then filed a writ of habeas corpus, contending that he had a right to good time credits and that the Department's refusal to award the credits deprived him of liberty without due process and resulted in his being held beyond the lawful term of his sentence, which constituted cruel and unusual punishment. The Supreme Court noted that under Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009 (1997), Campbell had a protected liberty interest in the opportunity to earn good times credits at boot camp. However, Campbell voluntarily chose to relinquish his interest in good time credits in order to gain the benefits of boot camp. Thus, the state did not deprive Campbell of anything, and his due process claim failed. The Supreme Court went on to examine the distinction between nonwaivable public rights and waivable private rights, as contemplated in 1-3-204, holding that there were no grounds to conclude that Campbell could not voluntarily waive his interest in good time credits. Allowing an inmate to waive good time credits does not defeat any protectionist purpose of the good time allowance statute, particularly when the inmate chooses to relinquish the benefits of one legislatively created program for another. Finally, Campbell's cruel and unusual punishment argument was predicated on the belief that he was entitled to good time credits, but by choosing to forego the opportunity to earn good time at boot camp, Campbell actually received all the good time credit to which he was entitled and could not complain that incarceration for the full term of his lawfully imposed sentence was cruel and unusual. Case Notes

Waiver of Right to Earn Good Time Credits in Boot Camp Program — Incarceration for Full Term Not Considered Cruel and Unusual Punishment: After being sentenced to 5 years in prison for negligent homicide, Campbell applied for admission to the boot camp program. As part of the application process, Campbell was required to read and sign a detailed, clearly written explanation of program goals, objectives, rules, and criteria, which included an acknowledgment that Campbell would be ineligible for good time credits while in the program. Pursuant to its administrative authority, the Department of Corrections had determined that good time credits would conflict with the program's emphasis on positive achievement, earned rewards, and the possibility of sentence reductions for successful program completion. Campbell was accepted in the program and spent nearly 3 months in boot camp, but did not complete the program because of a series of infractions. As a consequence, Campbell did not earn either a sentence reduction or the good time credits that might have been earned in prison. Campbell then filed a writ of habeas corpus, contending that he had a right to good time credits and that the Department's refusal to award the credits deprived him of liberty without due process and resulted in his being held beyond the lawful term of his sentence, which constituted cruel and unusual punishment. The Supreme Court noted that under Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009 (1997), Campbell had a protected liberty interest in the opportunity to earn good times credits at boot camp. Case Notes

Economic Advantage Inadequate Reason for Denial of Public Right to Observe Government Deliberations in Corrections Vendor Process: A newspaper company sought to restrain the Department of Corrections from excluding the public from meetings of the committee that reviewed proposals for operating private prison facilities. The District Court held that the public had no right to observe the negotiation phase of the committee's work, but that once negotiations were completed, the process by which the conclusions were arrived at must be open to public observation. Both parties appealed. The Supreme Court noted that as part of an Executive Branch agency, the Department and the committee were considered governmental bodies pursuant to 2-15-104 for purposes of procurement and that under the constitutional right to know, proposals submitted by private vendors were considered documents of a public body or agency that, under 2-6-102, the public has a right to inspect. Under the two-part test in Missoulian v. Bd. of Regents, 207 M 513, 675 P2d 962 (1984), the only exception to the constitutional provision arises when the demand of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure. The state contended that the meetings at issue were closed for economic advantage, but economic advantage is neither a privacy interest nor a sufficient reason for denying the public the opportunity to observe deliberations of public bodies or to examine public documents, including proposals submitted to the public body by a vendor, unless the proposal concerns a privacy interest involving legitimate trade secrets or individual safety. A public agency's desire for privacy does not provide an exception to the public's constitutional right to observe its government at work. To the extent that provisions in 18-4-304 or ARM 2.5.602 require exclusion of the public from the competitive bid process, those provisions are unconstitutional and unenforceable. Attorney General's Opinions

Maintenance of County Roads — Discretionary or Mandatory: A county is required to maintain county roads established through the petition process but is not legally required to maintain other county roads, which include county roads created by dedication to the public. The Board of County Commissioners exercised its discretion to authorize maintenance of a county road created by dedication to the public from 1952 until 1981. The county is not required by law to maintain the road but has, within the limits of available funds, the power and discretion to do so. 41 A.G. Op. 32 (1985).

City Council — Lack of Authority to Regulate Crosswalk on Federal-Aid Highway in Manner Inconsistent With State Law: A city council may not enact an ordinance requiring a driver of a motor vehicle on a federal-aid or state highway to stop for a pedestrian within a crosswalk when the pedestrian is not on the half of the roadway on which the vehicle is traveling and when the pedestrian is not close enough to be in danger. 41 A.G. Op. 10 (1985).

Forest Service Development Roads: The laws applicable to vehicle size and weight are enforceable upon highways but not upon Forest Service development roads. This part, however, generally extends its jurisdiction over these roads. 37 A.G. Op. 9 (1977).

Case Notes

Federal Courts Look to State Law to Determine What Constitutes a "Public Highway Legally Established" for the Purposes of Federal Land Grant Statutes: In Montana, a public highway legally established is only the portion of the former right-of-way of a railroad that is established by the county as a road open to the public. Avista Corp. Inc. v. Wolfe, 549 F3d 1239 (9th Cir. 2008).

Whistle Statute Applicable to Any Railroad Crossing, Not Just Public Railroad Crossing: Langemo was injured in a collision with a Montana Rail Link train at a private railroad crossing. Langemo contended that the railroad was liable for negligence per se under 69-14-562 because no whistle post was ever installed at the crossing, nor did the engineer sound the train whistle when approaching the crossing, in accordance with a longstanding railroad policy of not sounding the whistle at private crossings. The District Court applied the definition of road in this section, in which the word denotes a public way, and concluded that the whistle statute required bells and whistles to be sounded only at public crossings and granted summary judgment for the railroad. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The District Court's interpretation violated basic rules of statutory construction and misinterpreted the applicable statutes. The whistle statute's use of the phrase "any highway, road, or railroad crossing", in its ordinary and usual meaning, meant every railroad crossing, not just public crossings. The whistle statute was not expressly repealed by the highway code, nor did the general highway code enacted in 1965 impliedly repeal the specific whistle statute of 1873. (However, note that 2001 amendments to 69-14-562 now explicitly require that railroad bells and whistles be sounded only at public crossings.) Langemo v. Mont. Rail Link, Inc., 2001 MT 273, 307 M 293, 38 P3d 782 (2001).

"Heavy or Highway" Construction Construed — "Utility Rights-of-Way" Construed: After receiving complaints about the wages being paid to workers constructing tunnels for heating and electric utilities on the Montana State University-Bozeman campus, the Montana Department of Labor and Industry (DLI) held that the construction projects were "heavy" construction within the meaning of 18-2-401(5) and (7) and that a higher wage should be paid. The DLI also held that the contracting state agency, the Department of Administration (DA), was liable for back wages. The DA appealed the DLI decision to the District Court, which held that the project was not "heavy" construction because it was not a utility "right-of-way". The Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in applying the definition of "right-of-way" found in this section and in holding that a "right-of-way" is only an interest in land. The Supreme Court pointed out that 18-2-401 sets out a listing of projects that are to be built or constructed. The Supreme Court noted that not only could an interest in land not be "constructed" but that the inclusion of "rights-of-way" in the list of types of projects listed in 18-2-401(5) was not intended by the Legislature, because of the use of the phrase "such as", to be an exclusive list of projects. The Supreme Court therefore held that the tunnels were "utility rights-of-way", that they qualified as "heavy construction" within the meaning of 18-2-401(5), and that a higher wage should have been paid by the DA. Dept. of Administration v. Ekanger, 284 M 151, 943 P2d 994, 54 St. Rep. 821 (1997).

Abandonment of State Highway — Statements by State Field Supervisor Contemporaneous With Removal of Asphalt Held Not Evidence of Official Act by State Evidencing Clear Intent to Abandon Easement — Asphalt Alone Not "Highway": DeVoe brought a declaratory judgment action against the state, claiming that the removal of asphalt from a curving intersection and statements by a supervisor of a crew removing the old roadway evidenced an intent by the state to abandon its easement granted in 1937. DeVoe argued that statements by James Williams, the state's field project manager in charge of removal of the asphalt from the section of highway on the state's easement claimed by DeVoe to have been abandoned, showed that the state intended to abandon the easement. The Supreme Court held that the statements by Williams, to the effect that the state might give up the easement, were evidence of an intent to abandon but did not constitute evidence of an official act by the state indicating a clear intent to abandon the 1937 easement. The Supreme Court also noted that a "highway" is defined as including the highway right-of-way and that, for this reason, removal of asphalt does not constitute removal of the highway. The Supreme Court held that the District Court properly granted summary judgment against DeVoe because the District Court properly found that the easement was still subject to highway-related uses. DeVoe v. St., 281 M 356, 935 P2d 256, 54 St. Rep. 207 (1997).

Attorney General's Opinions

Access to Rivers and Streams Via County Road Right-of-Way and Bridges: Given that the public has the right to use public highways in any manner and for any purpose consistent with or reasonably incidental to public travel, this right includes the use of public rights-of-way created by county roads to gain access to rivers and streams. Using a county road right-of-way as an access point to a river or stream right-of-way is consistent with and reasonably incidental to the public's right to travel on county roads. Further, a bridge and its abutments, as part of a public highway, offer the same access to rivers and streams for recreational use as the highway to which they are attached. However, the public's right of access is not unlimited and is subject to the following limitations: (1) the recreating public must stay within the county road and bridge right-of-way, which is assumed to be 60 feet unless otherwise stated by petition or dedication; (2) access may be limited by the reasonable exercise of a governing body's police power to control the use of roads for purposes such as safety and parking; and (3) use of a public highway may be limited by the manner in which it was created, such as a road created by prescriptive easement, which is limited both in size and usage to the original use during the prescriptive period and may include access for hunting, fishing, and recreation. 48 A.G. Op. 13 (2000).

Municipal Construction of Storm Sewers With Gas Tax Revenues Allowed: A city may use its gas tax allocation to construct streets and highways, and because a highway is defined as including "drainage structures", the city may use its share of gasoline tax allocation for construction of storm sewers and drains in and under city streets for removal of runoff water. 40 A.G. Op. 19 (1983).

Maintenance of Bridge Utilized by the Public but Not Located on a County Road Maintained by the County: Prior to July 1, 1979, by analogy to the definition of "public highway" in 60-1-103, it would appear that a bridge on a road utilized by the public, which was located over a boundary between two counties, would be the common responsibility of the two counties. However, by adding a definition of "public bridges", the 1979 Legislature made it clear that counties are not responsible for maintenance of bridges that are utilized by the public but which are not located in a city or town in the county or on a county road maintained by the county. 38 A.G. Op. 50 (1979).

Forest Service Development Road: Because a United States Forest Service development road is not, by statutory definition, a highway, the provisions of law regarding license plates do not apply to vehicles operated solely on Forest Service development roads. 37 A.G. Op. 9 (1977).

Application of Traffic Laws Upon Forest Service Development Roads: Only the traffic laws regulating parking, moving, safety, and related areas are enforceable by the Highway Patrol and county Sheriffs against vehicles operating on United States Forest Service development roads. 37 A.G. Op. 9 (1977).

Forest Service Development Roads: The laws applicable to vehicle size and weight are enforceable upon highways but not upon Forest Service development roads. This chapter, however, generally extends its jurisdiction over these roads. 37 A.G. Op. 9 (1977).

Classification of Highways

60-1-201. Classification — highways and roads.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 241 in (3) at end inserted "or that have been the subject of a request under 7-14-2622 and for which a legal route has been recognized by a district court as provided in 7-14-2622"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 440 at end of (2) substituted "may be designated as county roads or city streets upon the acceptance of the county or city" for "are county roads or city streets"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 440, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, it has become necessary to clarify the duties of boards of county commissioners regarding roads under their jurisdiction; and

WHEREAS, it is appropriate to specify how the maintenance and oversight of certain roads may be transferred to a county in a manner that protects private property rights and allows the public to participate in the process; and

WHEREAS, clarifying in statute the definition of a county road and the rights and responsibilities of a board of county commissioners will prevent county road-related disputes from entering the court system."

Case Notes

Use of 1999 Version of Statute Rather Than 1997 Version Harmless Error: The Pedersons argued that the lower court erred in using the 1999 version of this section when their complaint had been filed when the 1997 version was in effect. The Supreme Court held that although the lower court used the wrong version, it had recognized that the question of whether or not a county road existed depended on Title 7, ch. 14, and not on this title, which deals primarily with state highways. Therefore, the use of the wrong statutory version by the lower court was harmless error. Pederson v. Dawson County, 2000 MT 339, 303 M 158, 17 P3d 393, 57 St. Rep. 1441 (2000).

Attorney General's Opinions

Access to Rivers and Streams Via County Road Right-of-Way and Bridges: Given that the public has the right to use public highways in any manner and for any purpose consistent with or reasonably incidental to public travel, this right includes the use of public rights-of-way created by county roads to gain access to rivers and streams. Using a county road right-of-way as an access point to a river or stream right-of-way is consistent with and reasonably incidental to the public's right to travel on county roads. Further, a bridge and its abutments, as part of a public highway, offer the same access to rivers and streams for recreational use as the highway to which they are attached. However, the public's right of access is not unlimited and is subject to the following limitations: (1) the recreating public must stay within the county road and bridge right-of-way, which is assumed to be 60 feet unless otherwise stated by petition or dedication; (2) access may be limited by the reasonable exercise of a governing body's police power to control the use of roads for purposes such as safety and parking; and (3) use of a public highway may be limited by the manner in which it was created, such as a road created by prescriptive easement, which is limited both in size and usage to the original use during the prescriptive period and may include access for hunting, fishing, and recreation. 48 A.G. Op. 13 (2000).

CHAPTER 2
STATE ADMINISTRATION

Chapter Case Notes

Highway Not an Attractive Nuisance — Summary Judgment Properly Granted: In an action for the wrongful death of the plaintiff's son which occurred when the decedent was struck by an automobile on a controlled-access highway, the District Court did not err in granting the state's motion for summary judgment. As one of the conditions of declaring an object an attractive nuisance, the plaintiff must prove that children are unable to discover or appreciate the dangerous condition of the object. Because there is nothing in the record to prove that a 5-year-old child would not appreciate the dangerous condition of the highway, the highway cannot be found to be an attractive nuisance. Big Man v. St., 192 M 29, 626 P2d 235, 38 St. Rep. 362 (1981).

Part Case Notes

Federal-Aid Primary Designation — Necessary Prerequisite to Economic Growth Center Designation: Under federal law, a road may not be designated as eligible to receive economic growth center funds unless it has previously been designated as a primary highway. Although the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) had decided the Big Sky spur should be added to the primary system, the road did not meet the requirements of 23 U.S.C. §103. The District Court held that the road had improperly been designated a "primary route". Because the road was not properly a "primary route" it was not eligible to receive economic growth center funds. Nat'l Forest Preserv. Group v. Volpe, 359 F. Supp. 136 (D.C. Mont. 1973).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Highway Commission (Now Transportation Commission), Not Board of County Commissioners, Responsible for Final Determination of Route Selection: Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) is empowered to make final route decision with regard to federal-aid secondary system. The Commission, however, must work with local county officials in evaluating possible alternative routes prior to final determination. 36 A.G. Op. 44 (1975).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 75 inserted (5) providing that the Commission shall establish and determine priorities and projects for rail and transit programs and coordinate intermodal transportation within the state; and inserted (6) providing methodology for carrying out the requirements of this section. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 75, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the department of transportation is required in 60-2-110 to adopt rules to administer statutory provisions that require the transportation commission to establish priorities and select and designate segments for construction and reconstruction on the national highway system, the primary highway system, the secondary highway system, the urban highway system, and state highways; to establish and determine priorities and projects for rail and transit programs; and, to the extent possible, coordinate intermodal transportation within the state. The legislature contemplates that rules promulgated under 60-2-110 address, at a minimum, the criteria and procedures to be followed in establishing priorities and selecting projects."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 87 in (1), at end, substituted "the national highway system, the primary highway system, the secondary highway system, the urban highway system, and state highways" for "federal-aid interstate and federal-aid primary and state highway systems"; inserted (2) requiring Commission consultation with the Board of County Commissioners regarding the secondary highway system; inserted (3) requiring Commission consultation with the appropriate local government authorities regarding the urban highway system; and made minor changes in style.

Interim Study Committee Bill: Chapter 30, L. 1983, was introduced at the request of the Interim Committee on Highways. See committee report, Legislative Council, 1982.

Equitable Relief Available to Correct Inadvertent Bidding Errors in Revising Highway Construction Project: Contractor E.H. Oftedal and Sons, Inc. (Oftedal), submitted a bid on a Montana highway project. Because Oftedal's was the lowest bid, the state awarded the contract to Oftedal, but upon later investigation, Oftedal determined that the bid contained several errors amounting to $789,000, and requested that the bid be withdrawn. The request was denied, so Oftedal requested an upward revision of the bid to reflect the mistakes. Even if the contract amount was revised upward to reflect the errors, Oftedal's bid would still have been lowest. Although the state recognized that Oftedal had made an unintended mistake, the request for upward revision was also denied, in part because the Federal Highway Administration would not allow any federal money to be used to cover any state cost over Oftedal's original bid. To avoid losing its substantial bid bond, Oftedal signed the contract under protest for the original amount and petitioned the District Court for equitable relief under 28-2-1611 through an upward revision of the contract sum. The District Court denied relief and granted summary judgment to the state. Oftedal appealed to the Supreme Court, seeking an upward revision to reflect the amount of the error and an order for specific performance of the revised contract. The Supreme Court found that equitable relief was appropriate because of mistake, and remanded to the District Court with instructions to reform the contract to reflect the true intentions of the parties. The mistakes in this case were inadvertent, and even though some negligence might have been inherent in the mistakes, they could not be said to preclude equitable relief when viewed in light of the parties' agreed assessment of the nature of the errors. Negligence of the party creating the mistake is not necessarily a bar to judicial reformation of a contract. Under 28-2-1612, for the purpose of revising a contract, a court must presume that all parties intended to make an equitable and conscientious agreement, and it could not be presumed that either party intended Oftedal to incur the hardship of supplying $789,000 of work and material to the state without compensation. E.H. Oftedal & Sons, Inc. v. St., 2002 MT 1, 308 M 50, 40 P3d 349 (2002).

Public Contracts Subject to Fundamental Contract Analysis — Public Bidding and Contract Modification Statutes Not Inherently Inconsistent: Public contracts are not necessarily exempt from fundamental contract analysis because competitive bidding statutes were established for the benefit of the public rather than to establish the rights of bidders. Nothing in the competitive bidding statutes places public contracts out of reach of remedies at law or the equitable relief provided under 28-2-1611 if a party is otherwise qualified for relief under the terms of the statute. Further, public bidding statutes and contract modification statutes are not inherently inconsistent, so 28-2-1611 may be applied to public contracts. E.H. Oftedal & Sons, Inc. v. St., 2002 MT 1, 308 M 50, 40 P3d 349 (2002).

Effect of Exculpatory Clause on Quantities Underrun: A highway contractor, in preparing his bids, relied on "borrow" estimates (referring to the amount of dirt secured from adjacent or nearby sources) prepared by the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation). When performing the work, the contractor found the estimates to be high. Clark contended it suffered a loss on the borrow work due to fixed costs and overhead. The state relied on exculpatory clauses in the contract to avoid payment. The Supreme Court found that the exculpatory clauses alone would not overcome Clark's justifiable reliance on the state's estimates. The case was remanded for a new trial. Clark Bros. Contractors v. St., 218 M 490, 710 P2d 41, 42 St. Rep. 1765 (1985).

Wrongful Death Action — Exclusion of Construction Contract Terms Upheld: In a wrongful death action in which the decedent's surviving spouse brought suit against the state and its contractor for negligently failing to warn the decedent of an abrupt edge at the shoulder of a highway construction project, the court properly excluded certain provisions in the contract between the state and the contractor regarding certain traffic control devices mentioned in a payment schedule. Because the question in the case was whether certain devices should have been used, the contract provisions allowing their use were of no probative value and were irrelevant. Workman v. McIntyre Constr. Co., 190 M 5, 617 P2d 1281, 37 St. Rep. 1637 (1980).

Amendment effective April 14, 1999.

Contingent Voidness: Section 3, Ch. 306, L. 1999, provided: "Contingent voidness. (1) If the federal government notifies the state in writing that the enforcement of [this act] places at risk this state's eligibility to receive federal funds for highway projects, then the bracketed language in [this act] is void pursuant to subsection (2).

(2) The bracketed language in [this act] is void on the date that the director of the department of transportation certifies to the governor in writing that the director has received written notice of the federal government's intention to terminate allocation of highway funds to Montana because of the enforcement of [this act]." On April 13, 1999, the federal government notified the state that the provisions of Senate Bill No. 330 (Ch. 306, L. 1999) are contrary to federal highway laws. 1983 Amendment: In (1), increased amount of contract required to be let by bid from $1,000 to $10,000; deleted former (2) and (3), which read: "(2) If the commission finds that the work may be done in some more efficient manner, it need not let the contract by competitive bidding.

(3) If, on highway construction work financed in whole or in part by federal funds, the United States secretary of transportation affirmatively finds that under the circumstances relating to a particular project some method other than competitive bidding is in the public interest, the commission may enter into contracts with a board of county commissioners. These contracts may authorize each county to acquire rights-of-way for, survey, and construct farm-to-market, secondary, or feeder roads within the county by force account, unit price, or otherwise, as may be agreed by the commission and the board."; inserted (2) allowing the Commission to let contracts by means other than competitive bidding under special circumstances; and inserted (3) allowing the Commission to enter into contracts with local governments without competitive bidding, based on lower total costs.

Acceptance of One Asphalt Test Sample Insufficient Proof of Waiver of Right to Apply Contract Specifications: Respondent submitted a bid on a highway construction project and contracted with the state to provide polymer modified asphalt cement (PMAC) according to specifications in the state contract, including satisfaction of the ring-and-ball softening point test. The contract required that asphalt samples be taken at the project site, with each sample representing an asphalt lot. Those samples began to fail the ring-and-ball softening point test almost immediately, so according to the contract terms, reductions were made in payments to respondent to make up for the shorter life expectancy and inferior quality of the asphalt. Respondent disputed the payment reductions on the basis that the state had improperly heated the project test samples to a pouring temperature of 330 degrees F rather than 340 degrees F used during the mix design testing, causing the project samples to fail the test. Citing Kelly v. Lovejoy, 172 M 516, 565 P2d 321 (1977), the District Court held that the state had waived the temperature requirements when it accepted the mix design sample at 340 degrees F and had therefore erroneously assessed price reductions for the samples tested at 330 degrees F. The Supreme Court noted that for the state to waive the right to enforce the contract, the acquiescence must be voluntary and intentional. By accepting one PMAC at 340 degrees F, unlike in Kelly, the state did not voluntarily and intentionally relinquish its right to enforce the contract specifications. Relinquishment may be proved either by express declaration or by a course of acts and conduct so as to induce the belief that the state's intention and purpose were to waive its rights. Evidence failed to show that the one-time acceptance was an intentional relinquishment of the right to enforce the contract specifications, nor was the one-time acceptance a course of conduct sufficient to induce the belief that the state's intention and purpose were to waive the temperature requirement mandated by the ring-and-ball softening point test. The District Court's finding of waiver was incorrect as a matter of law, constituting reversible error. Respondent's claims for breach of contract, fraud, and negligent misrepresentation and a motion for summary judgment were properly denied. Idaho Asphalt Supply v. St., 1999 MT 291, 297 M 66, 991 P2d 434, 56 St. Rep. 1168 (1999).

Department Jurisdiction: District Court erred in granting summary judgment for city upon a special assessment for a sidewalk along combined city and state highway right-of-way where city installed sidewalk after plaintiff refused as Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) has exclusive jurisdiction to let contracts and control construction in or along state highway. Palffy v. Bozeman, 168 M 108, 540 P2d 955 (1975).

Judicial Review of Highway Commission (Now Transportation Commission) Rule: Where Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) conducted investigations and held hearings to determine number of interchanges and their location with respect to new interstate highway and nearby town and agreed that one interchange was sufficient, District Court abused its discretion in issuing Writ of Mandamus ordering Commission to construct two such interchanges, since Commission complied with this section and its decision cannot be disturbed unless clear abuse of discretion is shown. Erie v. St. Highway Comm'n, 154 M 150, 461 P2d 207 (1969), distinguished in St. Highway Comm'n v. Lavoie, 155 M 39, 466 P2d 594 (1970).

Commission Regulations as Evidence: In action for wrongful death of driver of state highway truck while sanding road in snowstorm, it was error to admit into evidence safety manual adopted by Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) and rule requiring that engineers, supervisors, and foremen erect warning devices upon highway before beginning work, since requirement imposed no duty upon deceased driver to erect warning devices. Williams v. Maley, 150 M 261, 434 P2d 398 (1967).

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority to Close Road or Highway: Authority to temporarily close a state highway or county road, due to hazardous conditions, belongs to the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) and each Board of County Commissioners, respectively. Designation of a particular individual having this authority is left to the discretion of the Department and each board. The latter may appoint a county road supervisor or superintendent capable of making this decision. Only in cases of extreme emergency may the Highway Patrol block traffic, and then only temporarily. 37 A.G. Op. 116 (1978).

Highway Commission (Now Transportation Commission), Not Board of County Commissioners, Responsible for Final Determination of Route Selection: Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) is empowered to make final route decision with regard to federal-aid secondary system. The Commission, however, must work with local county officials in evaluating possible alternative routes prior to final determination. 36 A.G. Op. 44 (1975).

Case Notes

Road Maintenance — Nondelegable Duty of Care Precluding Common-Law Indemnity Claim: Comer was fatally injured in a fall on a Butte sidewalk that was within the state highway system, and her estate sued the state and the county. The state sought summary judgment against the county on a common-law indemnity claim, but summary judgment was denied. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 60-2-204, the state is required to maintain all public highways. The county was merely an agent of the state regarding highway maintenance, and federal law provides that it is the duty of the state to maintain projects constructed under the provisions of federal-aid statutes. This statutorily imposed duty curtails the state's ability to abrogate its duty of care through a contract with the county, and the state's statutory duty of care to Comer existed independently of any duties delegated to the county through construction contracts. The state may enter contracts with third parties for the maintenance of sidewalks, but the contracts do not remove the state's nondelegable statutory duty of care. Thus, the state's breach of its independent duty of care precluded the state's common-law indemnity claim, and the state lacked the clean hands necessary to obtain common-law indemnity. Under these circumstances it was also proper to place the state on the verdict form, and because the state bore the majority of responsibility for Comer's accident, the state's cross-claim for common-law indemnity was properly denied. St. v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 2009 MT 414, 353 M 497, 220 P3d 1115 (2009), following State ex rel. Helena v. District Court, 167 M 157, 536 P2d 1182 (1975). See also Rogers v. W. Airlines, 184 M 170, 602 P2d 171 (1979).

No Duty of State to Use Particular Maintenance Equipment: Plaintiffs contended that the state was negligent in using a snowplow rather than a motor patrol to remove hard-packed snow and ice. Although the state does have a duty to exercise ordinary and reasonable care in maintaining Montana highways, there is no legal authority for a separate duty to use a particular piece of equipment in meeting the duty of care in highway maintenance. Hatch v. Dept. of Highways, 269 M 188, 887 P2d 729, 51 St. Rep. 1512 (1994).

Facts Establishing Reasonable Basis for Difference of Opinion on Question of State Highway Maintenance: The following facts rose to the level of substantial evidence required to support a jury verdict that the state was not negligent in maintaining a section of highway: (1) the entire 29-mile section was patrolled during the workweek prior to the accident and was bare and dry when the crew took the weekend off; (2) the method of snow removal on the section was common and practical; (3) at an accident at the same site the previous morning, a highway patrol officer evaluated the curve and decided that although the road was wet, it did not constitute a hazard sufficient to call in the maintenance crew; (4) the acting crew foreman on the day of the accident testified that the highway was not patrolled that day because the weather had warmed up to the point that a patrol was not necessary; and (5) crew members all testified that they had never encountered a situation in which only one curve of the highway was icy while the remainder of the section was bare and dry. Hash v. St., 247 M 497, 807 P2d 1363, 48 St. Rep. 277 (1991), distinguished in Yager v. Deane, 258 M 453, 853 P2d 1214, 50 St. Rep. 610 (1993).

Animal on Highway — Failure to Establish Duty of Highway Employee: Summary judgment was properly granted to the state in a wrongful death action where a motorist was killed after striking a horse on the highway. Plaintiffs cited no authority that a highway maintenance employee had a duty to remove live animals from the roadway or to ensure that animals did not come back onto the highway. Whitfield v. Therriault Corp., 229 M 195, 745 P2d 1126, 44 St. Rep. 1896 (1987), followed in Yager v. Deane, 258 M 453, 853 P2d 1214, 50 St. Rep. 610 (1993).

Highway Death — Sovereign Immunity: The State may not under Montana's Constitution or any law maintain a defense of sovereign immunity against claims arising from death, and there is no such defense as "financial feasibility or discretion" which would relieve the State of liability for traffic deaths resulting from highways maintained unsafely. State ex rel. Byorth v. District Court, 175 M 63, 572 P2d 201 (1977). However, where cost is but one among many factors affecting the state's choice of a particular method of construction or maintenance, it is relevant evidence on the reasonableness of the alternative taken. Townsend v. St., 227 M 206, 738 P2d 1274, 44 St. Rep. 1014 (1987), citing Modrell v. St., 179 M 498, 587 P2d 405 (1978), and followed in Walden v. St., 250 M 132, 818 P2d 1190, 48 St. Rep. 893 (1991). However, see Yager v. Deane, 258 M 453, 853 P2d 1214, 50 St. Rep. 610 (1993).

Authority to Close Road or Highway: Authority to temporarily close a state highway or county road, due to hazardous conditions, belongs to the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) and each Board of County Commissioners, respectively. Case Notes

Road Maintenance — Nondelegable Duty of Care Precluding Common-Law Indemnity Claim: Comer was fatally injured in a fall on a Butte sidewalk that was within the state highway system, and her estate sued the state and the county. The state sought summary judgment against the county on a common-law indemnity claim, but summary judgment was denied. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 60-2-204, the state is required to maintain all public highways. The county was merely an agent of the state regarding highway maintenance, and federal law provides that it is the duty of the state to maintain projects constructed under the provisions of federal-aid statutes. This statutorily imposed duty curtails the state's ability to abrogate its duty of care through a contract with the county, and the state's statutory duty of care to Comer existed independently of any duties delegated to the county through construction contracts. The state may enter contracts with third parties for the maintenance of sidewalks, but the contracts do not remove the state's nondelegable statutory duty of care. Thus, the state's breach of its independent duty of care precluded the state's common-law indemnity claim, and the state lacked the clean hands necessary to obtain common-law indemnity. Under these circumstances it was also proper to place the state on the verdict form, and because the state bore the majority of responsibility for Comer's accident, the state's cross-claim for common-law indemnity was properly denied. St. v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 2009 MT 414, 353 M 497, 220 P3d 1115 (2009), following State ex rel. Helena v. District Court, 167 M 157, 536 P2d 1182 (1975). See also Rogers v. W. As a basis for determination of incompleted mileage, the department shall compare the present condition of the system with the latest approved state standards. Any mileage failing to meet those standards shall be included in the determination as partially completed. The proportion of completion shall be determined by estimating the amount of work which must be performed to complete the highway.

(2) The department shall then compute the ratio between the incompleted mileage in each district and the total incompleted mileage of the federal-aid primary system in the state.

(3) The department shall then apportion available state construction funds to the federal-aid primary system in each district on the basis of the computed ratio."; and inserted (4) limiting receipt of federal-aid primary system funds, limiting apportionment, and requiring redistribution of excess funds.

Case Notes

Federal-Aid Primary Designation — Necessary Prerequisite to Economic Growth Center Designation: Under federal law, a road may not be designated as eligible to receive economic growth center funds unless it has previously been designated as a primary highway. Although the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) had decided the Big Sky spur should be added to the primary system, the road did not meet the requirements of 23 U.S.C. §103. The District Court held that the road had improperly been designated a "primary route".

Because the road was not properly a "primary route" it was not eligible to receive economic growth center funds. Nat'l Forest Preserv. Group v. Volpe, 359 F. Supp. 136 (D.C. Mont. 1973).

(i) The basis for the value of rural lands must be computed from the latest available information from the department of revenue.

(ii) The basis for the value of state-owned lands must be computed from the latest figures on the total grazing, timber, and agricultural lands in each county based on the most recent information available from the department of natural resources and conservation"; inserted (4) regarding voting for purpose of secondary highway capital construction priorities and prohibiting conversion of existing paved secondary highway to graveled surface without concurrence of county commissioners where road located; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 30, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 239 in (3)(a) defining rural population, near beginning, substituted "county population as reported in the latest decennial federal census" for "population" and near end substituted "determined by the department, using the latest decennial federal census" for "reported in the latest federal census" and deleted last sentence that read: "Federal census population figures must be adjusted in the interim between censuses in accordance with the percentage of change in annual motor vehicle registration figures for each county"; in (3)(b)(i) defining rural road mileage, after "cities", inserted "and towns" and after "system" inserted "and those roads that are inside incorporated cities and towns and are functionally classified and approved by the commission as a major collector or a minor arterial, exclusive of road mileage on the primary system and the national highway system"; inserted (3)(b)(ii) regarding road mileage within certain incorporated cities and unincorporated areas; in (3)(c)(i) defining value of rural lands substituted "available information from" for "biennial report of"; in (3)(c)(ii) substituted "based on the most recent information available from the" for "contained in the latest biennial report of the" and at end substituted "natural resources and conservation" for "state lands"; deleted (3)(c)(iii) that read: "(iii) The average value of privately owned lands is the average value of state-owned lands if the actual value is not available"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 87 in (1), in six places, substituted reference to county for reference to financial district and in first sentence, after "apportion", substituted "the federal-aid highway funds allocated" for "available state construction funds" and before "secondary" deleted "federal-aid"; substituted (2) concerning county exceeding obligation apportionment for former language that read: "Funds apportioned to each district shall be further apportioned to each county in the district on the same basis, considering ratios of land area, rural population, rural road mileage, and value of rural lands. To the extent necessary to permit orderly programming and construction of projects, obligations in any county may exceed the amount apportioned to that county to the extent of five times the amount of the last apportionment to the county. The amount of any excess obligations shall be deducted from future apportionments to that county"; in (3)(b), near middle of first sentence before "primary", deleted "federal-aid" and at end substituted "national highway system" for "federal-aid interstate system"; and made minor changes in style.

Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

CHAPTER 4
ACQUISITION AND DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY

Chapter Case Notes

No Intent to Abandon Public Road Despite Reconveyance of Surrounding Property to Private Interests: In 1939 and 1940, the Shelby Country Club conveyed 160 acres of land to the city of Shelby with the understanding that the city would beautify the property as a park and lease it to the country club for a golf course. The city graded a road to the property and maintained Club Road thereafter. When the city could not obtain funds for a park, the property was reconveyed to the country club, and eventually, plaintiff acquired most of the property, while an 11.75-acre parcel was acquired by defendants. Plaintiff sought to have Club Road declared a private road and asked for damages for defendants' use of the road. The city subsequently annexed the road into the city limits and intervened in the suit, along with Toole County, to protect the public interest. The District Court declared Club Road to be a public road, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the District Court relied on section 32-103, R.C.M. 1947, rather than the applicable section 1612, R.C.M. 1921, the fact remained that once Club Road was laid out by the city as a public road and maintained its character through more than 50 years of public use, it remained a public road despite the reconveyance of the surrounding property to private interests, absent any clear intent by the city to abandon it. Smith v. Russell, 2003 MT 326, 318 M 336, 80 P3d 431 (2003).

Public Highway Established Pursuant to 1895 Law — Mere Nonuse by County Not Considered Abandonment —- Inapplicability of Prescriptive Easement and Reverse Adverse Possession: The District Court found that the Tucker Gulch Road was clearly defined and in use by the public for at least 27 years prior to enactment of sec. 2600, The Codes and Statutes of Montana (1895), which declared all highways and roads then used by the public as public highways. However, the court went on to hold that it was not a petitioned county road and that there was a prescriptive easement by the public over the road that had been lost through abandonment and by reverse adverse possession when a new road was relocated near the old one. The District Court properly found that Tucker Gulch Road was a public highway; however, mere nonuse or lack of maintenance by the county was insufficient to indicate a clear intent to abandon the road without notice and a public hearing. Moreover, the county's failure to respond to several quiet title actions in which the county was not served and the county's adoption of a resolution naming the road did not indicate an intent to abandon. Abandonment cannot be established by mere implication. The Supreme Court cited Baertsch v. Lewis & Clark County, 256 M 114, 845 P2d 106 (1992), for the general rule that title to a public road may not be obtained by adverse possession. The Supreme Court also cited Granite County v. Komberec, 245 M 252, 800 P2d 166 (1990), and affirmed the District Court's finding that there was not a public prescriptive easement along the relocated new road because most of the nonpermissive use of the new road was by occasional recreationists. The District Court's conclusion that creation of the easement was not specific and that the easements were designed for the access of the owners for activities associated with residential living was in error, however, absent evidence in the access agreement or survey establishing such a restriction. Thus, the grant of unrestricted access to landowners who had owned a mine adjoining the property in question was not in error. McCauley v. Thompson-Nistler, 2000 MT 215, 301 M 81, 10 P3d 794, 57 St. Rep. 855 (2000), distinguishing Pub. Lands Access Ass'n, Inc. v. Boone & Crockett Club Foundation, Inc., 259 M 279, 856 P2d 525 (1993), and followed in Lee v. Musselshell County, 2004 MT 64, 320 M 294, 87 P3d 423 (2004).

Establishment of Public Highway Under United States Revised Statutes Section 2477 — Use Alone Insufficient Under State Law — State Declaration of Existence of Public Highways Inapplicable: The Richters brought an action in District Court to condemn an easement across the land of a neighbor that surrounded their property on three sides, claiming that a public highway had been established, pursuant to United States Revised Statutes section 2477 (R.S. 2477), across public land before that land ultimately passed to their neighbor. The Supreme Court reviewed the purpose of R.S. 2477, as described in Butte v. Mikosowitz, 39 M 350, 102 P 593 (1909), and noted that it had earlier held in St. v. Nolan, 58 M 167, 191 P 150 (1920), that R.S. 2477, later codified as 43 U.S.C. 932, was only an offer by the United States to convey land but that state law determined how that offer was accepted and, in that case, held that at that time there were four ways in which a public highway could be established under Montana law. The Supreme Court then reviewed the history of the Montana statutes governing how the R.S. 2477 offer was accepted by the state and pointed out that in 1895, section 2603 of the Political Code of Montana was adopted providing that use alone was insufficient to establish a public road over private land, although section 2603 was amended in 1913 to delete the prohibition against creating a public highway by use alone. Therefore, between 1895 and 1913, a public road could be established by use only if public authorities with jurisdiction over the property on which the road was claimed took an act tantamount to a declaration that a particular road was a public road. Because the Richters presented no evidence that the County Commissioners with jurisdiction over the road that they claimed to exist upon their neighbor's property had taken any action to declare that road to be a public highway, the Supreme Court held that as a matter of law, the Richters' evidence of use alone was insufficient to establish a public right-of-way upon that land between 1903 and 1907. The Supreme Court also held that section 2600, Political Code of Montana, enacted in 1895, declaring that highways used by the public are public highways, did not create a public highway across what became their neighbor's property because that statute applied only to existing uses at the time of the statute's enactment and Richters' evidence did not demonstrate any use of the road until 1902. Richter v. Rose, 1998 MT 165, 289 M 379, 962 P2d 583, 55 St. Rep. 663 (1998). See also McCauley v. Thompson-Nistler, 2000 MT 215, 301 M 81, 10 P3d 794, 57 St. Rep. 855 (2000), and Watson v. Dundas, 2006 MT 104, 332 M 164, 136 P3d 973 (2006).

Evidence Insufficient to Prove Common-Law Dedication of Public Right-of-Way Across Private Property: The Richters brought an action in District Court to condemn an easement across the land of a neighbor that surrounded their property on three sides, claiming that a public highway had been established across what became their neighbor's land after the United States had sold the property to its first private owner. The Supreme Court noted that it had previously held in Kaufman v. Butte, 48 M 400, 138 P 770 (1914), that Montana law required that both an offer by the owner of the land evidencing the owner's intent to dedicate the land for a public right-of-way and an acceptance of that offer by the public had to be demonstrated to prove a common-law easement. Distinguishing McKey v. Hyde Park, 134 US 84 (1890), the Supreme Court held that because the Richters presented no evidence that the first private owner of the land took any action demonstrating an intent to dedicate a public right-of-way across her property, the Richters failed to prove the existence of that right-of-way. Richter v. Rose, 1998 MT 165, 289 M 379, 962 P2d 583, 55 St. Rep. 663 (1998).

Case Notes

Eminent Domain — Highway Interchange and Visitor Center Public Use — Chamber of Commerce Building Not: The state attempted to condemn an 8.72-acre parcel to build a highway interchange and visitor center. Forty percent of the proposed building was to be used by the local Chamber of Commerce, a private, nonprofit organization. The District Court held that the highway interchange and visitor center are public purposes and that the state had lawfully exercised its power of eminent domain as to the entire 8.72-acre parcel but that the Chamber of Commerce could not be a part of the planned highway interchange building complex. Property owners appealed on the grounds that by including the Chamber in the plans, the entire taking is unlawful. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not err in severing the Chamber's participation in the building plan and granting the condemnation order because the Chamber's presence was not a part of the request for condemnation. Bozeman v. Vaniman, 271 M 514, 898 P2d 1208, 52 St. Rep. 543 (1995).

Market Value of Condemned Land: Where Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) condemned land for purposes of gaining an easement for the construction and maintenance of a state highway and not for obtaining a deposit of gravel, sand, and other materials on the land, testimony as to the value of such materials was inadmissible as speculative, remote, and conjectural and not within the purpose of section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104). St. Highway Comm'n v. Mott, 142 M 402, 384 P2d 922 (1963).

Railroad Right-of-Way: Section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), permitted the State to condemn land in order to provide right-of-way for a railroad being moved to allow construction of public highways. State ex rel. De Puy v. District Court, 142 M 328, 384 P2d 501 (1963).

Rental of Unused Right-of-Way: The 1961 amendment of section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), so as to give express authority for the rental of unused right-of-way rendered moot a taxpayer's action to restrain the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) from granting an encroachment permit, where there was no indication that the permit when granted, would violate the terms of the statutory amendment. Wilson v. St. Highway Comm'n, 140 M 253, 370 P2d 486 (1962).

Transfer of Land:

Any manner of transferring unused highway right-of-way that was inconsistent with section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), was by implication excluded. Wilson v. St. Highway Comm'n, 140 M 253, 370 P2d 486 (1962).

Under section 32-1615, R.C.M 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), the State Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) could not give away or loan gratuitously the use of an unused highway right-of-way. Wilson v. St. Highway Comm'n, 140 M 253, 370 P2d 486 (1962).

Exercise of Eminent Domain Power: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) was the only tribunal authorized to relocate state highways through the power of eminent domain. A public utility could not condemn land for a right-of-way for the relocation of a highway which was necessitated by the fact that the then present highway would be affected by the construction of a dam for which the utility was using the eminent domain power. State ex rel. Bartholomew v. District Court, 126 M 183, 248 P2d 215 (1952).

Selection of Routes Discretionary: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), where a particular route was chosen by the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) as a highway, it was within its discretion to decide which segment or portion thereof should be first constructed, and the mere fact that such portion ran through a sparsely settled area and would in itself benefit but few persons did not authorize the courts to enjoin its construction on the ground that cost thereof would constitute a wanton waste of money. State ex rel. St. Highway Comm'n v. District Court, 107 M 126, 81 P2d 347 (1938).

Inability to Purchase: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), where the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) sought to condemn lands for highway purposes, in order to invoke the jurisdiction of the court, it must allege in its complaint that it has been unable to acquire the right-of-way desired by purchase. St. v. Whitcomb, 94 M 415, 22 P2d 823 (1933).

Necessity for Taking Land: The requirement of section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), that land sought to be condemned for highway purposes had to be "necessary" does not mean an absolute necessity for the particular location but means reasonably requisite for the accomplishment of the end in view, under the circumstances of the case. St. v. Whitcomb, 94 M 415, 22 P2d 823 (1933).

Public Good Versus Injury to Landowner: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), where the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) selected a particular route for a highway, a landowner whose land was sought to be condemned for right-of-way could not be heard to say that a different one could have been selected; solution of the question of necessity involved consideration of the questions of the greatest good to the public and the least injury to the owner whose property was sought to be taken. St. v. Whitcomb, 94 M 415, 22 P2d 823 (1933).

Eminent Domain Exercised Upon Direction of Commission: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), the right to obtain a right-of-way for a state highway by the exercise of condemnation proceedings was lodged exclusively with the State Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission), the right to be exercised in the name of the state upon direction by the Commission to the Attorney General or a County Attorney. State ex rel. McMaster v. District Court, 80 M 228, 260 P 134 (1927).

Case Notes

Department Failure to Consider Alternate Routes — Condemnation Order Reversed: After being asked in 1975 by the county to improve a road, the State Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) had surveyed and located a proposed route by 1978. Prior to its choice of a proposed route, the Department had met informally with the Department of State Lands (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) because a portion of the route bordered on school trust lands. The Department of State Lands (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) was planning the installation of pivot sprinkler irrigation systems on the land. Although no record of the meeting exists, apparently both Departments were satisfied that the proposed highway would not interfere with the proposed irrigation development. In 1981, Standley Brothers entered into a lease of the school trust land, and the Department began negotiations with them to acquire a portion of their leasehold interest. Upon learning that the proposed route would interfere with the irrigation system, Standley Brothers asked for the route to be moved. The Department assessed the cost of a change in route, decided not to change it, and brought a successful condemnation action in District Court. The Supreme Court reversed because the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) had violated 60-4-104 and 70-30-110 by failing to consider the possibility of alternate routes reasonably equal in terms of public good that would reduce private injury. The court directed the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation), in its reconsideration, to take into account only actual construction costs of the alternate route, not those costs created by the failure to consider an alternate route in the first place. State ex rel. Dept. of Highways v. Standley Bros., 215 M 475, 699 P2d 60, 42 St. Rep. 563 (1985).

Interpretation of "Necessary": When the evidence presented at trial indicated that the proposed location of an improved road was the shortest, most direct, and least expensive route consistent with the design objectives, the District Court properly found that the interest sought by the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) was necessary for the improvement. The word "necessary" in this statute does not mean an absolute or indispensable necessity but rather a reasonable, requisite, and proper means to accomplish the improvement. State ex rel. Dept. of Highways v. Standley Bros., 215 M 475, 699 P2d 60, 42 St. Rep. 563 (1985).

Possible Alternative Route: A disputable presumption, established by Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) resolution of public interest and necessity, was not overcome by evidence that a possible alternative route might have been selected. Dept. of Highways v. Higgins, 166 M 90, 530 P2d 776 (1975).

Substantial Evidence Supporting Choice of Route: When the sole controverting evidence rebutting the presumption of this section was that of the landowner and the statutory presumption was buttressed by the testimony of a district ranger who testified that routing a highway through public lands would cause injury to the public lands, there was substantial evidence supporting the choice of the proposed route. Dept. of Highways v. Higgins, 166 M 90, 530 P2d 776 (1975).

Burden of Proof:

In order to attack the presumption raised by a resolution of public interest and necessity for condemnation of a strip of land without providing for a livestock underpass, landowner must introduce evidence as to the amount of his damages if the land is taken without building an underpass. St. Highway Comm'n v. Parini, 159 M 248, 496 P2d 1140 (1972).

Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), where Commission condemned defendant's land to build bypass through it rather than reconstruct highway through town, it became incumbent upon the defendant to show fraud, abuse of discretion, or arbitrary action in order to defeat the Commission's action, whereas the Commission had only to establish that the taking of the property was reasonably necessary for rebuilding the highway. St. Highway Comm'n v. Crossen-Nissen Co., 145 M 251, 400 P2d 283 (1965), distinguished in St. Highway Comm'n v. Lavoie, 155 M 39, 466 P2d 594 (1970).

Judicial Interference: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), it was not within the province of the judicial branch of government to interfere with the exercise of eminent domain in the absence of clear and convincing evidence of arbitrariness or abuse of discretion by Commission. St. Highway Comm'n v. Crossen-Nissen Co., 145 M 251, 400 P2d 283 (1965), distinguished in St. Highway Comm'n v. Lavoie, 155 M 39, 466 P2d 594 (1970).

Power to Condemn: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), the power of eminent domain was vested exclusively in the Legislature and could be exercised only by the Legislature and those agencies to whom it delegated the power. St. Highway Comm'n v. Crossen-Nissen Co., 145 M 251, 400 P2d 283 (1965).

Selection of Route: Under section 32-1615, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-103 and 60-4-104), the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) did not abuse its discretion in taking farm land by eminent domain even though it was shown that town through which old highway had passed would be financially harmed and bypass would cost more to build, since the resulting savings in travel costs to highway users, in addition to the compensation paid the petitioners, offset disadvantages claimed by them. St. Highway Comm'n v. Crossen-Nissen Co., 145 M 251, 400 P2d 283 (1965), distinguished in St. Highway Comm'n v. Lavoie, 155 M 39, 466 P2d 594 (1970).

60-4-105. Acquisition of whole parcel — sale of excess.

Case Notes

Amount of Property Which May Be Taken: Trial court did not exceed powers under statute when it limited amount of property sought to be appropriated by state to that portion of property actually needed for proposed highway improvement because question whether public interest required taking of entire parcel was question of fact to be determined by court; preliminary order of court limiting amount of appropriation to that actually required for construction of city street improvements was supported by evidence that excess land retained some value as separate parcel notwithstanding Commission's argument that remaining land was financial remnant of such value as to be of little market value and give rise to claims over severance and other damages. St. Highway Comm'n v. Chapman, 152 M 79, 446 P2d 709 (1968).

60-4-109. Irrigable lands rendered unusable — unpaid construction costs.

Case Notes

Cost of Future Operation and Maintenance: Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) is not obligated to pay irrigation district for future cost of operation and maintenance attributable to lands taken within irrigation district for highway purposes since lands taken will not continue to benefit from services of irrigation district, notwithstanding fact that takings have reduced total irrigable acreage of district and thereby increased per acre cost of operation and maintenance of district. Helena Valley Irrigation District v. St. Highway Comm'n, 150 M 192, 433 P2d 791 (1967).

60-4-111. Acquisition of property for controlled-access facility.

Case Notes

Judicial Determination of Necessity: The power to determine the public necessity of a proposed highway or controlled access facility remains with the trial judge. St. Highway Comm'n v. Yost Farm Co., 142 M 239, 384 P2d 277 (1963).

Part 2
Disposition of Property

Part Compiler's Comments

Transfer of Highway Property to Yellowstone County — Section Not Codified: Section 1, Ch. 307, L. 1989, directed the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) to transfer its interest in certain property in Yellowstone County to the County of Yellowstone, City of Billings, or ZooMontana, Inc., a corporation, for development of a zoo, botanical gardens, and related facilities, effective March 24, 1989. Because the provisions of Title 60, ch. 4, part 2, specifically did not apply to the transfer, Ch. 307 was not codified by the Code Commissioner. See Ch. 307, L. 1989, for the full text.

Part Case Notes

"Successor in Interest": The Highway Department's (now Department of Transportation's) interpretation of "successor in interest" as the adjacent landowner whose chain of title can be traced to the original owner of the entire tract was upheld as a reasonable administrative interpretation of 60-4-204 (now repealed). St. v. Midland Materials Co., 204 M 65, 662 P2d 1322, 40 St. Rep. 666 (1983).

Statute in Existence at Date of Disposition as Controlling: The Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) obtained property in 1944 from the plaintiffs and disposed of it in 1978 without giving notice to the plaintiffs as required by 60-4-201. The issue on appeal was whether the Department had to comply with procedures for exchanging property contained in a 1959 amendment to section 32-1616, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1965 and replaced in substance by 60-4-201 through 60-4-205). The Department argues that to require it to comply with the 1959 amendment amounts to a retroactive application of the statute. The Supreme Court stated that application of statutes that modify the procedure for exercising a vested right or carrying out a duty does not constitute retroactive legislation. The 1959 amendment only changes the procedure the Department must follow in disposing of property. The underlying right claimed by the Department has not been impaired, nor have additional duties been imposed on the Department. To apply the 1959 amendment to the property in question does not make the legislation retroactive. Castles v. Dept. of Highways, 187 M 356, 609 P2d 1223 (1980).

Sale Without Authority: Because it holds land in public trust and it failed to comply with statutory requirements for land sales, the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) was without authority to make the sale of land. The deed derived from the sale without authority was held void. Therefore, the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) cannot be estopped from denying the validity of the deed. Norman v. St., 182 M 439, 597 P2d 715 (1979).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Highway Right-of-Way — Abandonment vs. Sale — Funds Held in Trust: The Code provisions regarding abandonment are to be followed when the Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) relinquishes a right-of-way easement. Under the facts giving rise to this opinion the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) received $1.8 million from the Anaconda Company to be used for alternative traffic facilities upon abandonment of the right-of-way. The Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) has authority to hold such funds in trust for Butte-Silver Bow. 38 A.G. Op. 57 (1979).

60-4-201. Exchange of interest in real property.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 342 inserted (3) authorizing department to exchange public rights-of-way with municipality or county in return for municipality or county assuming full maintenance authority and requiring roadway to be operated for public transportation purposes. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 226 in (1) in second sentence at beginning inserted exception clause; in (2) at beginning of first sentence inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 279 deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The owner from whom the interest was originally acquired by the state or his successor in interest has the right to require the department to offer the land for sale in the manner set forth in 60-4-202 and 60-4-203. The department shall notify the owner or successor in interest of its intention to exchange the interest. The owner shall make his demand for sale by registered or certified mail to the department within 10 days after receipt of notice from the department"; inserted (2) regarding exchange and sale by department of state's interest in excess land; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Case Notes

"Successor in Interest": The Highway Department's (now Department of Transportation's) interpretation of "successor in interest" in former subsection (2) of this section as the adjacent landowner whose chain of title can be traced to the original owner of the entire tract was upheld as a reasonable administrative interpretation of the statute. St. v. Midland Materials Co., 204 M 65, 662 P2d 1322, 40 St. Rep. 666 (1983).

60-4-202. Sale of interest in real property.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 226 in (1) in second sentence near beginning after "provided in" inserted "60-4-213 through 60-4-218 and"; in (3) at beginning of first sentence inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 279 in (1) in second sentence at beginning inserted exception clause and near middle increased minimum value of property for mandatory sale by auction from $2,500 to $10,000; inserted (2) regarding sale without auction; inserted (3) regarding notification to landowners before sale of interest in real property; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 232 in first sentence, after "real property", deleted "however acquired by it", in second sentence increased amount to "$2,500" from "$100", and in last sentence inserted "of an interest at auction"; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "or by sealed bids as the department decides" after "public auction" in the second sentence; substituted "77-2-321" for "60-4-203" in the last sentence.

Case Notes

Easement: Easement granting state right to use property adjoining highway as public park was not such an "interest in real property" as to require public sale of park area upon abandonment of highway and park area; quitclaim deed reconveying state's interest to fee holder was valid. Park County Rod & Gun Club v. Dept. of Highways, 163 M 372, 517 P2d 352 (1973).

60-4-203. Conduct of sale.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 232 in (2) increased amount to "$2,500" from "$100"; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Increased the publication period in (1) from 2 to 4 weeks; inserted the second sentence in (1) referencing required information in the notice of sale; deleted "unless the department finds it impractical, in which case the sale shall be held at the office of the department" at the end of (1).

Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

60-4-208. Abandonment or vacation of federal-aid or state highways.

Case Notes

Public Easement Not Extinguished by Nonuse: A public roadway does not cease to exist as a public roadway, nor is a public easement extinguished, by mere nonuse. Bridger v. Part 4
Relocation of Utilities

Part Case Notes

City as Public Utility — Cost of Relocating — "Taking" — Local Self-Government: A city acting in its proprietary capacity as an operator of water, sewer, and lighting facilities is a public utility; therefore, Title 60, ch. 4, part 4, applies. The city must pay 25% of the costs of relocating its water, sewer, and light systems incurred as a result of the Broadway Avenue-Federal Aid Urban System project. Necessary relocation of municipally owned utility systems is not a taking of private property requiring just compensation. The doctrine of local self-government does not prevent the application of 60-4-403 as an unconstitutionally imposed tax or compelled incurrence of debt. St. v. Helena, 193 M 441, 632 P2d 332, 38 St. Rep. 1283 (1981).

60-4-401. Relocation — definitions.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 324 in introductory clause substituted "this part, unless otherwise indicated" for "the sections relating to relocation of utilities facilities"; in definition of cost of relocation, in (a), substituted "means the amount" for "includes the entire amount" and inserted "for material, labor, and equipment" and inserted (b) stating what cost of relocation does not mean; inserted definitions of facility and state highway; in definition of federal-aid systems, after "includes the", inserted "following, as defined in 60-2-125"; and deleted definition of interstate system that read: ""Interstate system" includes any highway now included or which may hereafter be included as a part of the national system of interstate and defense highways provided for in Title 23, U.S.C." Amendment effective April 21, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 231 substituted (3)(a) through (3)(d) concerning components of federal-aid systems for "federal-aid primary system, the federal-aid secondary system, the federal-aid interstate system, and urban extensions of all of them"; and made minor changes in style.

60-4-402. Relocation of utility facilities — rules.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 324 at beginning substituted "Except as provided in 60-4-403(2) and (3)" for "After appropriate hearings", substituted "rules" for "regulations", inserted "reimbursement to a utility for the costs of", and at end substituted "facilities" for "tracks, pipes, mains, conduits, cables, wires, towers, poles, and other equipment and appliances (hereafter called "facilities") of a utility in, on, along, over, across, through, or under a project on any federal-aid systems"; deleted (2) requiring Department notice to all concerned of the place and time of a public hearing to determine necessity of a relocation of facilities; and deleted (3) providing that after the hearing, the Department could determine that the facilities must be relocated and if it did, the utility had to relocate them in accordance with the Department's order and could maintain and operate the relocated facility in the new location. Amendment effective April 21, 1997.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 324, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it allows the department of transportation to modify rules to reflect changes in its reimbursement responsibilities to utilities for facility relocation. The legislature intends that the department's rules address the changes in the definition of "cost of relocation", the removal of the hearing process, and the full reimbursement of costs associated with relocating small publicly owned water and sewer utilities."

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 324 in (1) inserted "Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3)" and after "of all costs of relocation" deleted "including the costs of acquisition of new right-of-way, of"; inserted (2) stating the conditions under which the Department shall pay the entire cost of relocating a publicly owned facility with 500 or fewer service connectors; inserted (3) stating the conditions under which the Department shall pay for 85% of the cost of relocating a publicly owned facility with between 500 and 1,000 service connectors; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 231 near end substituted "federal-aid systems" for "highway"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Relocation Requirement Met — Reimbursement Appropriate: This section does not list any prerequisites for payment of relocation costs. It does not contemplate, mention, or refer to federal or state ownership of the highway. It does not require that the utility own, rent, or lease the land. It does not require that the state and the utility company have a written contract specifying payment provisions. The only requirement before 75% of relocation costs must be paid by the state is that a utility company relocate its facilities in order for the state to further highway construction. N. Lights, Inc. v. St., 265 M 47, 874 P2d 6, 51 St. Rep. 394 (1994).

CHAPTER 5
CONTROL OF ACCESS AND INFORMATION SIGNS

Chapter Case Notes

Highway Not an Attractive Nuisance — Summary Judgment Properly Granted: In an action for the wrongful death of the plaintiff's son which occurred when the decedent was struck by an automobile on a controlled-access highway, the District Court did not err in granting the state's motion for summary judgment. As one of the conditions of declaring an object an attractive nuisance, the plaintiff must prove that children are unable to discover or appreciate the dangerous condition of the object. Because there is nothing in the record to prove that a 5-year-old child would not appreciate the dangerous condition of the highway, the highway cannot be found to be an attractive nuisance. Big Man v. St., 192 M 29, 626 P2d 235, 38 St. Rep. 362 (1981), followed in Yager v. Deane, 258 M 453, 853 P2d 1214, 50 St. Rep. 610 (1993).

Part 1
Control of Access

60-5-101. Policy.

Case Notes

No Duty to Maintain Right-of-Way Fence — Summary Judgment Properly Granted: In an action for the wrongful death of the plaintiff's son which occurred when the decedent was struck by an automobile on a controlled-access highway, the District Court did not err in its conclusion that the state had no duty to maintain a right-of-way fence in a condition to bar pedestrian access to the highway. As there is no law requiring the state to erect a fence in the first instance, there can be no liability for alleged negligent maintenance of the fence. There is no policy of the law requiring the state to ensure the safety of pedestrians who intentionally enter upon a roadway. Big Man v. St., 192 M 29, 626 P2d 235, 38 St. Rep. 362 (1981), followed in Yager v. Deane, 258 M 453, 853 P2d 1214, 50 St. Rep. 610 (1993).

1991 Amendment: Substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Case Notes

No Dispute Regarding Dangerous Road — Evidence That Highway Signs Erected Following Accident Properly Excluded: The trial court granted the state's motion in limine to exclude evidence of highway signs erected at a frontage road accident scene following the accident unless the evidence was offered to rebut or refute evidence that the state did not consider the accident site to be dangerous. Larson contended that the absence of signs established the roadway's danger and partially vitiated his negligence. The Supreme Court held that granting the motion in limine was not an abuse of discretion. The state conceded that the road was dangerous, and excluding the signs as evidence did not preclude Larson from fully presenting his theory that the road was dangerous, so evidence of signs erected subsequent to the accident would only have substantiated proof already offered at trial. 2003 Amendment: Chapter 168 in exception clause in (1) inserted "and subsection (2) of this section", after "owned" inserted "or leased", and at end substituted "controlled-access facility" for "facility or on any publicly leased land used in connection therewith"; inserted (2) allowing department to install or allow installation of electronic communication equipment and electronic informational kiosks on right-of-way and to charge fee for use of equipment or kiosk and requiring deposit of fees in nonrestricted state special revenue account for highway purposes; and made minor changes in style. 1989 Amendment: At beginning inserted exception clause. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Case Notes

Condemnation Including Private Offices — Evidence to Be Considered — Due Process of Law: The state condemned part of the Vanimans' land for a highway interchange, rest area, and visitor center. The city of Bozeman, which funded part of the project, agreed with the Bozeman Chamber of Commerce that the Chamber would locate its corporate offices in the visitor center. The Vanimans objected to the condemnation as not being for a public purpose. The Supreme Court held that the District Court erred when it failed to consider evidence showing that the Bozeman Chamber of Commerce intended to locate its corporate offices in the proposed visitor center and that this failure constituted a denial of due process of law. Bozeman v. Vaniman, 264 M 76, 869 P2d 790, 51 St. Rep. 154 (1994).

Information Signs

Part Compiler's Comments

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 537, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 15] [60-5-503] grants the department of highways [now department of transportation] authority to adopt rules to implement the provisions of [this act].

It is the intent of the legislature that the department have discretion to adopt rules that will result in a motorist information sign program that will aid the traveling public in locating gas, food, lodging, camping, recreation, and other tourist services that are conveniently accessible from the interstate and primary highways within the state. Such rules should supplement and interpret the provisions of [this act].

In adopting rules, the department should develop a policy for installation of motorist information signs. At a minimum, this policy should include criteria for:

(1) standards of service for business eligibility for placement of a logo sign;

(2) distances to eligible services;

(3) selection of eligible businesses for motorist information signing;

(4) location of motorist information signs at interchanges or intersections, in accordance with federal standards;

(5) standards for the size, design, installation, and maintenance of motorist information signs; and

(6) the costs to businesses for installation, annual maintenance, and repair of business signs.

It is intended that the department establish service eligibility requirements with the knowledge that in the rural vastness of this state it is important for a traveler to obtain information about available services, even if the full range of services contemplated by federal guidelines is not available. The department may provide a method for the substitution or replacement of services that are not available at a location, and it may establish some method of signing to indicate to the traveler that a particular service category is not available at the signed businesses.

It is intended that the department may require additional terms and conditions relating to issuance of a franchise for operation of the motorist information sign program. Such additional requirements may relate to termination of a franchise agreement and to the posting of a contractor's bond for sign construction and maintenance.

Finally, the department should consider the success of the motorist information sign programs established in the states of Idaho and Washington and the logo sign franchise program established in the state of Minnesota."

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 204 at beginning of first sentence of (1) inserted exception clause and near middle of sentence substituted "a primary or secondary highway or a county road or bridge" for "the state highway system"; in first sentence of (2) before "fence" inserted "right-of-way" and substituted "the high-hazard areas where fencing is warranted" for "every high-hazard area" and at beginning of second sentence inserted "Even if a right-of-way fence is determined to be unwarranted pursuant to subsection (3)" and after "necessary" inserted "to enhance safety and"; inserted (3) concerning fencing along a secondary highway through open range that passes through a county park"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Sections Not Codified: Sections 32-2427 and 32-2428, R.C.M. 1947, were not codified in the MCA because they were of temporary importance. These sections have not been repealed and are still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 2, Ch. 311, L. 1969, as amended by sec. 92, Ch. 316, L. 1974, and sec. 4, Ch. 255, L. 1974.

Case Notes

When No Duty to Construct Fence: Where section of federal-aid primary highway on which appellant collided with cattle had been neither constructed nor reconstructed after July 1, 1969, and had not been classified a "high-hazard area", the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) had no statutory duty to construct fence or livestock control devices and was properly dismissed as a defendant. 1995 Amendment — Phrase Change: Section 6, Ch. 75, L. 1995, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in the MCA to Highway Commission to Transportation Commission. In this section, the Code Commissioner has made the change in (1) and (2). Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Case Notes

Open-Range No Duty Rule — Applies Only to Relationship Between Livestock Owner and Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. The Supreme Court stated that open-range laws allow certain livestock to legally occupy a highway but that state laws also permit a motorist to legally occupy the same highway. There is no statute that provides that a livestock owner is not liable for injuries suffered by motorists colliding with the livestock owner's livestock. Therefore, the Supreme Court stated that any assertion of legal duties arising from the legal relationship between owners of livestock and motorists is beyond the scope of Montana's statutory open-range doctrine. The Supreme Court held that because both livestock and a motorist may have an equal right to lawfully occupy a highway, the livestock owner and the motorist each owe the other a legal duty to use the highway so as not to injuriously interfere with the other's right of use. Therefore, ascertaining the precise standard of care that each owes the other must be viewed in light of the circumstances under which the harm occurs. The Supreme Court reversed the directed verdict in favor of the defendants and remanded the case for a determination by the trier of fact to determine if the bull's owners had violated their duty of care to Larson-Murphy. (See 27-1-724 enacted in 2001.) Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Open-Range No Duty Rule Not Applicable to Legal Relationship Between Livestock Owners and Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. The Supreme Court held that the no duty rule under the open-range doctrine does not apply to the legal relationship between livestock owners and motorists. However, the law of the open range remains the law of the state, and the term "open range" includes all highways outside of private enclosures used by the public unless modified by the Legislature. (See 27-1-724 enacted in 2001.) Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Absence of Proof of Open Range or Fenced Highway — Directed Verdict Improper: Indendi hit a horse on Highway 84, killing the animal, sustaining personal injuries, and totaling her vehicle. She alleged negligence on the part of the horse owner as well as violations of fencing and livestock herding laws and open-range exceptions. The horse owner counterclaimed for loss of the horse. The District Court directed a verdict in favor of the horse owner. A directed verdict may be granted only when it appears that the nonmoving party cannot recover on any view of the evidence, including the legitimate inferences drawn from that evidence. Absent proof that the land was open range and that Highway 84 was a fenced highway, it was improper for the court to direct a verdict premised on the horse owner's satisfaction of the duty exclusion in 60-7-202(2). Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085, 52 St. Rep. 644 (1995), following Ambrogini v. Todd, 197 M 111, 642 P2d 1013 (1982).

Horse on County Highway — No Duty to Motorists — Open Range Doctrine Not Changed: Plaintiff sued for injuries she received when a horse ran onto a county highway located within a herd district. The lower court granted defendants summary judgment on the basis that the livestock owners owed no duty to the plaintiff as a matter of law. The Supreme Court affirmed. The herd district statutes were designed only to protect other landowners and thus were not exceptions to the open-range doctrine. The herd district statutes were not designed to protect motorists, but were only intended to protect landowners and owners of livestock. Williams v. Selstad, 235 M 137, 766 P2d 247, 45 St. Rep. 2254 (1988), overruled, to the extent that Selstad holds that the open-range no duty rule applies to the legal relationship between livestock owners and motorists, in Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000) (see 27-1-724 enacted in 2001).

Animal on Highway — Failure to Establish Duty of Highway Employee: Summary judgment was properly granted to the state in a wrongful death action where a motorist was killed after striking a horse on the highway. Plaintiffs cited no authority that a highway maintenance employee had a duty to remove live animals from the roadway or to ensure that animals did not come back onto the highway. Whitfield v. Therriault Corp., 229 M 195, 745 P2d 1126, 44 St. Rep. 1896 (1987), followed in Yager v. Deane, 258 M 453, 853 P2d 1214, 50 St. Rep. 610 (1993).

Open Range — Question of Law: The plaintiff sued the defendant for injuries she suffered when she swerved to avoid defendant's horse that was standing on a secondary highway. The District Court granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Neither the presence of privately constructed fences nor the lack of designation in zoning regulations indicates an area is not open range. Open range designation is a legal determination, not a question of fact for the jury. The defendant was not obligated to keep his livestock off the secondary highway, and the order of the District Court granting summary judgment was not error. Siegfried v. Atchison, 219 M 14, 709 P2d 1006, 42 St. Rep. 1807 (1985).

Erosion of Open Range Law: Generally, an open range designation implies that an owner is not liable for his wandering livestock. Prior to 1974, a rancher was liable only for willful failure to keep his livestock off a federal-aid primary highway. However, with the 1974 amendment of 60-7-201, ranchers are now liable for negligent conduct that results in the presence of their cattle on the rights-of-way of such highways. Ambrogini v. Todd, 197 M 111, 642 P2d 1013, 39 St. Rep. 400 (1982).

Liability Not Absolute: As amended in 1974, under this section liability of a person whose cattle are on a federal-aid primary highway is not absolute but is based on the negligence of the owner in permitting them to be there. Where the owner is not excluded by 60-7-202 from the application of this section, the existence of negligence is for the trier of fact to decide. Ambrogini v. Todd, 197 M 111, 642 P2d 1013, 39 St. Rep. 400 (1982).

Case Notes

Res Ipsa Loquitur Inapplicable to Statute: This section eliminates any presumptions of negligence that might arise in accidents between vehicles and livestock. Without a presumption of liability, res ipsa loquitur, which is itself a presumption of liability so long as certain conditions are met, is inappropriate. Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085, 52 St. Rep. 644 (1995).

Part Case Notes

Manufactured Home Not Violative of Covenant That Prohibited Mobile Homes Unless Considered Prebuilt Home on Permanent Foundation: Gagnon purchased a manufactured home and placed it on a permanent foundation in plaintiff's subdivision. One part of a subdivision covenant defined a mobile home in a manner that included a manufactured home, while a second part of the covenant generally prohibited placement of mobile homes in the subdivision but did not prevent prebuilt homes on permanent foundations if the structure met federal housing specifications as nonmobile, permanent, residential homes. Gagnon conceded that the manufactured home was a mobile home pursuant to Fox Farm Estates Landowners Ass'n v. Kreisch, 285 M 264, 947 P2d 79 (1997). However, in this case, it was not the type of home that was at issue but rather the language of the covenant. To prohibit Gagnon's home by applying only the first part of the covenant would have rendered the second part meaningless. The Supreme Court interpreted the covenant in its entirety and held that Gagnon's manufactured home was allowed in the subdivision. Grassy Mtn. Ranch Owners' Ass'n v. Gagnon, 2004 MT 245, 323 M 19, 98 P3d 307 (2004).

No Due Process Violation Based on Lack of Requirement Under Implied Consent Statutes to Provide Information Concerning Ramifications of Refusal to Take Breath Test: Turbiville, a North Dakota resident, was stopped in Montana for suspected DUI and was read a preliminary alcohol screening test advisory that outlined the right to refuse a breath test and the license suspension accompanying a refusal. He was provided no additional information concerning other rights regarding the preliminary breath test (PBT), particularly that Turbiville could refuse the test and challenge the license seizure in court. Turbiville took the PBT and an Intoxilyzer test, both of which indicated intoxication, and later moved to suppress the test results on grounds that the Montana implied consent statutes were misleading and inaccurate as applied to nonresidents. The motion was denied, and Turbiville appealed, asserting that if he had been advised of the right to a hearing to challenge the license seizure, he would have refused the PBT and that failure to provide an adequate advisory violated due process. The Supreme Court disagreed. The option to refuse a breath or blood test is not a matter of due process, but rather a matter of grace bestowed by the Legislature, and the Legislature may contour the favor in any manner considered appropriate. The implied consent statutes do not require an officer to provide information to an arrested motorist as to ramifications of the refusal to take a test, nor is a driver even entitled to be informed of the option to refuse the test. Further, by clear definition in 61-1-136 (now repealed—see 61-1-101 for definitions), a driver's license includes a nonresident's driving privilege, so Turbiville's contention that the advisory was misleading on grounds that Montana had no authority to suspend a North Dakota driver's license also failed because the advisory was technically correct and accomplished the purpose of informing Turbiville of the potentially serious consequences of losing Montana driving privileges upon refusal to take a breath test. St. v. Turbiville, 2003 MT 340, 318 M 451, 81 P3d 475 (2003).

Restrictive Covenant Prohibiting Mobile Homes — Application to Manufactured Home — "Mobile Home" Used in Ordinary and Popular Sense: Wittmers purchased a 26- by 60-foot manufactured home that was capable of being put on wheels and moved it to a subdivision in Gallatin County. The plaintiffs brought an action to restrain Wittmers from maintaining the home within the subdivision because it was in violation of a restrictive covenant that prohibited the use of "mobile homes". The Supreme Court held that the covenant was not ambiguous and that the term "mobile home", which was undefined in the covenants, should be understood in its ordinary and popular sense. The Supreme Court noted that other statutory definitions of the term "mobile home" could be looked to for guidance in determining the meaning of the term for the purposes of the covenants and that those other definitions include structures such as Wittmers'. The Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly construed the term "mobile home" to include the Wittmers' manufactured home because their home fell within other definitions of the term "mobile home", because the Supreme Court had previously construed the term to include homes such as the Wittmers' in two other cases before the court, and because the Wittmers' home had the characteristics of a mobile home. Newman v. Wittmer, 277 M 1, 917 P2d 926, 53 St. Rep. 516 (1996), followed in Toavs v. Sayre, 281 M 243, 934 P2d 165, 54 St. Rep. 155 (1997), and Fox Farm Estates Landowners Ass'n v. Kreisch, 285 M 264, 947 P2d 79, 54 St. Rep. 1142 (1997).

Liability Coverage of Newly Acquired Vehicle — Date of Delivery Determinative: Powell purchased a truck from his brother and sister-in-law, making monthly payments to his brother. During the time that Powell made payments, the truck remained in the possession of Powell's brother, who continued to use the truck as in the past. In January, Powell's brother executed a title in Powell's name, but the intent of both parties was that the truck would be owned by Powell after the payments were completed. When all of the payments were completed, Powell's brother executed a bill of sale and canceled his insurance policy on the truck. Several days later, Powell struck and killed a pedestrian with the truck. The pedestrian's insurance company claimed that title to the truck passed more than 30 days prior to the accident and that because Powell had failed to give notice to the company of his new ownership of the truck, the truck was not a "newly acquired car" within the meaning of the insurance policy. The Supreme Court held that "delivery" of the truck, as contemplated by the insurance policy, would be construed in the ordinary sense of the word to mean the passage of physical possession of the truck. Because that occurred on July 10, when the payments were completed and the bill of sale signed, the period for notification of a newly acquired car had not yet expired and the policy was therefore construed to apply to the truck. St. Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Powell, 274 M 92, 906 P2d 198, 52 St. Rep. 1138 (1995).

Suspension of License Hearing — Need Only Show Reasonable Belief Vehicle on Highway: A hearing to suspend an individual's license for refusing to take a blood alcohol test is a civil proceeding separate and distinct from the criminal DUI charge. The arresting officer need only show that he had reasonable grounds to believe that the vehicle was on a way of the state open to the public. The Supreme Court ruled that considering statutory language and precedent, the officer had reasonable grounds to believe that the defendant's pickup, located approximately 10 feet from the traveled portion of the roadway, was on a way of the state open to the public. Gebhardt v. St., 238 M 90, 775 P2d 1261, 46 St. Rep. 1114 (1989).

Snowmobile as Within Definition of "Vehicle": The Supreme Court's reading of the plain language of 61-1-103 (now repealed—see 61-1-101 for definitions) indicates a snowmobile fits within the definition of "vehicle". (See 2001 amendment.) St. v. Delap, 237 M 346, 772 P2d 1268, 46 St. Rep. 856 (1989).

No Interest Retained by Seller of Automobile — Sale Not Conditional Although Debt Remained: Johnson sold a car to Blankenship for $7,000, with $5,000 paid initially and $2,000 to be paid within 1 year. Johnson was insured under a policy that stated that except with respect to conditional sale, Johnson was the sole owner. Neither Johnson nor Blankenship requested transfer of the policy to Blankenship. Before Blankenship secured insurance coverage, he injured Sandford in an accident. Sandford sought to extend the policy to Blankenship under the conditional sale exception because $2,000 was still owed. The District Court properly found the $2,000 was simply an unsecured debt and not part of a conditional sale. Blankenship had acquired title to and exercised total control of the car, and Johnson retained no interest; therefore, Johnson's policy afforded no coverage or defense to claims against Blankenship. Colonial Ins. Co. v. Sandford, 231 M 469, 753 P2d 880, 45 St. Rep. 768 (1988).

Determination of Vehicle Ownership — Installment Sales Contract Not Indicative of Ownership for Insurance Purposes: Jordet, an adult, jointly purchased a vehicle for the exclusive use of his minor sister-in-law, who made the downpayment, repaid registration and license fees, made the only installment payment, purchased separate insurance, possessed the only keys, and maintained sole use and control of the vehicle. The District Court decided that the term "owned vehicle" in Jordet's automobile policy included the jointly owned vehicle and that Jordet's signature on the installment sales contract conclusively placed the vehicle under his policy. The Supreme Court reversed, noting that the purchase of property and the insurance of property are distinct transactions and that Jordet's signature on the sales contract did not establish ownership for insurance purposes. Implicit in ownership is the ability to control how, when, where, and by whom the property will be used. Since Jordet never exercised any of the indicia of ownership that would be compatible with his insuring the vehicle, it was not an "owned vehicle" under the terms of his policy. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Nelson, 228 M 233, 743 P2d 572, 44 St. Rep. 1482 (1987).

Dump Truck Not Implement of Husbandry — No Exemption: An old dump truck used in a ranching operation was not exempt from registration and payment of fees as an implement of husbandry because it was not designed for agricultural purposes. St. v. Patton, 227 M 167, 737 P2d 498, 44 St. Rep. 983 (1987).

Two Roads Not Forming Intersection: In a negligence action based upon a vehicular accident, the record showed that the road on which plaintiff was traveling was a paved through road; the short segment on which the defendant approached was not a through road and therefore could not form an "intersection" within the meaning of 61-1-212 (now repealed—see 61-8-102 for definitions). The evidence did not show that the two roads joined were highways. The trial court therefore erred in establishing that the collision took place at an "intersection", which would have required the plaintiff's driver to yield the right-of-way. Kimes v. Herrin, 217 M 330, 705 P2d 108, 42 St. Rep. 1231 (1985).

Transfer of Car Ownership for Purposes of Garage Liability Insurance Policy: In action by insurance company to determine rights and obligations under garage liability insurance policy issued to dealer in relation to vehicle sold by dealership that later was involved in accident without purchaser acquiring registration or certificate of title, the court held that change in ownership occurred under a purchase contract although the certificate of title had not transferred. The presumption in 61-3-105 (now repealed, but see 61-3-435) can be overcome by the facts in a particular case. Section 61-3-201 has no effect on ownership transfer for insurance purposes. Prospector Chevrolet, Inc., delivered the vehicle to Clive Lapp. Under the U.C.C., the sale was complete and Lapp became the owner. Lapp had the right to use or dispose of the automobile as he wished. Prospector had relinquished all its legal rights to the vehicle even though it still had the statutory duties relating to transfer of certificate of ownership. Legal title passed to Lapp on date of delivery. Safeco Ins. Co. v. Lapp, 215 M 196, 695 P2d 1310, 42 St. Rep. 289 (1985).

Construction of Section: Section 61-1-117 (now repealed—see 61-1-101 for definitions) requires two showings to determine that a motor vehicle is used: first, a showing that the title had been transferred; and second, that the motor vehicle had been so used as to become secondhand. Thus, a car purchased by plaintiff that had been shipped by the manufacturer to the seller, titled to a rental business, but which had not been used except for 50 miles put on by seller was not a used vehicle. Barker v. Rice Motors, 208 M 86, 676 P2d 200, 41 St. Rep. 190 (1984).

Emergency Lane Travel: The purpose of 61-8-331 is to forbid crossing over by vehicles into the driving lanes reserved for opposite-direction traffic. Section 61-8-331 does not apply to vehicles that may occasionally be driven over or into the emergency lane of an interstate highway. Damjanovich v. W. Fire Ins. Co., 204 M 455, 665 P2d 1128, 40 St. Rep. 999 (1983).

Semitrailer as Occupied Structure: Defendant broke into the trailer portion of a semitrailer and removed 28 cases of beer. He was convicted of burglary. Defendant contended that a trailer attached to a semitruck was not an "occupied structure" within the meaning of 45-6-204. The court found that a semitrailer is a "vehicle" within the meaning of the motor vehicle laws and the criminal code. St. v. Shannon, 171 M 25, 554 P2d 743 (1976).

Highway: Prior to the 1959 amendment of section 32-2114(a), R.C.M. 1947 (61-1-201, MCA, now repealed—see 61-1-101 for definitions), a road that was not publicly maintained was not a highway within the meaning of this chapter even though it may have been open to public use. Leach v. Great N. Ry., 139 M 84, 360 P2d 94 (1961).

"Owner": A wife was co-owner with her husband of a vehicle. Her registration, even though indivisible from that of her husband, was excluded from the operation of section 53-422, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), after the husband was involved in an accident with another vehicle. He alone became subject to the provisions of the statute regarding suspension. State ex rel. Penhale v. St. Highway Patrol, 133 M 162, 321 P2d 612 (1958).

Construction of Burglary Statute: In view of the definitions of "motor vehicle" in 61-1-102 (now repealed—see 61-1-101 for definitions), the word "automobile" (now "vehicle") as used in the statute defining burglary (section 94-901, R.C.M. 1947, as amended, now 45-6-204) did not include trucks, buses, and the like. St. v. Duran, 127 M 233, 259 P2d 1051 (1953).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Property Tax Freeze Inapplicable to Light Vehicle Tax: Although Ch. 211, L. 1987, replaced the fee in lieu of tax on light vehicles with a property tax, the property tax freeze instituted by Initiative No. 105 applies only to property described in Title 15, ch. 6, part 1, and is inapplicable to items of personal property such as light vehicles, motorcycles, motor homes, quadricycles, travel trailers, and campers. 42 A.G. Op. 21 (1987).

Parochial School Vehicles and Head Start Vehicles as School Buses: Parochial school vehicles and Head Start vehicles used to transport children to and from school are school buses within the meaning of 61-1-116 (now repealed—see 61-8-102 for definitions), and as such they must comply with the provisions of Title 61 relative to school bus equipment, operation, and inspection. 39 A.G. Op. 63 (1982).

Authority to Regulate Parking on Private Lots: The uniform act regulating traffic on highways as adopted by the state precludes a municipal corporation from enacting an ordinance to regulate parking upon privately owned lots. 37 A.G. Op. 53 (1977).

Forest Service Development Roads — Size and Weight: The laws applicable to vehicle size and weight are enforceable upon highways but not upon Forest Service development roads. This chapter, however, generally extends its jurisdiction over these roads. 37 A.G. Op. 9 (1977).

Forest Service Development Road — Licensing: Because a United States Forest Service development road is not a highway by statutory definition, the provisions of law regarding license plates do not apply to vehicles operated solely on Forest Service development roads. 37 A.G. Op. 9 (1977).

Similar Vehicle to Wheelchair: A self-propelled golf cart vehicle used by invalids is a similar vehicle to a self-propelled wheelchair and is exempt from motor vehicle registration. 36 A.G. Op. 86 (1976).

Truck Modified as Implement of Husbandry Subject to Registration: A pickup truck, modified to qualify as "implement of husbandry", is a "motor vehicle" under Title 53, R.C.M. 1947 (now Title 61, MCA—see 61-1-101 for definitions), and is subject to registration and licensing before being operated on public roads. Driver need not have a valid driver's license if vehicle is "implement of husbandry". 36 A.G. Op. 26 (1975).

Special Mobile Equipment Not Assessable: Special mobile equipment, as defined in section 53-642, R.C.M. 1947 (61-1-104, MCA, now repealed—see 61-1-101 for definitions), does not come within the definition of "motor vehicle" and therefore is not assessable as a motor vehicle. 31 A.G. Op. 9 (1965).

Case Notes

Requirement of Payment of Reinstatement Fee Not Violation of Ex Post Facto Law: Cooney argued that under the law as it existed prior to 1989, the revoked status of his license would have been removed whether or not he paid any fee when his license expired by its own terms and that therefore the application of the new law requiring payment of a fee before the revoked status of a license may be changed was an ex post facto violation as applied to him. The Supreme Court held that the application of the law did not violate the ban on ex post facto legislation because it did not change the legal consequences of Cooney's prior conduct and that in addition, the 1989 amendment was intended to clarify that a period of revocation continues until a defendant pays the required fee. St. v. Cooney, 284 M 500, 945 P2d 891, 54 St. Rep. 967 (1997). See also St. v. Clark, 2000 MT 40, 298 M 300, 997 P2d 107, 57 St. Rep. 185 (2000).

Jury Trial Not Statutorily Mandated in Driver's License Suspension Case — Not Violative of Right to Trial by Jury: Section 61-8-403 dictates that the court examine the facts and determine the merits of a petition challenging the suspension or revocation of a license but does not contemplate the role of a jury in the hearing, presuming instead that a jury will not be present, through assignment of tasks to the court. The inviolate right to a trial by jury is not a prospective right that is automatically granted in every new proceeding that may arise. Rather, the right that is constitutionally preserved is that right to a jury trial that existed at the time that the constitution was enacted. There is not and has never been a right to a jury trial in purely equitable actions in Montana. Suspension or revocation of a driver's license pursuant to the implied consent law is a civil administrative sanction, not a criminal penalty, and is intended to protect the public rather than punish the driver. The hearing to determine the propriety of a driver's license suspension is an action in equity because compensatory or punitive damages are not allowed. Further, the reinstatement fee does not constitute a punishment that converts the equitable action into a criminal action because the fee is dedicated to the public purpose of funding county drinking and driving prevention programs. Therefore, a driver is not entitled to a trial by jury in a proceeding to determine the propriety of a driver's license suspension. Supola v. Dept. of Justice, 278 M 421, 925 P2d 480, 53 St. Rep. 984 (1996).

the department, the security agreement or other lien instrument that creates the security interest must be retained by the secured party. A copy of the security agreement is sufficient as a lien notice if it contains the name and address of the debtor and the secured party, the complete vehicle description, and the amount of the lien and is signed by the debtor. The department shall file voluntary security interests and liens by entering the name and address of the secured party upon the face of the certificate of ownership. Involuntary liens must be filed against the record of the vehicle encumbered. The department shall mail a statement certifying to the filing of a security interest or lien to the secured party. The department shall mail the certificate of ownership to the owner at the address given on the certificate; however, if the transfer of ownership and filing of the security interest are paid for by a creditor or secured party, the department shall return the certificate of ownership to the county treasurer in the county in which the vehicle is to be registered. (5) Except as provided in 61-3-109 and subsection (6) of this section, a voluntary security interest or lien is perfected on the date that the lien notice and the certificate of ownership or manufacturer's statement of origin are delivered to the county treasurer. On that date, the county treasurer shall issue to the secured party a receipt evidencing the perfection. Perfection under this section constitutes constructive notice to subsequent purchasers or encumbrancers, from the date of delivery of the lien notice to the county treasurer, of the existence of the security interest.

(6) Except as provided in 61-3-109, voluntary security interests or lien filings that do not require transfer of ownership are perfected on the date that the lien notice and the certificate of ownership or manufacturer's statement of origin are received by the department. On that date, the department shall issue to the secured party a receipt evidencing the perfection. Perfection under this subsection constitutes constructive notice to subsequent purchasers or encumbrancers, from the date that the lien notice is delivered to the department, of the existence of the security interest"; in (5) at beginning substituted "A secured party or lienholder who has a perfected security interest in a vehicle and who" for "A conditional sales vendor or chattel mortgagee or assignee who", after "satisfaction of" substituted "the security interest or lien within 21 days" for "a chattel mortgage, assignment, or conditional sales contract within 15 days", after "department" increased payment from $1 to $25, and before "fails" substituted "secured party or lienholder" for "person"; in (6) at beginning substituted "Within 24 hours after receiving" for "Upon receipt of", after "department shall" deleted "within 24 hours", and after "mail to owner" substituted "or any secured party or lienholder of record" for "conditional sale vendor, mortgagees, or assignees of the owner, conditional sale vendor, or mortgagees"; deleted former (10) that read: "(10) It is not necessary to refile with the department any instruments on file in the offices of the county clerk and recorders at the time that this law takes effect"; inserted (7) pertaining to a secured party assigning an interest in a vehicle; in (8)(a) in first sentence near beginning after "fee" deleted "of $8", in second sentence at beginning substituted "The fee covers" for "The $8 fee includes the cost of filing a satisfaction or release of the security interest and also" and after "cost of entering" substituted "and, upon the subsequent satisfaction or release, of removing the security interest or lien from the electronic record of title" for "the satisfaction or release on the records of the department and of deleting the endorsement of the security interest from the face of the certificate of ownership", and deleted third and fourth sentences that read: "A fee of $4 must be paid to the department for issuing a certified copy of a certificate of ownership subject to a security interest or other lien on file in the office of the department or for filing an assignment of any security interest or other lien on file with the department. Case Notes

Defrauding Creditor — Elements of Sale Necessary to Establish Ownership: A judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff, Kovacich, because of failure of Norgaard to make payments for the purchase of farm machinery. Kovacich made an attempt to levy against a truck owned by Norgaard, who, upon learning the truck was going to be seized, removed it from a consignment lot and sold it to McNair, a close friend. McNair did not register the truck in his name or purchase insurance for it. The Department of Justice verified that the truck was registered to Norgaard, and thereafter a Writ of Execution was issued, pursuant to which the truck was seized. Norgaard obtained a Writ of Prohibition preventing sale of the truck. After a hearing, the District Court set aside the Writ of Prohibition, allowing Kovacich to proceed with the sale, and Norgaard appealed, contending District Court error in allowing the sale. The Supreme Court found that resolution of the issue turned on whether the transaction between Norgaard and McNair was an attempt by Norgaard to defraud his creditor. The court held that under 31-2-315 (now repealed), unless the transfer from Norgaard to McNair was accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession, the transfer "is conclusively presumed to be fraudulent and therefore void against those who are his creditors while he remains in possession". Finding no evidence of immediate delivery or of any actual change of possession, the District Court order allowing sale was upheld. Kovacich v. Norgaard, 221 M 26, 716 P2d 633, 43 St. Rep. 608 (1986).

Notice of Agister's Lien: Failure of automobile repairman to file copy of asserted agister's lien with registrar of motor vehicles (new Department of Justice) as required by subsection (1) of this section rendered that lien invalid as against bank holding recorded security interest in vehicle repaired and those seizing vehicle on the bank's behalf. Parker v. West, 161 M 170, 505 P2d 94 (1973).

Notice of Prior Interest: Where auto repairman failed to ascertain true ownership of auto before making repairs, the filing of conditional sales contract with the registrar of motor vehicles (now Department of Justice) by assignee prior to repairman's lien established a dominant interest under subsection (4) of this section. Williamson v. Skerritt, 141 M 422, 378 P2d 215 (1963).

Innocent Purchaser May Rely on Record Ownership: Under this section, an innocent purchaser of an automobile relying on the record ownership will be protected, particularly where he dealt with the record owner who was in the possession of the car. A mortgage covering an automobile given by one not in the chain of title, though recorded, is not constructive notice to subsequent purchasers. Rigney v. Swingley, 112 M 104, 113 P2d 344 (1941).

Delay by Conditional Sale Vendor in Delivering Certificate of Title: Under subsection (e) of section 53-110, R.C.M. 1947 (now subsection (5) of this section), a demand was required before one could be pronounced guilty of withholding delivery of a certificate of title, and the time the owner delays making application for duplicate certificate, under section 61-3204, R.C.M. 1947, defendant contending he does not have original, should be deducted. Anderson v. Commercial Credit Co., 110 M 333, 101 P2d 367 (1940).

Liability for Personal Injuries: An automobile dealer assigned a conditional sales contract covering a truck to a finance corporation. The truck was involved in a collision with a car parked along the highway, and plaintiff was injured. The finance corporation was not liable for damages under plaintiff's theory that as the registered owner of the truck it should be liable. Coombes v. Letcher, 104 M 371, 66 P2d 769 (1937).

Purchaser From Established Dealer Protected: A finance company, the assignee of conditional sale contract, left a car covered by a contract with an established dealer who was a conditional vendee and who sold the car to innocent purchaser. In an action for possession of the car, although the conditional sale contract had been filed with the registrar, the finance company was estopped to deny the dealer's apparent authority to sell, either as owner or as agent of the conditional vendor. It is not incumbent upon one purchasing from a regular dealer to make inquiry concerning the title. Rasmussen v. Lee & Co., Inc., 104 M 278, 66 P2d 119 (1937).

(2) Within 20 calendar days after endorsement, the transferee shall forward both the endorsed certificate of ownership with the odometer mileage statement required under 61-3-206 and the certificate of registration, together with the information required under 61-3-202, to the county treasurer, who shall forward them to the department. The department may not issue a certificate of ownership or certificate of registration until the outstanding certificates are surrendered to that office or their loss is established to its reasonable satisfaction. Failure to make application within the 20-day grace period subjects the transferee to a penalty of $10. The county treasurer shall collect the penalty at the time of registration and forward the penalty fee to the department of revenue for deposit in the state general fund. The penalty is in addition to the fees otherwise provided by law. If the transferee does not make application within 25 days, a creditor or secured party may pay the fees for the transfer of title and filing of security interest or lien in order to have title transferred to the transferee and have the security interest or lien filed. The creditor or secured party is not liable for the penalty, registration fees, or taxes. The department shall return the certificate of title to the county treasurer as provided in 61-3-103(1).

When the certificate of ownership is returned by the department to the county treasurer, the treasurer shall hold the certificate of ownership until the vehicle is properly registered.

(3) In the event of a transfer by operation of law of any interest in a motor vehicle as upon inheritance, devise, or bequest, order in bankruptcy or insolvency, execution sale, repossession upon default in the performance of the terms of a lease or executory sales contract, or otherwise than by voluntary act of the person whose title or interest is transferred, the executor, administrator, receiver, trustee, sheriff, or other representative or successor in interest of the person whose interest is transferred shall forward to the department an application for a certificate of ownership in the form required by the department, together with a verified or certified statement of the transfer of interest. The statement must set forth the reason for the involuntary transfer, the interest transferred, the name of the person to whom the interest is to be transferred, the process of procedure effecting the transfer, and other information requested by the department. Evidence and instruments otherwise required by law to effect a transfer of legal or equitable title to or an interest in chattels must be furnished with the statement. If the department is satisfied that the transfer is regular and that all formalities required by law have been complied with, it shall send to the owner, conditional sales vendor, lessor, mortgagee, and other lienor, as shown by its records, notice of the intended transfer and, not less than 5 days after sending notice, shall issue a new certificate of ownership and certificate of registration to the transferee. The notice required by this section is complied with by deposit in the U.S. mail of the notice, postage prepaid, addressed to the person at the respective address shown on its records.

(4) When the vehicle certificate of ownership that is involuntarily transferred is not registered in this state, the procedure in subsection (3) must be followed in applying for a new certificate of ownership and certificate of registration. However, in lieu of the statement required in subsection (3), the department may accept an affidavit of repossession on the form provided by the state in which a lien has been perfected and the department need not send notice of intended transfer and shall issue a new certificate of ownership and a new certificate of registration to the person entitled to the certificates.

(5) (a) If the owner of one or more motor vehicles, trailers, semitrailers, or housetrailers registered under this chapter and not exceeding a combined value of $15,000 dies without leaving other property necessitating the procuring of letters of administration or letters testamentary, the surviving spouse or other heir unless the property is by will otherwise bequeathed may secure transfer of the decedent's certificate of ownership and the certificate of registration for the vehicle.

(b) The person seeking transfer of the certificate of ownership shall file an affidavit with the department setting forth the fact of survivorship and the name and address of any other heirs and other facts as are necessary under subsection (5)(a) to entitle the affiant to a transfer.

(c) The department is authorized to transfer the certificate of ownership and certificate of registration, subject to all security interests shown by its records, upon receipt of an affidavit showing that the affiant is entitled to a transfer under the provisions of subsection (5)(a).

(6) Subsection (5) does not prevent a secured party from assigning the secured party's interest in a motor vehicle registered under the provisions of this chapter to any other person without the consent of and without affecting the interest of the holder of the certificate of ownership and certificate of registration. Upon any assignment by a secured party of the secured party's security interest in any motor vehicle registered under this chapter, a copy of the assignment must be filed with the department and a record of the assignment must be made in its records"; inserted (1) requiring an owner to apply for a certificate of title; inserted (2) listing vehicles exempt from the requirements of this part; in (3) in two places substituted "certificate of title" for references to certificate of ownership; deleted former (8) that read: "(8) (a) Upon its determination that a certificate of ownership or a registration receipt contains an error or that the applicant has paid the required fees and taxes with an insufficient funds check and if the department has been notified of that fact by the county attorney, the department may cancel the certificate of ownership or receipt and, in the case of an error, issue a replacement for the erroneous certificate or receipt if the owner has returned the certificate or receipt to be canceled. If the owner fails to return to the department the certificate of ownership, the registration receipt, or the license plate, the department shall direct a peace officer or department employee to secure and return the certificate, receipt, or license plate to the department.

Case Notes

Determination of Vehicle Ownership — Installment Sales Contract Not Indicative of Ownership for Insurance Purposes: Jordet, an adult, jointly purchased a vehicle for the exclusive use of his minor sister-in-law, who made the downpayment, repaid registration and license fees, made the only installment payment, purchased separate insurance, possessed the only keys, and maintained sole use and control of the vehicle. The District Court decided that the term "owned vehicle" in Jordet's automobile policy included the jointly owned vehicle and that Jordet's signature on the installment sales contract conclusively placed the vehicle under his policy. The Supreme Court reversed, noting that the purchase of property and the insurance of property are distinct transactions and that Jordet's signature on the sales contract did not establish ownership for insurance purposes. Implicit in ownership is the ability to control how, when, where, and by whom the property will be used. Since Jordet never exercised any of the indicia of ownership that would be compatible with his insuring the vehicle, it was not an "owned vehicle" under the terms of his policy. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Nelson, 228 M 233, 743 P2d 572, 44 St. Rep. 1482 (1987).

Defrauding Creditor — Elements of Sale Necessary to Establish Ownership: A judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff, Kovacich, because of failure of Norgaard to make payments for the purchase of farm machinery. Kovacich made an attempt to levy against a truck owned by Norgaard, who, upon learning the truck was going to be seized, removed it from a consignment lot and sold it to McNair, a close friend. McNair did not register the truck in his name or purchase insurance for it. The Department of Justice verified that the truck was registered to Norgaard, and thereafter a Writ of Execution was issued, pursuant to which the truck was seized. Norgaard obtained a Writ of Prohibition preventing sale of the truck. After a hearing, the District Court set aside the Writ of Prohibition, allowing Kovacich to proceed with the sale, and Norgaard appealed, contending District Court error in allowing the sale. The Supreme Court found that resolution of the issue turned on whether the transaction between Norgaard and McNair was an attempt by Norgaard to defraud his creditor. The court held that under 31-2-315 (now repealed), unless the transfer from Norgaard to McNair was accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession, the transfer "is conclusively presumed to be fraudulent and therefore void against those who are his creditors while he remains in possession". Finding no evidence of immediate delivery or of any actual change of possession, the District Court order allowing sale was upheld. Kovacich v. Norgaard, 221 M 26, 716 P2d 633, 43 St. Rep. 608 (1986).

Transfer of Car Ownership for Purposes of Garage Liability Insurance Policy: In action by insurance company to determine rights and obligations under garage liability insurance policy issued to dealer in relation to vehicle sold by dealership that later was involved in accident without purchaser acquiring registration or certificate of title, the court held that change in ownership occurred under a purchase contract although the certificate of title had not transferred. The presumption in 61-3-105 (now repealed, but see 61-3-435) can be overcome by the facts in a particular case. Section 61-3-201 has no effect on ownership transfer for insurance purposes. Prospector Chevrolet, Inc., delivered the vehicle to Clive Lapp. Under the U.C.C., the sale was complete and Lapp became the owner. Lapp had the right to use or dispose of the automobile as he wished. Prospector had relinquished all its legal rights to the vehicle even though it still had the statutory duties relating to transfer of certificate of ownership. Legal title passed to Lapp on date of delivery. Safeco Ins. Co. v. Lapp, 215 M 196, 695 P2d 1310, 42 St. Rep. 289 (1985).

Coverage of Liability Policy: An automobile dealership failed to comply with this section by failing to send a certificate of ownership, certificate of registration, and application for registration upon sale to the registrar of motor vehicles. The automobile was subsequently involved in an accident. The failure to comply with the terms of this section did not extend the coverage of the automobile dealership's "garage" liability insurance to the buyer of the automobile. Universal Underwriter's Ins. Co. v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 166 M 128, 531 P2d 668 (1975).

Pledge of Title Certificate: In action by administratrix to recover amount of automobile purchase loan made by decedent to defendant, it was a question for the jury whether the title certificate was first surrendered as evidence of a pledge and then returned as evidence of payment. Olson v. McLean, 132 M 111, 313 P2d 1039 (1957).

Part 3
Registration

Part Case Notes

Purpose of Registration Law: The purpose of automobile registration being a police regulation is to provide a method to deter automobile thefts and to apprehend thieves. If it is construed in such fashion as to place onerous burdens on honest men and prevent those lawfully entitled to registry from accomplishing their objects through technicalities or official caprice, it would be better if it had not been enacted. Due process of law extends to proceedings judicial, administrative, or executive in nature. Anderson v. Commercial Credit Co., 110 M 333, 101 P2d 367 (1940).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

State Taxation of Nontribe Member Not Preempted by Federal Concerns: While generally state taxation will be preempted if it impermissibly interferes with a comprehensive federal statutory scheme or established tradition of tribal governance, the simple fact that a particular on-reservation activity may validly be taxed by a tribe does not preclude state taxation of the same activity, and taxation of a nonmember has no effect on federal concerns. A tribe's sovereignty interest does not negate state authority over nonmember activity. Therefore, the interest of a nontribal member in motor vehicles, mobile homes, or personal property (whose tax situs is within the exterior boundaries of the reservation) and which interest is held in joint tenancy or tenancy in common with a tribal member is subject to those state taxes generally applicable to such property. 42 A.G. Op. 11 (1987).

Chapter 525 inserted (4) regarding vehicles exempt from taxation when used in the production of motion pictures or television commercials; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 13, 1989, and terminates December 31, 1993.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 525, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is not technically required for this bill because the rulemaking authority currently authorized in 61-3-506 is merely expanded. However, in adopting this bill, the legislature intends that any rules adopted by the department of revenue be limited to developing forms or procedures for prorating the taxes imposed on property, including vehicles, that is used exclusively in the filming of motion pictures or television commercials. The provisions of the bill are intended to exempt from property taxation all property that is used exclusively in the production of motion pictures or television commercials unless the property is sited in the state for a period exceeding 180 consecutive days in a calendar year. If the property is sited in the state for a period exceeding 180 consecutive days in a calendar year, the property is subject to property taxation in the same manner as other property."

Effective Date — Retroactive Applicability: Section 10, Ch. 525, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval and applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1988." Approved April 13, 1989.

1985 Amendment: In (1) near middle, after "semitrailers", inserted "quadricycles" (effective January 1, 1986).

Case Notes

License Plate Obscured by Snow and Trailer Hitch Sufficient Cause for Investigatory Stop: The defendant's temporary vehicle license plate was partially obscured by snow and a trailer hitch. Upon approaching the vehicle, officers noticed that the defendant had red, bloodshot eyes, was excitedly smoking, and upon questioning, admitted to drinking. The defendant was later convicted of DUI. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that an obstruction of a license plate in violation of 61-3-301 was enough to give rise to particularized suspicion for an investigatory stop. Furthermore, although the officers could see the full license plate upon approaching the vehicle, they were authorized to speak to the driver and request documentation such as a driver's license and registration. St. v. Haldane, 2013 MT 32, 368 Mont. 396, 300 P.3d 657.

Justifiable Stop for Daytime Check of Temporary Window Sticker Warranted — Further Police Intrusion Not Warranted Once Limited Purpose of Stop Accomplished: Following weeks of surveillance instigated by a confidential tip intimating drug activities, the Billings police observed no suspicious drug-related activities conducted by defendants, but after receiving a tip that defendants would be driving from Billings to Bozeman to sell marijuana, officers stopped defendants' vehicle because there were no license plates displayed, although a temporary sticker could be seen but not read in the tinted rear window. When the officers approached the vehicle, they noticed that the temporary sticker properly displayed in the window was current. Nevertheless, in a short time, additional officers arrived with a drug-sniffing dog. The dog indicated the presence of drugs, the vehicle was searched, marijuana was found, and defendants were arrested. Defendants contended that the evidence should be suppressed because there was no particularized suspicion to make the stop. The Supreme Court agreed that the investigative stop was warranted because the officers' inability to read the expiration date on the temporary sticker provided an objective basis to infer that the sticker was not valid. However, a quick check of the properly displayed sticker in bright daylight confirmed the sticker's validity. Defendants had committed no traffic offense or violated any other criminal law of which the officers were aware. An investigative stop is a temporary detention that may not last longer than necessary to effectuate the purpose of the stop. Once the limited purpose of the investigative stop was accomplished, no further police intrusion was warranted, and the investigative stop related to drug possession was not justified. The District Court committed reversible error in refusing to suppress the evidence of the subsequent vehicle search. St. v. Martinez, 2003 MT 65, 314 M 434, 67 P3d 207 (2003), following St. v. Henderson, 1998 MT 233, 291 M 77, 966 P2d 137 (1998).

Unusual but Legal Driving and Unsupported Tip Insufficient Grounds for Particularized Suspicion to Make Investigative Stop: An officer received a tip concerning suspicious activity in a high crime area of Billings. The officer observed Fisher's car in the area and followed the car. The officer observed that the vehicle had a temporary sticker, which could not be read, but no license plate. The vehicle made several turns and ended up on the street where the officer originally saw it. The officer then stopped the vehicle, and Fisher was subsequently arrested for possession of drugs and drug paraphernalia. Fisher moved to suppress the evidence on grounds that the officer had no particularized suspicion to make the stop. The motion was denied, and Fisher was convicted and appealed. The state initially claimed that the officer had a particularized suspicion that Fisher was in violation of vehicle registration laws, but the state waived that argument when the officer did not testify to that effect. Further, none of the information in the anonymous tip was connected to Fisher; rather, the officer stated that he wanted to obtain the identity of the vehicle occupants for later investigation of the tip. However, under St. v. Anderson, 258 M 510, 853 P2d 1245 (1993), an investigative stop is not justified in order to corroborate a tip. Last, Fisher maintained an appropriate speed, violated no traffic laws, and made no unusual turns, and Fisher's driving was not headlong flight or evasive. The simple fact that Fisher drove back to the original street where the officer saw the vehicle, absent more objective data, was insufficient for the officer to form a particularized suspicion that Fisher was engaged in criminal activity based on operation of the vehicle. Thus, the stop violated Fisher's right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure, and the Supreme Court reversed. St. v.

Fisher, 2002 MT 335, 313 M 274, 60 P3d 1004 (2002), distinguishing St. v. Henderson, 1998 MT 233, 291 M 77, 966 P2d 137 (1998), and Ill. v. Wardlow, 528 US 119 (2000), and distinguished in St. v. Flemings, 2008 MT 229, 344 M 360, 188 P3d 1020 (2008).

Display of License Plate in Windshield Rather Than on Bumper in Compliance With Law — Suppression of Evidence Proper Based on Illegal Investigatory Stop: A Deputy Sheriff observed a truck that appeared to have no front license plate pulling onto the highway, and the officer performed an investigatory stop based on a suspected violation of this section, which requires that license plates be conspicuously displayed (see 2003 amendment) and securely fastened on the front and rear of a vehicle. Lacasella's front license plate was secured with duct tape to the inside lower driver's side corner of the windshield, rather than fastened to the bumper. As a result of the stop, Lacasella was arrested for DUI and for driving with a suspended or revoked license. Lacasella pleaded guilty, but reserved the right to appeal the denial of his motion to suppress evidence based on the allegation that the arresting officer had no particularized suspicion to make the stop. The District Court held that the inside of the front windshield did not constitute the front of the vehicle and that the license plate was not unobstructed from plain view when displayed in the window because glare could prevent the license plate from being viewed at night. The court also concluded that even if the officer had seen the license plate in the window, the officer was still permitted to make an investigatory stop to ensure that the license plate was securely fastened to the vehicle. The Supreme Court considered the issue and reversed. Under the plain language of this section, Lacasella's license plate was clearly and conspicuously displayed and unobstructed from plain view. In believing that the license plate must be secured to the bumper, the officer misconstrued this section, and observations made by an officer who does not understand the law are not objectively grounded in law and cannot be the basis of a particularized suspicion. Thus, the officer did not have the objective data necessary to justify the investigatory stop, and the evidence obtained subsequent to the illegal stop should have been suppressed. Further, the District Court's conclusion that even if the officer had seen the license plate in the window, the officer was still permitted to make an investigatory stop to ensure that the license plate was securely fastened to the vehicle was also erroneous. Such a holding would justify an investigatory stop of every vehicle in Montana. Law enforcement is not permitted to make an investigatory stop unless an officer observes objective data that gives rise to an inference that an individual is engaged in wrongdoing, and that objective data did not exist in this case. St. v. Lacasella, 2002 MT 326, 313 M 185, 60 P3d 975 (2002).

"Free Men" Not Free to Ignore State Motor Vehicle Laws: Operation of a motor vehicle on public roads is a privilege and is subject to reasonable regulation by the state in the valid exercise of the state's police power. Reasonable regulations include mandatory vehicle registration, insurance, and seatbelt usage. The privilege may be revoked for failure to comply with regulations. No one in the state is exempt from the regulations, including appellant, who claims to be a "free man" who is not a 14th amendment citizen and who therefore does not need to obey state or federal law. St. v. Folda, 267 M 523, 885 P2d 426, 51 St. Rep. 1149 (1994).

Power of State to Enact and Courts to Enforce Laws Regulating Motor Vehicles: Appellant, appearing pro se, challenged as unconstitutional laws requiring driver's license, mandatory insurance, and vehicle registration. The Supreme Court held that the issues raised by the appellant were frivolous, unreasonable, and groundless in that the court had previously recognized the state's power to regulate motor vehicles in the interests of public safety at the expense of individual rights. Whitefish v. Hansen, 237 M 105, 771 P2d 976, 46 St. Rep. 657 (1989).

Constitutionality: Enforcement of the provisions of this section requiring license plates is not a violation of constitutional rights. Billings v. Skurdal, 224 M 84, 730 P2d 371, 43 St. Rep. 2036 (1986).

Case Notes

Situs of Automobile for Taxation and License:

Tangible property such as an automobile is usually considered to be owned, taxable, and licensable where it is habitually kept when at rest rather than where it is temporarily kept or where it is used during the working hours of the day. Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939).

If a motor vehicle's owner resides on Fort Peck townsite, its situs for license and tax purposes is ordinarily in the county of its owner's actual residence or domicile. Its owner's voting residence or place of habitual or permanent keeping is immaterial. Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939).

Attorney General's Opinions

Proportion of Vehicle-Related Taxes Applicable to Rural Fire Districts: Vehicle-related taxes referred to in subsection (1) of 61-3-509 (see 2001 amendment depositing fees in state general fund) must be distributed proportionately to rural fire districts on the basis of all mill levies applicable to personal property located within the geographical boundaries of the districts. For distribution entitlement purposes, the residence or assignment address appearing on the certificate of registration determines if a particular vehicle is within a district's boundaries. 43 A.G. Op. 4 (1989).

Motor Vehicle Dealer Not to Obtain "Title Only" on Vehicle in Inventory: A motor vehicle dealer may not obtain a "title only" (meaning receipt of title without registration or payment of taxes) from the Registrar's Bureau on a motor vehicle that is part of his inventory. If a dealer wishes to obtain a title on such a vehicle, he must also register the vehicle and pay any taxes or fees due on the vehicle. 40 A.G. Op. 70 (1984).

Fees Due Regardless Whether Applicant Has Previously Paid for His License Plates During Current Year: Upon a transfer of title and license plates to a newly acquired vehicle, the County Treasurer must collect from the applicant the registration fees provided for in 61-3-321. 36 A.G. Op. 27 (1975).

Plates Issued to Nonresident Military Personnel Without Payment of Property Taxes: The County Treasurer must register an automobile or issue license plates to nonresident military personnel without requiring the payment of personal property taxes on the automobile. 31 A.G. Op. 22 (1966).

Case Notes

Unusual but Legal Driving and Unsupported Tip Insufficient Grounds for Particularized Suspicion to Make Investigative Stop: An officer received a tip concerning suspicious activity in a high crime area of Billings. The officer observed Fisher's car in the area and followed the car. The officer observed that the vehicle had a temporary sticker, which could not be read, but no license plate. The vehicle made several turns and ended up on the street where the officer originally saw it. The officer then stopped the vehicle, and Fisher was subsequently arrested for possession of drugs and drug paraphernalia. Fisher moved to suppress the evidence on grounds that the officer had no particularized suspicion to make the stop. The motion was denied, and Fisher was convicted and appealed. The state initially claimed that the officer had a particularized suspicion that Fisher was in violation of vehicle registration laws, but the state waived that argument when the officer did not testify to that effect. Further, none of the information in the anonymous tip was connected to Fisher; rather, the officer stated that he wanted to obtain the identity of the vehicle occupants for later investigation of the tip. However, under St. v. Anderson, 258 M 510, 853 P2d 1245 (1993), an investigative stop is not justified in order to corroborate a tip. Last, Fisher maintained an appropriate speed, violated no traffic laws, and made no unusual turns, and Fisher's driving was not headlong flight or evasive. The simple fact that Fisher drove back to the original street where the officer saw the vehicle, absent more objective data, was insufficient for the officer to form a particularized suspicion that Fisher was engaged in criminal activity based on operation of the vehicle. Thus, the stop violated Fisher's right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure, and the Supreme Court reversed. St. v. Fisher, 2002 MT 335, 313 M 274, 60 P3d 1004 (2002), distinguishing St. v. Henderson, 1998 MT 233, 291 M 77, 966 P2d 137 (1998), and Ill. v. Wardlow, 528 US 119 (2000), and distinguished in St. v. Motor Vehicle Dealer Not to Obtain "Title Only" on Vehicle in Inventory: A motor vehicle dealer may not obtain a "title only" (meaning receipt of title without registration or payment of taxes) from the Registrar's Bureau on a motor vehicle that is part of his inventory. If a dealer wishes to obtain a title on such a vehicle, he must also register the vehicle and pay any taxes or fees due on the vehicle. 40 A.G. Op. 70 (1984).

Section 149, Ch. 596, L. 2005, a coordination section, provided: "If Senate Bill No. 318 is not passed and approved and Senate Bill No. 285 and [this act] are both passed and approved, then subsection (12) of 61-3-321 contained in [section 148 of this act] is void and internal references must be adjusted and subsection (8) of 61-3-321 contained in [section 148 of this act] must read as follows:

"(8) (a) Except as provided in subsection (15), the one-time registration fee for motorcycles and quadricycles~~, $9.75 for a motorcycle or quadricycle with special license plates issued under 61-3-415 and, for a motorcycle or quadricycle under one-time registration, $9.75 in calendar year 2004 and, in each subsequent year, $11.25~~ registered for use on public highways is $53.25 and the one-time registration fee for motorcycles and quadricycles registered for both off-road use and for use on the public highways is $114.50. ~~This fee is a one-time fee, except upon transfer of ownership of a motorcycle or quadricycle.~~

The code commissioner has included quadricycles as subject to the $16 fee to reflect the apparent intent of secs. 148 and 149 of Ch. 596.

The amendment to this section made by sec. 4, Ch. 500, L. 2005, was rendered void by sec. 8, Ch. 500, L. 2005, a coordination section.

The code commissioner has not codified the second sentence in (7) because the sentence was rendered meaningless by the changes made in Ch. 542. The sentence read: "Registration fees must be paid if the vehicle to which plates are transferred was not previously registered."

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 325, L. 2005, amended sec. 50, Ch. 592, L. 2003, to read: "Section 50. Applicability. [This act] applies to:

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 325, L. 2005, provided: "(1) [Section 2] [not codified] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the registration, reregistration, fees, and taxes on vehicles and vessels registered on or after January 1, 2004.

(2) [Section 2] [not codified] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to vehicle counts made after January 1, 2004."

WHEREAS, in addition to the salary survey conducted by the Attorney General, the Montana Legislative Audit Division conducted a separate salary survey of the Sheriff departments in the eight counties where the Montana Highway Patrol district offices are located, including the headquarters in Helena; and

WHEREAS, an entry-level officer for the Montana Highway Patrol is paid $4.50 an hour ($9,360 a year) less than the average entry-level officer in those eight county Sheriff's departments; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Highway Patrol continues to lose officers to other law enforcement agencies after absorbing the cost of training those officers, which places additional hardships on the patrol; and

WHEREAS, in the past 11 years, 62 of the 80 officers (78%) that left the Montana Highway Patrol for nonretirement purposes went to other law enforcement agencies for higher salaries; and

WHEREAS, Montana Highway Patrol officer positions have been placed into the alternative pay and classification plan, which allows market-based salary survey adjustments, to recruit and retain officers; and

WHEREAS, market-based salary information from county Sheriff departments, which are recruiting and hiring Montana Highway Patrol officers because of higher salaries, is readily available to establish market-based salary rates to compensate Montana Highway Patrol officers and reduce attrition in these positions; and

Section 50, Ch. 592, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies to vehicles and vessels registered on or after January 1, 2004."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 399, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee (SAIC) closely examined property tax, vehicle registration, and special license plate benefits available to veterans or their surviving spouses; and

WHEREAS, the SAIC finds that state statutory language providing disabled veterans with certain benefits based on a 100% disability rating from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs needs to be updated to account for veterans with less than a 100% disability rating but entitled to receive compensation at the 100% disability rate; and

WHEREAS, veterans and surviving spouses have requested closer parity between the vehicle registration and special license plate benefits available to various classes of veterans and inclusion of the surviving spouses of veterans killed while on active duty or who died as a result of a service-connected disability; and

WHEREAS, statutory provisions related to vehicle registration and special license plate fees should be simplified to the extent possible to streamline administration and address various other disparities."

The preamble attached to Ch. 491, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the 57th Legislature requested a study of veterans' issues, and the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs

Interim Committee conducted numerous hearings, received expert testimony, and examined research during a 14-month period; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that, using 2000 data, Montana's population of nearly 107,000 veterans and an estimated 170,000 family members of veterans not only ranks Montana second in the nation in the number of veterans per capita (11.9%) but also means that veterans and their family members constitute more than 25% of Montana's total population; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that more than 80,000 Montana veterans are combat-era veterans (more than 36,000 are Vietnam-era, more than 16,000 are Persian Gulf-era, more than 16,000 are World War II-era, and about 14,000 are Korean-era veterans) and that the largest group of veterans is now between 50 and 65 years of age; and

WHEREAS, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs estimates that more than 50% of combat theater veterans suffer from clinically serious and disabling posttraumatic stress disorder, that twice as many veterans as nonveterans experience homelessness, that many veterans have overlapping and complex needs encompassing medical and nursing home care, mental health and chemical dependency counseling, housing, transportation, education and training, job services, and family support services, and that the children and families of veterans who do not get the help that they need are themselves at risk; and

WHEREAS, these complex needs and a maze of federal, state, local, public, and private services demand a high level of interagency coordination and cooperation for effective service delivery to ensure that veterans and their families do not fall through the cracks and to avoid unnecessary cost-shifting from federal to state and local public assistance programs; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that current statutory language establishing the Board of Veterans' Affairs as the lead agency for veterans' affairs dates back to 1919 and that although the Board's duties and responsibilities have consistently evolved, statutory language has not kept pace; and

WHEREAS, the Board hires and supervises its own classified employees, who make up the Montana Veterans' Affairs Division, but the Board does not have rulemaking authority to implement programs; and

WHEREAS, the Board is administratively attached to the Department of Military Affairs, which has greatly assisted veterans and supported the Board but has no statutory authority over veterans' affairs; and

WHEREAS, a legislative performance audit requested by the Interim Committee revealed that although the Montana Veterans' Affairs Division is to be commended for doing a great job with limited resources and limited statutory guidance, it also revealed that new management tools and updated information management systems are needed to provide more consistency and to track and manage staff workload; and

WHEREAS, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs spent about $175 million in Montana during fiscal year 2000, which ranked Montana 37th nationwide in per capita expenditures by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs on veterans; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that a statutory restructuring of powers, duties, and responsibilities for state veterans' affairs programs is essential, not only to address inadvertent statutory shortfalls and elevate the profile of state veterans' affairs, but also to better integrate benefit claims with human services programs so that eligible veterans and family members receive the federal compensation, benefits, and care that they have earned in self-sacrificing service in the armed forces of the United States of America."

Saving Clause: Section 4, Ch. 601, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 5, Ch. 601, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Revenue from this fee must be forwarded by the respective county treasurers to the state treasurer for deposit in the general fund. The department shall pay an amount equal to 25 cents from each motor vehicle registration fee from the general fund to the pension trust fund for payment of supplemental benefits provided for in 19-6-709"; in (4) deleted former last sentence that read: "Revenue from this fee must be deposited as provided in subsection (5)"; inserted (6) concerning 25 cent fee for transportation of senior citizens and persons with disabilities; at end of (8) substituted "this section" for "subsections (1) and (5) of this section"; inserted (9) concerning deposit in general fund; and made minor changes in style. 1997 Amendments: Chapter 72 in (1)(i), after "jurisdictions", deleted "and registered"; at end of (4) inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

Chapter 532 in (5), in third sentence after "department shall", substituted "pay an amount equal to" for "distribute", before "motor" substituted "each" for "the", and after "registration fee" inserted "from the general fund to the pension trust fund". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 81 at end of (7), after "city", inserted "or special district, as defined in 18-8-202"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 6, 1995.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 81, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature has specifically exempted vehicles owned by special districts from various vehicle fees because it considers the use of taxpayer money to pay taxes to other tax entities to be counter to good government; and

WHEREAS, a private business that competes with governmental entities is required to pay fees that the governmental entity does not have to pay, yet when comparing costs of services provided by government and by private business, this consideration is often not factored into the equation.

THEREFORE, the Legislature recognizes the costs and consequences of this situation and encourages all parties, when comparing private versus government costs, to consider costs that are incurred by private business but not by government."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 575 in (1)(i) and (5) inserted "except trailers and semitrailers registered in other jurisdictions and registered through a proportional registration agreement". Amendment effective January 1, 1994.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 567 in (5) increased fee from $5.25 to $5.50 (increase did not become effective pursuant to sec. 5, Ch. 567) and inserted fourth sentence requiring Department to distribute 25 cents from motor vehicle registration fee for payment of supplemental benefits provided in 19-6-709. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 735 in (5) reduced fee from $5.25 to $5 (reduction did not become effective pursuant to sec. 5, Ch. 567) and deleted former third sentence that read: "The department of justice shall distribute 25 cents from each fee collected to the highway patrol retirement fund". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Coordination Instruction: Section 5, Ch. 567, L. 1991, a coordination section, amended 61-3-321(5) and provided: "If Senate Bill No. 192 is passed and approved [approved May 1, 1991, as Ch. 735], the motor vehicle registration fee is $5.25, and 25 cents must be distributed to fund the supplemental benefits provided for in [section 1] [19-6-709]."

Contingent Termination — Disposition of Funds: Section 7, Ch. 567, L. 1991, provided: "(1) The provisions of [sections 1 through 6] [19-6-709 and amendments to 17-7-502 and 61-3-321] terminate upon the death of the last recipient eligible under [section 1(2)] [19-6-709(2)] for the supplemental benefit provided by [section 1] [19-6-709].

(2) Money collected for the purposes of the supplemental payment under [section 1] [19-6-709] that remains in the account, meaning the highway patrol officers' retirement pension trust fund, upon termination of [sections 1 through 6] [19-6-709 and amendments to 17-7-502 and 61-3-321] must be used to amortize unfunded liabilities of the account.

The sentence in 61-3-321(5) concerning disposition of 25 cents for supplemental benefits is the language that terminates upon occurrence of contingency. This language was deleted by Ch. 574, L. 2001, so that the contingent termination is meaningless. The funding for the supplemental payment under 19-6-709 is contained in sec. 3, Ch. 574, L. 2001 (15-1-122).

1989 Amendments — Composite: Chapter 398 near middle of (5) substituted reference to general fund for reference to motor vehicle recording account of the state special revenue fund. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 627 in (5), in first sentence, increased additional fee from $3 to $3.25 and inserted third sentence providing that Department distribute 25 cents of each fee to the highway patrol retirement fund; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 654 inserted (6) regarding a $2 fee for each set of new number plates; in (8), after "registration fees", inserted "or new number plate fees"; corrected internal reference; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

Chapter 535 raised the fee in subsection (5) from $3 to $5 to make fees for certain documents uniform among motor vehicles, boats, and snowmobiles. Chapter 627 increased the $3 fee to $3.25, the increased amount of 25 cents to be used to fund the highway patrol retirement fund. Both the Ch. 535 and Ch. 627 increases were codified to reflect the intent of each bill, thus raising the fee from $3 to $5.25.

Appropriation: Section 6, Ch. 654, L. 1989, provided an appropriation to the Departments of Institutions (now Corrections) and Justice for purposes of implementing issuance of new motor vehicle number plates. See Session Law for text of appropriation.

Case Notes

Compelling Issuance of License: The duty of the County Treasurer to issue licenses is ministerial and not discretionary. The Treasurer may be compelled by mandamus to issue licenses for logging trailers upon tender of the fee per vehicle. If an applicant's operations did not entitle him to the special logging fee, the applicant would be subject to penalty for operating vehicles without proper license. State ex rel. Sharp v. Cross, 123 M 261, 211 P2d 760 (1949).

Attorney General's Opinions

Transfer of License Plates to Unregistered Vehicle — Vehicle Registration Fees to Be Paid: A conflict arose between the codified version of this section and the version amended in Ch. 596, L. 2005, raising a question whether vehicle registration fees must be paid if the vehicle to which license plates are transferred is not currently registered. The Attorney General invoked 1-11-103 to resolve the inconsistency and to give effect to the amendments in Ch. 596, concluding that the coordination section in Ch. 596 prescribed that all registration fees imposed under this section, as amended, must be paid if the vehicle to which license plates are transferred is not currently registered. (See 2007 amendment.) 51 A.G. Op. 14 (2006).

Imposition Fee on Military Personnel — Nonpayment in Home State: Only the fees required by this section that are essential to the functioning of the state's registration laws can be imposed upon military personnel serving on active duty at a military installation in Montana. That military personnel have not paid any taxes or licensing fees in their home state is of no consequence. 39 A.G. Op. 46 (1982).

Registration Fee Applicable Without License Fee: The registration fee imposed by this section can be applied without the license fee of 61-3-533 (now repealed). 39 A.G. Op. 46 (1982).

Fees Due Regardless Whether Applicant Has Previously Paid for His License Plates During Current Year: Upon a transfer of title and license plates to a newly acquired vehicle, the County Treasurer must collect from the applicant the registration fees provided for in this section. 36 A.G. Op. 27 (1975).
